and Financial Interests of the Middle West

Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the

10 CENTS A COPY

J. A. Bunnell

John A. Bunnell of the provision firm of Hately Bros., was unanimously nominated for president of the Chicago Board of Trade at a caucus held in the visitors' room of the exchange, Tuesday afternoon. J. C. F. Merrill was nominated for second vice-president to succeed James Bradley, who becomes first vice-president.

Mr. Bunnell, as first vice-president for last year, was regarded as the logical candidate, and it is expected there will be no opposition this year for the presidency, although there may be several contests for the directory. The election will take place Monday.

A New State Bank for Salina

Salina (Kan.) is to have a new state bank, the Traders' State, with a capital stock of $35,000. It will open some time this month. This will be the fourth bank for Salina. The officers of the new bank are: H. C. Smithers, president; H. J. Stover, cashier; W. F. Grosser, vice-president, and B. E. Smithers, a son of the president, assistant cashier.

First National of Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio, December 27.—The First National will open to-morrow in its new building. From 9 until 12 o'clock this morning there was a procession of clerks, porters and guards from the old building to the new one on Euclid Avenue, and during that time $33,000,000 in coin, bank notes, securities, and other valuables was transferred from the old vaults to the new. The new home complete will cost upward of $1,000,000.

Increase Capitals

Superintendent Clark Williams, of the State Banking Department, has authorized the German-American Bank of Buffalo to increase its capital stock from $200,000 to $300,000.

An application has been received from the Broadway Bank of Brooklyn to increase its capital stock from $150,000 to $200,000.

Deposits at their Zenith

While Chicago loans are up—most of the big banks are well loaned. Deposits also are higher. Several Chicago institutions are at their zenith in the matter of deposits.

Live Stock Exchange National

The volume of business for the year 1908 at the Live Stock Exchange National of this city exceeded one billion two hundred million dollars. Its surplus and profits now amount to over four hundred thousand dollars.

H. C. Street

Henry Charles Street, for twenty-seven years an employee of the First National of this city, died Monday at his home in Highland Park. He was a brother of R. J. Street, who has just retired from the same financial institution after forty-three years of service.

FESTUS J. WADE, A DUAL PRESIDENT

Mr. Wade, easily a national character, has become a two times bank president by his election to that chair in the new Mercantile National, of St. Louis, while holding the same position in the great Mercantile Trust of the same city. Mr. Wade always is in demand as a speaker at banker gatherings, and has rendered important services upon the Monetary Commission.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE Comptroller of the Currency has given this pledge that the six Pittsburgh banks which bribed the city council shall make good by returning the $176,000 thus paid. The two bankers already arrested are out on $15,000 bail each.

THE ordinance which cost the banks so heavily named the six banks city depositaries, each to have its share of the city money, at 2½ per cent.

RICHARD J. STREET, one of the department managers of the First National, of this city, who retired on Wednesday last, had been connected with the institution for forty-three years. He started as a messenger in 1865 and gradually rose, with the upbuilding of the institution, to the position of cashier and finally to that of a department manager. He was born in Hamilton, Ontario, and entered business there as a clerk in an insurance office when 14 years of age. He came to Chicago immediately following the civil war and at once obtained work with the institution from which he has retired. His long service and age, 63 years, entitle him to a life pension at half pay.

THE Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Clinton, Ia., uses as a strong card the statement that it "is the largest bank in Clinton county, and makes a specialty of collections and bank accounts."

MONEY is so plentiful in South Dakota that Cashier Larson, of the First National of Egan, reports farm loans going at 5 per cent plus a small commission.

THE Hibernia Rabbit, one of the best of the purely house organs, printed by the Hibernia Bank and Trust Co., of New Orleans, is out with its Christmas number in a new dress and new cover. As a house organ it is O. K. but when a house organ by false pretenses gets into the second-class mails to save postage and solicits advertising support from other banks to help pay the publishing bank's losses, it begins to go wrong. The Rabbit will do well not to follow in the footsteps of a few we could mention.

SECRETARY KAUFFMAN of the Washington Association celebrated Christmas by getting out four "warning" cards in one mail.

SECRETARY KEYSER has posted a reward for a moving picture showman who, when not turning the bioscope crank, amuses himself with cashing small checks.

THE First National of Towner, N. D., publishes its "policy" along with its statements, showing a growth from $2,404 in deposits November 9, 1905 to $124,926 on November 27, 1908. The next paragraph gives the policy which has built up the business.

OUR policy is to treat depositors with equal courtesy and respect, regardless of the size of the account. Safety to depositors is the watchword. Knowing that the banking laws are framed so as to give the greatest possible security to depositors, we always refuse to do those things which the law does not permit us to do, even tho it means diminished profits for the bank. Believing that banks are public service institutions we aim to conduct the business for the benefit of the public. We would rather do a little for all than do much for a few. As promptness is expected from a bank in discharging its obligations to the depositor, we also expect the same from those who owe the bank. In making loans we naturally favor those who have always met their obligations promptly in the past.—First National, Towner, N. D.

MESSRS. HORNBLLOWER & WEEKS, of 152 Monroe St., Chicago, are placing lumber bonds "to net 6 per cent" which looks good to the careful investor who isn't satisfied to divide the income with a trust company.

THE Stumpf and Hay, desk edition, bank directory is out and Wm. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, is sending them out in quantities "just as a reminder of our friendship."

JAMES B. PIKE is the new assistant cashier at the Hibernia Trust, New Orleans.

"REALIZING that it is impossible to have a personal talk with all, or even a greater part of the people of Oshkosh and vicinity, we take this means of calling your attention to the value of an account with The Old National Bank of Oshkosh. Perhaps you already have a bank account, but do not let it keep you from reading these pages, for it is our aim to explain some points of the banking business that are not well understood by the average person. If you have no banking connections, we will try to show their value to you and point out a way in which you may take advantage of our services."

THE booklet from which the above is taken is a good one and sample can be had from the bank direct.

MAX MEHL, of Fort Worth, Texas, is the man who buys rare coins. He is the observing teller's friend. Mehl's Numismatic monthly is out in a holly leaf cover for January and every teller should get one. A Chicago bank clerk picked up rare coins in one day on which he collected more than fifty dollars in premiums.

CHICAGO has a Numismatic Club which meets semimonthly. The officers are: President, V. M. Brand; vice-president, F. Elmo Simpson; secretary, Ben G. Green; treasurer, W. F. Dunham; censor, T. E. Leon; librarian, Chester Dunham; curator, M. P. Carey; executive board: J. B. Holmes, W. F. Dunham, and Dr. F. B. Merrill.

A TRADE dollar of 1884 sold the other day for $286. Among the rare and valuable pieces are the 1802 half dime, the 1804 San Francisco dime, the quarters of 1823 and 1827, the 1838 New Orleans half dollar, several varieties of the 1796 and 1797 half dollars and 1833 half dollar with plain edge. Of the dollars rarest is the 1804, dollars of 1836, 1838 and 1839, 1866 without motto, are very valuable.

SECRETARY RINAMAN, of the Illinois Association, is sending out notices of reductions in time lock cleaning expenses by a responsible company which, under a contract, agrees to clean and guarantee timers, two to four movements, for $9.00 per annum, and single or double automatics for $2.50 each, with no charge made for small or minor automatics or bolt-throwing devices. The contract provides that they will make all repairs and substitute broken parts when necessary, free of charge, which is equivalent to keeping the locks and automatics in condition practically as good as new so long as these contracts are in force.

THE average price now paid by the banks in Illinois is $12.65, against which, $9 is a great saving. Furthermore—they agree to apply this rate from October twentieth, 1908, and rebate any amount in excess of these rates paid by members since that time upon their entering into a new five-year contract under this schedule of rates.

M R. RINAMAN says: "The protective feature of the association will hereafter be a prominent one, and a sum of money has been set aside for the use of that committee in furthering and safeguarding the interests of members. The extent and scope of the work by this committee will be limited only by the revenue derived from commissions on surety bonds and burglary insurance premiums received from members—hence it is in your own interest that this patronage is solicited. And why should you not do so when we offer you the best indemnity to be had at the lowest rate obtainable?"

THERE is talk that Wisconsin is going to get into the paid secretary game and not remain passive any longer. Overtures are being made to George D. Bartlett of Stanley, who has sold his ten year old bank. Mr. Bartlett is the genius who installed the group system in Wisconsin and created her insurance department. He should have first chance at the helm.

CASHIER.

The First National of Tampa

The First National of Tampa, one of the pioneer and leading financial institutions of South Florida, began the new year by opening a savings department. This new departure has been occasioned by the persistent demand for it, and the officers expect a large patronage.

End of the Year Side Lights on Banking

The Pittsburgh Dispatch, a powerful paper, has put in a plea for the banking and other boodlers of its household. The revelations are astounding. It works evil for a city and a state to be too one-sided in politics. Boodle and bargaining get the offices and the fitness of the candidates does not decide the election. The Dispatch says: "But it may not be amiss nor violate any propriety to urge the district attorney to act with all possible promptitude in bringing the informations before the grand jury. No right of the defense should be disregarded nor any deprivation of necessary time visited upon the prosecution. The popular demand is reasonable and takes into consideration all the unavoidable delays. But the scandal has a magnitude that permits no ordinary dragging in its treatment. The defendants are entitled to a speedy acquittal if their innocence appears and this commonwealth can as fairly demand commensurate punishment if their guilt be established. Not only has the affair naturally caused intense feeling in Pittsburgh, but the press of other cities is neither charitable nor decorous in its comment. A peculiar jackal snapping of the jaws is noticeable in some outside journals, inspired apparently by envy of the enormous resources of this region, or in some particular instances by a disposition to find solace for their own city scandals in that which has befallen Pittsburgh."

Bankers Head the List

When the great Pittsburgh boodle trials were called in court the bankers, as a recognition of past standing, were called first by the judge.

The first case taken up was that of W. W. Ramsey and A. A. Vilsack, former president and cashier of the German National. But one witness, National Bank Examiner Nesbit was examined, and by his testimony it was shown that Captain John Klein, a councilman, had approached the bankers about making the bank a city depository and that $17,500 had later disappeared from the bank in a sensational and interesting manner.

Sitting with Magistrate Brady were Mayor Guthrie and Director of Public Safety Lang. The courtroom was filled almost to suffocation with prominent men in business and political circles of Pittsburgh.

Bank Examiner Nesbit said that he had visited the German National last Wednesday for the purpose of making an examination. He completed his work Saturday morning. In the meantime, he found a note for $17,500, and the features of this note, he said, aroused his suspicions.

How $17,500 Disappeared

He called Cashier Vilsack into a private room and asked him about the matter. At first Vilsack denied it was business of the bank, saying it was purely a personal matter between his brother and himself. Examiner Nesbit told him he did not believe that, and asked him again for an explanation, threatening to use his authority if an explanation was not forthcoming. Finally Vilsack, he said, admitted the money was used to secure city deposits and that the $17,500 had been paid to a councilman.

Then the bank examiner told a remarkable story as to the manner in which the $17,500 disappeared from the bank. According to Examiner Nesbit, Klein approached Cashier Vilsack and said the German National would be made a city depository if the bank was willing to do as other banks had done. Vilsack conferred with President Ramsey, of the bank, and later went to the reserve vault and, taking out the money, placed it on a table in one of the rooms of the institution. At this time Councilman Klein and a companion were in the bank. Some time later Vilsack and Ramsey went to the room and the money was gone. Klein and his companion had also left the bank.

Examiner Nesbit also said he talked with President Ramsey concerning the transaction and that Ramsey had first denied it was banking business, but later told the same story as had Vilsack.

Both Bankers Held for Court

He said he realized the entire affair had been carried through without the knowledge of the directors of the German National, and on Saturday afternoon called a meeting of the directors, at which he explained the matter. Vilsack and Ramsey, he said, admitted that his story was true. The directors immediately requested both president and cashier to resign and filled their positions. Monday evening they were arrested along with Klein and six other councilmen.

This ended the case of Vilsack and Ramsey, and they were held for court trial under $14,000 bail.

Situation at Washington

Present indications are that the bill for the reform of the administrative features of the national banking system will be so whittled and pruned before it reaches Congress that it will merely serve to correct a very few minor defects in the existing control of the Comptroller of the Currency over the national banks. The measure has been placed in the hands of officials of the Treasury department with instructions to prepare a private draft of the new bill for transmission to the finance committee of the senate or, what is the same thing, to the monetary commission at the reassembling of Congress after the holidays.

Injunctions of secrecy have been laid upon those who have the bill in charge so that they are unwilling to express themselves as to the progress or nature of the work. It is authoritatively learned, however, that practically all of the important reforms that were urged by the officials of the Treasury last summer in the special memorandum which was made up for the subcommittee of the monetary commission which had the question of administrative changes in charge have been eliminated and that instructions have been issued not to touch upon them in the measure which is being drafted.

What the Plan Contemplates

The present program is to have the bill pass through the hands of Secretary Cortelyou for his approval after it has left the Comptroller's office. Mr. Cortelyou, however, has almost uniformly adopted the policy of not recommending to Congress any specific measure considering that the ill success experienced by predecessors who have followed that plan indicates that the method is not wise when actual progress is desired. He is understood to think that the department has done all it can when it has called attention to conditions needing correction and on request has prepared bills covering the ground with which it is required by Congressional leaders to deal.

It is probable that this is all that will be done in the present instance. The bill will undoubtedly have been fully disposed of by the Treasury people before the close of the Christmas holidays. It will then, according to the present expectations, be necessary for the Monetary Commission leaders to get it approved by the bankers before going further. The general belief is that any more rigid control of banks that may be sought by the Comptroller's office will have to be attained through the use of substantially the present provisions of law.

As to Postal Savings Banks

L. T. Richmond, banker at Albia, Iowa, contributes these thoughts upon the mooted subject of postal savings banks: "Of all the money deposited in savings banks in the United Kingdom of Great Britain seven-tenths of the same was in postal savings banks. In Canada two-thirds of all the savings deposits are in the postal savings banks. Now on the above basis the postal savings would take seven-tenths or $210,000,000 out of our banks if it affected all banks alike—but this is probably too large a per cent. It would undoubtedly affect the deposits of savings banks and state banks about alike in Iowa, for there is very little difference and we all know as a matter of experience that all our state and national banks carry savings deposits or class of deposits that would be attracted by the postal savings bank. Suppose for the sake of being conservative the postal savings scheme would only take one-third of our deposits, and most savings and state banks in Iowa may feel thankful if it does not take more than that, one-third or $100,000,000 of deposits taken out of the Iowa banks, locked up in government vaults, or invested in government, state and municipal bonds, placed beyond the reach of the people, the creditor and the assessor. What for? That it may be secured to the owner.

The Evasion of Taxation

"Now I do not want to be understood as saying that all the money deposited in postal savings banks would be placed there to evade execution and taxation, but I do say that a certain per cent of it would be placed there for that purpose—and that the principle is wrong.

"Now, the average rate of bank interest in Iowa, I will say, from experience, is about seven per cent. If you reduce the available funds by one-third you necessarily increase the cost of the remaining two-thirds to the borrower one-third—or make the average rate to the borrower nine and one-third per cent.

"Why should we do this? It won't do to say that the people endorse the postal savings bank because of Mr. Taft's election any more than it will to say the people repudiated guaranty of bank deposits by reason of Bryan's defeat. These were not the contrasting issues. Who would vote in favor of a postal savings bank which at the most could only secure from one-half to two-thirds of the deposits and do this by placing them out of the reach of the people, by relieving them from taxation, making them a preferred lien over the other half and putting them out of the reach of honest legitimate creditors, as against a safe, sound, guaranty of deposit plan that would keep all the money of each community in the banks there for the benefit of all the people, subject to execution for honest debts and liable to taxation. Now we are all interested alike in this proposition and our interests are mutual.

"Every farmer, business, professional, and laboring man in Iowa should write his representative in Congress to vote against the postal savings bank scheme in all its forms and phases. We don't need it."

This Bank has been in continuous existence since 1810—nearly one hundred years. It has always given effective service to its clients and has never failed in their protection. Conservatively managed banks and persons having business in Pittsburgh are cordially invited to open accounts.

Private Banks

The Michigan Banker says in regard to private banks: "Of great importance is the question of a bill relative to private banking. Practically all of the more important states in the Union have by legislation refused to permit the private banker to use the word 'Banking,' 'Banker' or 'Savings,' etc. A provision of this kind could, we are sure, have been inserted in the new constitution and determined effort could pass in the legislature. Of course, many private bankers are members of the Michigan Bankers Association, but the question as to this legislation should be fought out in the association and it is not improbable that an agreement could be reached which would solve the whole matter."

Transactions with the Bank

Ex-State Treasurer Glazier's attorney at the opening of court Thursday, advanced a new reason why all records of his insolvent Chelsea bank should be excluded and not used against him in his trial on the indictment for misappropriating state funds.

It was that Chelsea, being in the Washtenaw circuit, any crime that the books of the bank might show he committed was triable only in that circuit. And a crime committed in Chelsea could not be proven where the intent was to use the proof to convict him of another crime in the Lansing circuit where the state treasury is located.

Judge Wiest overruled the objection.

The First State Bank of Petoskey

Declares Quarterly Dividend

At a special meeting held on December 22d the board of directors of the First National Bank of Englewood, this city, declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent payable to stockholders of record on December 31, 1908. This makes a total of 10 per cent paid by the bank to its stockholders during the past year, and it is stated that an even larger per cent than this has been carried to undivided profits. The bank's capital is $150,000.00, surplus $100,000.00, and undivided profits $50,000.00. Among Chicago bankers, and bankers in general throughout the country, the First National Bank of Englewood enjoys an excellent reputation because of its earning power, stability, and progressiveness. The bank's new building and its Manganese Steel Safe Deposit Vaults have attracted large numbers of out-of-town visitors since their formal opening on March 1st. Following a custom established two years ago, the First National Bank of Englewood this year remembered each of its twenty-three employees with ten-dollar gold pieces as Christmas tokens.

The Drexel State Bank

Seventy-five persons in the Drexel State Bank building, Oakwood boulevard and Cottage Grove Avenue, this city, were thrown into a scare bordering on a panic when they learned that fire, which had started in the bank, had spread to the basement and for a time threatened to destroy the structure, which is four stories in height. Fifty of the persons in the building were carried down to the street in the elevator, the operator, John Weatherspoon, a negro, braving the smoke in making six trips to the upper floors to bring down the frightened people, most of them young women. The fire, which caused a loss of $5,000, started from crossed electric wires in the ceiling of the bank. The bank was not damaged from fire other than a small damage to the ceiling and the tearing up of the floor by firemen to trace the flames.

Ohio Banking News

The supreme court made an important ruling, which will be of vast interest to the banking circles of the state. The decision is rendered in the case of Charles G. Blake against the Hamilton Dime Savings Bank, of Hamilton, Ohio, and involves the payment of a check after its payment was ordered stopped.

The plaintiff in error purchased a horse from Charles Werbel, and in payment gave a check for $275, payable at the Franklin Bank. A short time after he came in possession of the animal he found that it was not as represented, as he alleges in his petition, and attempted to stop the payment by notifying the bank upon which it was drawn. It appears, however, that Werbel deposited the check in another bank, and it was credited to his account. Blake refused to allow the payment and suit was brought. The supreme court, in passing judgment, which is an affirmation of the courts below, hands out the following syllabus:

"1. The certificate by a bank that a check is good is equivalent to acceptance, and raises an implication that it is drawn upon sufficient funds in the hands of the drawee; that they have been set apart for its satisfaction, and that they shall be so applied whenever the check is presented for payment.

"2. The transfer of a certified check is an assignment of money to meet it, and the bank making the certification is liable therefor to the holder.

"3. The object of certifying a check is to enable a holder to use it as money. The drawer or indorser of a certified check cannot, after its delivery, revoke it or stop payment upon it by notice to the drawee not to pay, and a bank that has received a certified check for deposit and has credited the depositor with the amount of it, is a bona fide holder and may enforce payment of it, notwithstanding it may, before payment to the depositor, have received notice that the check was fraudulently obtained by the depositor."

"The Stroke Oar"

Fresh from the press of the Outing Publishing Co., publishers of the famed "Outing" magazine comes the liveliest college boy story of the year. Ralph D. Caine has written "The Stroke Oar" and it is predicted that it will do for America what "Tom Brown at Oxford" did for England. It is a corking college yarn told in a spirited manner by a man who is master of his special field. The action and dash of the book keep the reader constantly on edge—not a dull or superfluous page in the whole tale. The story part hinges on a certain rivalry between the captain and stroke oar of the Yale crew. At a most inopportune moment the stroke oar is practically kidnapped, and by force of circumstances, carried thousands of miles away. To follow him in his adventure until he at last sets foot in New Haven again, only a few days before the great race, to see how he gets back on the crew, and wins the day—there is enough for any reader. You are "swept away" by the thrilling description of the Yale-Harvard boat race.

The Calcasieu National's policy from its first inception was to aid business men and developers as far as consistent and until this time there has been no deviation from its original policy, and especially during the past year has it been of incalculable benefit to the community. The November 27th statement showed that with capital, $150,000, it had surplus and profits, $161,319; deposits, $1,724,430, and total resources, $2,264,838. The officers are: H. C. ### Most Beautiful Coins Since Greece Made Money

Just to look at the remarkable bas-relief of the eagle in pajamas that appears on the gold coins of the vintage of 1907-08 you would never suspect that he was the most beautiful bird that ever wore feathers since the time of ancient Greece. Even a close inspection of the face of the mild-looking lady on the front of the coins, who, in a Merry Widow set of feathers, is masquerading as an Indian, fails to reveal that she is the most beautiful woman since the time of ancient Greece. The general appearance of the gold coins, which look more like brass metal checks for soda water than they do like real money, does not impress you with the idea that they are the most beautiful coins since the days of ancient Greece.

But they are. Ugly as they look, we know that in reality they are radiantly beautiful. For we have for this the word and assurance of the greatest art critic the world has ever seen. We have the assurance of the one man who knows all things whether they are so or not, and who never fails to tell you about them. And if in your benighted ignorance you dare to dispute his word, you are anathema maranatha, Ananias No. 1743, and fit only to be cast into outer darkness.—Baltimore Sun.

By J. IRVING COOPER

The seventy-second annual meeting of the Girard Trust Company, of Philadelphia, was held last week. Profits of the company for the fiscal year just closed are understood to have approximated $910,000, or about 36 4-10 per cent on the capital stock. These profits are slightly under those of the record-breaking previous year, when about 40 per cent was earned on capital.

During the year the company charged off $600,000 on account of construction of the new building, thus completing the full payment for the structure, all of which has been paid out of current earnings, so that the property stands to-day at the cost of the ground, without any charge for the building, the cost of which was about $1,500,000.

The surplus and undivided profit item of the company now totals $1,390,000, against $1,260,000 last year, notwithstanding the charging off for building account.

Group One Banquet February 5th

The annual banquet of Group One, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, will take place February 5th at the Bellevue-Stratford. The cost will be $1.50 per plate.

Distributed Gold Pieces

Several of the big financial institutions of Philadelphia distributed gold pieces among their clerks and other employees as Christmas or New Year's remembrances.

The Sixth National

Philadelphia is to have a new bank, to be known as the Sixth National. It will have $500,000 capital and $100,000 surplus. Among the incorporators are: H. G. Peddle, F. A. Boyneburgk, H. Vance Peters, Samuel E. Whan and Geo. Y. Schook.

John B. Stetson Company Dividends

The John B. Stetson Co., of Philadelphia, has declared the regular semiannual dividend of 4 per cent on its preferred stock and a dividend of 15 per cent on its common stock, payable January 15th. Books close January 9th and reopen January 16th.

The Philadelphia National

David S. Ludlum, assistant cashier of the Philadelphia National, has resigned his position and will identify himself with mercantile interests.

The Central National

The Central National of Philadelphia opened for business Monday in its new quarters in the Lafayette building, Fifth and Chestnut streets.

The Importers and Traders Bank

Plans for the Importers & Traders Bank of Philadelphia, which it was proposed to locate at Second and Walnut streets, are likely to be abandoned. Some of the leading interests in the enterprise originally have withdrawn their support, and a good many stockholders favor a liquidation of the capital paid in and a giving up of the project.

Philadelphia Trust Companies

Recent reports of the Philadelphia trust companies to the State Banking Commissioner show to what extent these institutions have taken advantage of the privilege conferred by the last legislature, permitting the purchase of commercial paper. Practically all of the purchases of "paper" were made by the newer institutions. On November 27th last these institutions had invested in mercantile paper to the extent of $3,901,901, of which almost one-third was held by the Central Trust Company, its investment in this department totaling $1,119,387.

This encroachment on what has always been considered the field of the national banks has not yet been entertained by the largest trust companies, however, such old-time institutions as the Girard, Fidelity, Provident, Pennsylvania Company, Commercial, Equitable, Commonwealth and Guarantee companies still requiring collateral for all loans.

It is interesting to note that while the legislative act gave the trust companies the right to purchase commercial paper at a discount, the law prohibits them from discounting commercial paper. This distinction, without any apparent difference, is enabled by prohibiting the companies from crediting the profit in advance (as is the custom with national banks in respect to discounts), and requiring them to carry the notes at the face value until paid.

Only One Exception

Excepting only the National City Bank, of New York, which has just moved into its new quarters, representing an investment of $5,765,000, The Girard Trust Company, of Philadelphia, occupies the most costly home of any financial institution in the country.

Names Deposits' Securities

Although no additional deposits of public funds in national banks are contemplated, Secretary Cortelyou last Thursday, in compliance with the law of March 4, 1907, announced the classes of securities that would be accepted in the event of such deposits being made. They are as follows:

United States, Philippine, Porto Rico, and District of Columbia bonds at par; bonds of Hawaii territory at 90 per cent and at the option of the Secretary of the Treasury, Philippine Railway company bonds, and those of states, municipalities, and high grade railroads, such as are legal investments for savings banks in New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, or New Jersey, at 90 per cent of their par value.

For the initial or first deposit United States bonds are required. No additional deposits are, however, now in contemplation.

The New Gold Coins

The matter with the coinage, as it is now being run out of the mints, is that it suffers from a kind of sage-brush amendment. It is not the coinage which Saint Gaudens contemplated. It is a Roosevelt Saint Gaudens coinage, further complicated by intervention of congress prompted by expediency rather than considerations of art. The Saint Gaudens design is sunken in the coins; but Saint Gaudens created the decoration with the understanding that it would be produced in cameo. —Providence Journal.

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Twin City banking interests and speculation is centered just now in the start made to form a large state bank in Minneapolis to act as correspondent for the state banks of Minnesota. C. D. Griffith, of Sleepy Eye, former president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, is the principal figure to date. At the initial meeting fifty state bankers were present. Mr. Griffith was made chairman and R. W. Putman, of Red Wing, was secretary. Authority was voted to call another meeting, when the progress in stock subscription will be announced. It was said after the meeting that $12,000,000 deposits were insured on the start. The promoters of the big bank say that they are not fighting the national banks nor the Minnesota Bankers Association; they simply want a big bank that will look after the interests of the state banks the way the government looks after the national banks. J. M. Putman, president of the Jackson County State Bank at Lakefield, said at the close of the meeting: "Let it be made clear that we are not fighting the national banks."

"The government looks after the national banks and places its money with them. The state does nothing for the state banks. We want some institution to look after the state banks, and there are 616 of them in Minnesota, as the government looks after national institutions. We are looking into the future and preparing against any possible panic. It is a case of tit for tat, you might say. We shall do our business with the central bank and we expect it to look after us."

Among those present were R. M. Putman, Lakefield; R. B. Knuckly, Luverne; O. J. Clark, Blue Earth; C. W. Gress, Cannon Falls; J. C. E. Holmes, Kenyon; I. J. Ponsford, Watertown; F. A. Samels, Lakefield; K. S. Chase, Faribault; C. J. Carlson, Cokato; C. E. Oaklev, Buffalo; M. C. Tift, Long Prairie; J. A. Peterson, Cokato; A. O'Brien, Graceville; J. H. Catlin, Cottonwood; R. A. Cooper, Redwood Falls; Neil Finch, Tracy; W. J. Parson, Cyrus; H. N. Stabeck, Renville; L. F. Holton, Grand Rapids, and W. A. Hubbard, Lake City.

Minneapolis Bonds

Bonds of the city of Minneapolis amounting to $622,000 have been sold at $18.078 premium. A. B. Leach and E. H. Rollins & Company, of Chicago, bought $100,000 fire department bonds, $156,000 school bonds, and $250,000 sewer bonds at premiums of $3.040, $4.789 and $7.675. The W. R. Compton Bond & Investment Company, of St. Louis, bought $116,200 voting machine bonds at $2.573 premium. Bonds to the amount of $67,000 recently sold at $4.915 premium to the Wells-Dickey Company of Minneapolis.

The Mechanics National of New York has asked the St. Paul comptroller to make good a bond coupon of $5.25 due October 24, 1865. The coupon was presented to the bank by Charles Mackubin, whose father was of the firm of Mackubin & Edgerton, which had disposed of many St. Paul bonds. The coupon was found in the papers of the senior Mackubin.

Minneapolis Visitor

Charles W. Folds, of Charles Hathaway &

Company, Chicago and New York, while in Minneapolis last week said that in his opinion the reorganized Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills Company, limited, will be in operation by March 1st. It is proposed to form a company to operate the property of the parent company, to be financed mainly in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis Bank Clearings

The Minneapolis bank clearings crossed the billion dollar mark on December 19th, although it was feared for various reasons, including the absorption of two large banks, that they would fall below the mark. The total last year was $1,145,000,000. With the same gait maintained as in the previous nine months of 1908 it is expected that the total this year will be at least $1,064,758,873. The figures up to and including December 20th were $1,030,003,898.

Another Ten Per Cent Dividend

J. D. Shearer, receiver for the Minnesota Title Insurance & Trust Co., has announced another 10 per cent dividend. In a short time he expects to pay a 50 per cent dividend to title policy claimants. The last 10 per cent dividend to depositors was paid April 10th.

The Swedish American Savings Bank

The Swedish American Savings Bank has moved back from the Northwestern National building to the Swedish American National Bank. When the latter institution was taken over by the Northwestern National the savings bank was moved over, too, but as it will remain a separate institution it has been taken back to its former banking rooms. President N. O. Werner, who is also president of the Swedish American National, and chairman of the liquidating committee of that institution, remains in charge of the savings bank.

Minnesota Banks

The report of the Comptroller of the Currency following the statements of the 254 Minnesota national banks at the close of business on November 27th, shows them to have gained $4,-636,177. The deposits have increased from $63,-214,020 to $66,809,680. Loans and discounts have increased more than $1,500,000 and the amount of reserves $2,000,000. The banks carried 25.50 per cent of legal reserve.

The Minnesota state banks have grown in one year from 502 to 616. The total resources have grown since December 3, 1907, from $82,009,-362 to $96,974,383. Deposits have jumped from $27,414,256 to 32,013,470.

Forms an Association

The bankers of the Fifth judicial district of North Dakota have organized an association at Valley City. Resolutions were passed condemning postal savings banks on the ground that the plan would result in taking the money of the community, remove taxable property, increase public officials in number, and remove property from due process of law. The officers are: President, W. C. McDowell, of Marion; vice-president, Theodore Torbinson, of Nome; secretary-treasurer, P. R. Sherman, of Courtney.

H. G. Merritt Dead

Horatio G. Merritt, president of the Peoples Bank at Minneapolis, died December 19th. In 1890 he founded the Peoples State Bank at Lakota, N. D. In 1900 he became cashier and manager of the First National at Baraboo, Wis., and in 1904 came to Minneapolis as cashier of the Minnesota National. For two years he has been president of the Peoples. Vice-President C. L. Grandin is expected to succeed Mr. Merritt.

G. B. Ward Dead

G. B. Ward, president of the First National at Alexandria, Minn., is dead. Mr. Ward had been state representative and senator. For thirty-three years he was associated with the First National, twenty-five years as cashier.

Banking Notes

The First State Bank of Pequot, Minn., has been authorized with $10,000 capital. Isaac Hazlett, of Minneapolis, is president and W. H. Cloud, the cashier.

The Farmers & Merchants State of Armour, S. D., has been organized with $10,000 capital. The incorporators are B. W. LaShier, of Armour, W. J. and Minnie Barlow, of Carroll, Iowa.

The International State Bank of International Falls, Minn., is a new institution with $30,000 capital. M. F. Murphy is president and John B. Mooney is cashier.

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, became interested in the amount of capital in Minneapolis banks as compared with cities of its size and has evolved the table given herewith. The examination of the records resulted from the frequent rumors that another bank was to be started in the city. The table is as follows:

|                        | Capital and Surplus. |

A Summary of the Many Excellent Features of the Bank of Belgium

Consul H. Albert Johnson, of Liege, supplies the following report concerning the National Bank of Belgium and its relations to the Government and business public of the Kingdom:

The National Bank of Belgium is an organized stock company, with a capital of 50,000,000 francs ($9,650,000), divided into 50,000 shares of 1,000 francs ($193), which are held by 916 stockholders, among whom are divided the profits realized by the bank, in conformity with certain special provisions. There are only 585 stockholders holding at least 10 shares, and therefore having the right to vote in the general assemblies.

The national bank is located in the city of Brussels. It is managed by a board of directors (conseil d'administration), including a governor appointed by royal decree for a term of five years, and six directors elected by the joint assembly, as it is called, one of whom is subject each year to re-election.

As many as 39 agencies are located at as many places in the Kingdom. With the exception of nine, each one of the agencies is provided with what is known as a "comptoir d'escompte," that is, a sort of committee that supervises all discounting operations. They assume responsibility by affixing their signature in the case of commercial paper, and especially of drafts presented for discount by private individuals at the national bank. In this manner they render signal service to the public at large and at the same time protect the bank against any possible loss. They are compensated for their services by being paid a certain portion of the profits, ordinarily 20 per cent, resulting from discounting operations.

An essential function of the national bank is the emission of bank notes, that constitute effectively the paper currency of the Kingdom, and are payable to the bearer in the standard coin on demand. An issue of bank notes in reality constitutes a loan represented by certificates redeemable at the option of the bearer. Such a loan on the part of the bank constitutes a highly remunerative financial operation, as it is made without interest and is attended by no outlay other than the expenses incident to the manufacture of the notes; no taxes other than that of the Government stamp tax, levied on the note tally or stub, and certain charges in favor of provinces and commissions, and only requires a metallic reserve sufficient to partially guarantee the issue. It is not sufficient that the bearer of a note should possess the certainty that it can be paid, he must possess the absolute certainty that such a note is ready to be redeemed for its full value and without delay whenever such redemption is demanded. Consequently, it is an imperative necessity that the bank should at all times possess the required available circulating coin to meet such an eventuality.

The law does not establish a maximum for the issue of bank notes. Any excess of circulation would be promptly indicated by the presentation for redemption of all superfluous issues.

The practice seems to have been for the past forty years to include in the one-third cash reserve certain foreign securities. This practice possesses three decided advantages, viz: (1) Such securities pay interest; (2) they are convertible into available cash at once if desired; (3) they offer a certain advantageous elasticity; when the bank, for instance, has a surplus of cash on hand foreign securities can be purchased, and when an increase of available cash is needed such securities can be satisfactorily disposed of. In these transactions it is asserted that the bank has never suffered the slightest loss.

The national bank is required to submit its statutory organization to the approval of the Government; consent to the appointment by the King of its governor every five years; permit the right of veto on the part of the Government in connection with its operations; submit to certain exceptional measures, such, for instance, as the publication of its semiannual balance sheet; to foster the development of agencies and establish foreign correspondents.

The bank is not exempt from the ordinary fiscal taxes, such as a license with additional charges in favor of the province and commune, as well as stamp dues on the notes issued. In addition the bank is obliged to assume other special obligations and charges in favor of the Government—that is, it must pay the Government: (1) One-fourth of the profits exceeding 4 per cent of the bank's capital; (2) part of the expenses of the treasury outside the capital; (3) the receipts from discounting operations when the rate is above  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent; (4) one-fourth per cent every six months of the circulation of bank notes in excess of 275,000,000 francs (\$53,075,000); (5) the returns from the investments of available government funds.

The national bank exercises gratuitously the function of financial agent for the Government. It is not allowed: To carry on any industry nor to be interested in industrial affairs; to carry on commerce of any sort, excepting in the matter of gold and silver bullion; to lend or negotiate loans except on precious metals, government securities, or securities guaranteed by the government; to lend money on its own stock or to purchase such stock; to acquire real estate other than that which is required for carrying on its business; to purchase securities without the consent of the Minister of Finances, and in making such purchases the amount expended cannot exceed the value of the paid-up capital; to open accounts current, except on funds actually deposited, without paying interest on deposits and with no acceptance of risk on the part of the bank.

The National Bank affords special facilities in the matter of transferring sums of money from one city to another, and this transfer of funds is performed without charge of any sort, being effected by what is termed "accreditifs." The amount of money transferred by means of these accreditifs in 1905 was something like 3,000,000,000 francs ($579,000,000).

The national bank discounts:

(1) What are known as "Bons du tresor;" that is, short-time government loans, of which class of securities the bank is forbidden to hold at any time more than 20,000,000. (2) Coupon on government securities. (3) Warehouse warrants; that is, certificates of merchandise deposited in legally authorized warehouses; a warrant must be accompanied by an authorization sample of the goods, and the latter must be adequately insured; ordinarily the bank will advance as much as 75 per cent on a warrant drawn up in conformity with the law of the 18th November, 1862, on condition that it is guaranteed by two solvable signatures. (4) Commercial paper; that is, bills of exchange, drafts, etc., the discounting of which is one of the principal functions of the bank.

The total value of the commercial paper discounted in 1906 was $821,313,744, of which $657,358,000 was Belgian paper. Commercial paper refused by the bank amounted to $509,500 during the year. The total number of papers presented for discount was 4,410,492.

Money Due Banks and Bankers

One of the financial fictions of New York banking circles is that New York banks "furnish" the money "to move the crops" etc. Do they? For eight or ten months in the year money from the West and Southwest seeks employment in loans in New York. For the rest of the time it flows the other way. When the Eastern metropolis furnishes the money to move the crops she does it by repaying temporarily the deposits and loans of the inland banks. The fluctuations of the column in the statements showing "money due to banks" is a fair and truthful indication of who "furnishes" the money, and upon occasion recalls it.

It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find in the financial records of this country two bank statements of the New York banks, showing more radical changes than those disclosed by the returns issued by the Comptroller of the Currency as of November 27th last and December 3d a year ago. The greatest change is disclosed in the amount due to national and state banks and bankers; the increase exceeds $570,000,000, which means that on every day during the current year the national banks have received more than $1,500,000 from the Western institutions, whereas last fall the West and South could not withdraw their funds fast enough from the larger depositaries. The amount due from other banks in the whole country has mounted up $326,000,000. Deposits have increased $543,000,000, a figure that tends to modify a loan and discount expansion of $255,000,000. The increase in loans in fact is only $70,000,000 greater than the gain in specie and legal tenders. So comfortable is the monetary situation, not only in the United States, but throughout Europe, that only a mild interest is taken in the day-to-day developments. France is to-day the banker and richest nation in the world. Her people are the most thrifty. Her interest rates are equable and bank failures practically unknown.

Russia and Rudovitz

It seems that the sentiments of Sunday's mass meeting, promoted by the active attorneys of the Russian fugitive, Christian Rudovitz, should not be permitted to go to Washington or to the world as expressing the prevailing sentiments of the intelligent and law-abiding people of Chicago.

The question whether Rudovitz is fugitive from justice or refugee from oppression is not one to be decided by resolutions in mass meeting or by the declamation of orators more intent on tickling the emotions of their hearers than on the weighing of facts.

Up to date the only American upon whom devolved the duty of separating fact from emotion in this case has decided that Rudovitz was guilty of a revolting crime, which in its perpetration involved murder, arson, and robbery. It is no answer to Commissioner Foote's finding to attack him as being "no lawyer." Admission to the bar has never in free countries been a sine qua non for capacity to decide between the verities where men's liberties and lives are at stake—or our laws would provide that only lawyers should sit as jurors in criminal cases.

A mass meeting was scarcely the fitting place to initiate a campaign for the reform of our American system of dealing with extradition treaties—and least of all a mass meeting called to influence public opinion and the authorities in favor of a man who confesses to having voted in a secret conference for the murder of a woman suspected of being a spy.

In Illinois we have hanged men for less, and in the face of mass meetings, too. What would we think if a night rider from Tennessee or a red-handed rioter from Springfield should be able to find sanctuary in Mexico under the plea that he committed or was accessory to a murder because the laws of the United States were tyrannous?

Personally, I feel that my friends, Messrs. Fisher, Calhoun, Bancroft and Hynes and Dr. Hirsch, might have left this case to be disposed of in the regular channels of American justice and international policy. Rudovitz has had the benefit of able legal services before Commissioner Foote, which, it is presumed, will not desert him until his fate is finally passed on in Washington.

When that is settled it will be time enough for all who believe that our forms of procedure in such cases need reforming to get together and work to that end. It is well, however, to scrutinize any reform that finds its heartiest support among the classes who expect to benefit by the relaxation of the rules of law and order laid down in the Ten Commandments.

Whatever may be the sequel of this mingling of American aversion to Russian barbarities with the shrewd tactics of attorneys to break the force of his findings, Commissioner Foote can console himself with the reflection that:

"No man e'er felt the halter draw,

With good opinion of the law."

A trite saying, but very apropos to all such meetings as that of Sunday. S. T.

World Commerce for 1908

The United States can be comforted in that it is not the only country whose exports and imports for 1908 have fallen far below the record.

Of the 25 principal countries of the world whose foreign commerce the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor records month by month and year by year, all but four show a falling off in exports and nearly two-thirds show a falling off in imports.

The Bureau of Statistics presents in its monthly summary of commerce and finance a statement showing the imports and exports of each of the principal countries of the world for that portion of their respective fiscal years available, and compares the imports and exports of the accumulated months with the corresponding months of the preceding year, and with this a statement of the average monthly imports and average monthly exports of each of the countries in question during the latest period for which the respective statements are available.

An examination of this statement shows that in every country for which 1908 figures are available, with the exceptions of Argentina, Spain, Greece, and Sweden, the exports of 1908 fall below those of 1907, while in practically two-thirds of the cases the imports of 1908 also fall below those for a corresponding period of 1907. Taking the full list of the countries in question, but omitting the United States, the average monthly importation of the more than a score of principal countries thus included has fallen from $935,000,000 in 1907 to $885,000,000 in 1908, and the average monthly exportation has fallen from $804,000,000 in 1907 to $739,000,000 in 1908.

It will thus be seen that the falling off of approximately $300,000,000 in imports and perhaps $150,000,000 in exports in the commerce of the United States during the calendar year 1908, is merely part of a general condition which prevailed the world over.

Bankers and the Treasury

The disposition of the treasury portfolio by Mr. Taft is waiting upon results of the Ohio senatorial contest. Burton and C. P. Taft are rivals, at present, and the proffer of the high place to Burton did not take him out of the fight. In consequence it was withdrawn. All of the ex-presidents of the American Bankers Association—Herrick, Swinney, Hamilton, and Powers—had been spoken of, with Herrick showing the greatest political strength. Successful bankers have not always been the best secretaries of the treasury. The difficulty is that in the conduct of banking business the head of the bank has only to consult his directors, and often he is a one man power by himself and is obliged to refer his acts only nominally to an executive committee.

The result is that in his administrative capacity he is omnipotent. He has only to follow the by-laws of the bank and the regulations prescribed by the state or the Comptroller of the Currency for national banks. He retains a large measure of initiative, and it is therefore possible for him to vary his business practice from day to day to meet the constantly changing conditions.

When it comes to the administration of a great office like that of the treasury department an entirely different condition of affairs prevails. Almost every official act of the secretary of the treasury is limited or prescribed by a specific statute law. Some of these laws were passed by congress a generation or two ago. They are often unwise and sometimes actually absurd, but they are laws none the less, and the secretaries of the treasury, like private citizens, must obey them.

The result often has been that great bankers like Lyman J. Gage, who could successfully administer a private institution, find themselves constantly in hot water because, no matter in which direction they turn, they run up against some congressional limitation or order which cannot be violated with impunity. The banker misses his compact little executive committee and is harassed at discovering that the various bureau chiefs in the department know more about the great fabric which makes up the financial laws of the United States than he does himself.

Cashier Seeks Aid

Springport, Mich., December 28.—Henry P. Fogelsang, the indicted cashier of the Springport State Savings Bank, with his wife, left Springport yesterday afternoon for Los Angeles, Cal., to consult with Mrs. Fogelsang's uncle, Lewis Bryan. Mr. Bryan is said to have offered financial assistance to the Fogelsangs.

Mr. Bryan was the owner of large tracts of real estate in what is now Gary, Ind. The building of a town there by the steel trust sent the value of his property soaring, and he is said to be worth between $500,000 and $1,000,000. Friday, Fogelsang told the stockholders of the bank that his wife's relative had written her saying that he would do anything in his power to help her husband out of his present difficulties. Fogelsang secured the permission of his bondsmen to absent himself for ten days.

The fact that Fogelsang has found it necessary to appeal to Mr. Bryan leads to the suspicion that his shortage is much greater than had been supposed. Bank Examiner Johnson has concluded his work of going over the books of the bank but refuses to give out any information until after he has made his report to State Bank Commissioner Zimmerman. Examiner Adams is now in charge of the closed bank.

It is not likely that any action will be taken by the stockholders of the bank in regard to continuing it until after Fogelsang's return.

His Bill Was Bad

When S. Rafalowitch, a Russian Jew, who for four years has been conducting a second-hand store and little general merchandise establishment at 415 Wells Street, handed the receiving teller of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Bank of Milwaukee, Monday morning, a $100 confederate bill, and was told it was worthless, the unfortunate man fell to the floor in a dead faint.

Unfamiliar with bank bills, Rafalowitch on Friday accepted the bill from two Greeks and gave them in exchange an overcoat worth $5 and $95 in good Uncle Sam's money.

The merchant has an account in the savings department of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Bank, and with some other money he entered the bank at 10 o'clock this morning to deposit his cash. He was at once informed of the absolute worthlessness of the $100 bill and for the first time the light dawned upon him and the collapse followed. It was some minutes before Rafalowitch was able to speak, and then he told his story to Cashier M. A. Graettinger of the bank.

In fairly good English, the swindled merchant said that on Christmas day, in the afternoon, two Greeks, whom he thinks he would be able to identify, entered his small store and asked to be shown some overcoats. They finally selected one worth $5 and presented the Confederate bill—which is in a good state of preservation—in payment. They told the merchant they did not have anything smaller and that he would have to change it if he wished to make the sale.

Anxious to sell the coat, Rafalowitch hustled about and managed to get together $95 in good money, which the two men took, with the coat, and departed. The merchant had no suspicion regarding the money until the news of his loss was made known to him when he presented it with his account book as a deposit this morning.

The bill, bearing across its face in plain letters, the words, "The Confederate States of America," bears also the signatures, "G. Johnston, for the Register," and "W. L. Hinsey, for the Treasurer." It is dated November 24, 1862, and the bill's number is given in red as "No. 50,385." The bill is a light yellowish brown in color and a remarkably good specimen.

The police department was at once notified by Mr. Graettinger of the case, and the matter is now in the hands of the department as well as that of the United States government special officers here. The charge against the Greeks will be that of passing counterfeit money, a penitentiary offense.

New Nickels and Cents

The classic faces of the girls on the nickels and pennies are pronounced out of date and are to be changed. Within a short time some prominent sculptor will be invited by the Secretary of the Treasury to submit new designs for the coins mentioned, and if his models suit the artistic eyes of the judges who will pass upon them the young women so long and favorably known will be sent to the cloister of obsolete coins.

Had Augustus Saint-Gaudens lived a few months longer he would have completed the designs for the nickels and pennies, and in all probability they would have been accepted by the president with his models of the gold coins which are now in general circulation. He was working on the design for the 5-cent piece when he was stricken by illness, and it was not sufficiently advanced when he died to give those who came after him a definite idea of what he intended to create.

"We have not decided upon the sculptor whom we shall invite to do the work on the new pennies and nickels," said Director Leach of the mint bureau, "but we will probably have no difficulty in selecting a good one. We have found that the competitive scheme does not work well in designing coins. It merely results in a good deal of trouble, a good deal of hard feeling, and no better results than if we gave the work outright to one good man of established reputation. If we do not like the design he submits we can easily ask another to undertake the job. Coin designing is a peculiar branch of sculpture. Every sculptor is not a good coin designer. There are a number of them in the United States, however, more now than a decade ago."

On the new pennies it is likely that old-fashioned Indian headdresses will be done away with. The penny coined to-day is of the design adopted in 1864. The young woman on the nickel is of a later date and by a different sculptor, and the design is not, as has been believed for a generation, the profile of a certain young woman who afterward became a missionary to heathen lands.

"We exploded that story years ago," said

Director Leach, "but nevertheless every time we have suggested changing the face on the coin her friends and the believers of the yarn have always opposed the move. When we investigated the matter we discovered that the young woman in question could have been no more than 6 years old when the coin was issued. I do not think that any one will assert that the face on the nickel is that of a 6-year-old child."

For Treasury Portfolio

Washington, December 27.—The latest man that has been suggested as a possible appointee for the secretaryship of the Treasury in succession to Mr. Cortelyou is Representative John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts. Mr. Weeks is considered to have made a good record in Congress, although he has been rather too close to Speaker Cannon and the house machine. He has been a member of the banking and currency committee of the house, and last year joined in formulating the Aldrich-Vreeland bill, which he helped to support through the lower chamber in obedience to the wishes of Mr. Cannon and those around him. Later he was appointed a member of the monetary commission and has been working with that body during the past summer.

Mr. Weeks is a member of a banking and brokerage firm in Boston and has been very successful in that connection. Owing to his early training at Annapolis, and short service in the navy subsequent thereto, it has been suggested that he take the portfolio of the navy—which, however, Senator Lodge is now trying to get for Postmaster-General Meyer, who appears to have entirely dropped out of the race for the Treasury portfolio owing to his postal savings bank scheme, which has been so heavily discredited by the authorities. Lodge's efforts to land Meyer may result in throwing to Weeks the Treasury in spite of the latter's preference for the navy.

W. B. Clark Dead

Milwaukee, December 28.—William B. Clark, a banker of early days at Bloomington, and at one time a resident of Milwaukee, where he was admitted to the bar in 1868, died on Saturday at Dallas, Tex., at the age of 68 years. Mr. Clark, who is remembered by many of the older generation of Milwaukeeans, was graduated from Amherst in 1865. He came to Wisconsin and for five years was principal of the Patch Grove academy, his legal studies occupying part of his time during the period of teaching. He went to Bloomington in 1871 and to Minneapolis twelve years later, his work as a banker continuing in the Minnesota city until 1904, when he went to Dallas. The body has been taken to Amherst, N. H., where he was born.

California Banking News

By WILLIAM J. HOLLISTER

The executive council of the California Bankers Association met in San Francisco recently. It was the first meeting of that council since May, and every member of the committee was present, representing every class of banking institutions in California. The reports of officers and committees show that the association is healthy and active, and has accomplished much important work during the past six months. Upon invitation of the Monterey bankers it was decided to hold the next annual convention of bankers at Del Monte, May 27, 28 and 29, 1909. The following bankers attended the session: President J. D. Ralford, of Los Angeles; Vice-President H. S. Fletcher, of Watsonville; Treasurer J. J. Fagan, Secretary R. M. Welch, Assistant Secretary F. H. Colburn, W. H. High and C. F. Hunt of San Francisco; J. F. Brooks, San Jose; C. A. Edwards, Santa Barbara; E. P. Foster, Ventura; O. J. Woodward, Fresno; W. D. Woolwine, Los Angeles; A. E. Edwards, Pasadena, and Charles A. Smith, Oakland.

New Bank for Los Angeles

Los Angeles is to have a new banking institution. It is to be known as All Day and Night Bank, and will be opened for business January 4th, at northeast corner of Sixth and Spring streets. The loss of the money was discovered when the bank opened for business Tuesday morning.

Japanese Banks

The recent consolidation of two Japanese banks in San Francisco and two in Los Angeles, together with the failure of three older Japanese banks, two in San Francisco and one in Vacaville, during the past four or five months, has caused the members of the Bank Commission to inquire into the cause of the decrease in the number of these institutions in California. They have been told by the Japanese bankers that their business has been on the decline all over the Coast for some months past, because of the great falling off in Japanese immigration and the repeated assertions that Japan and the United States had arranged for the former country to stop it altogether. Now that Japan has taken this step, they state, their business will no doubt fall off a great deal more. The commissioners have issued a call to the 500 or 600 banks under their jurisdiction to make a report to them within ten days of their condition on Monday.

The California Bank

The California Bank, of Sacramento, has secured additional land near its present location and will at once begin extensive enlargements in its present structure. It has been reported the bank of D. O. Mills & Co. contemplates building a new home farther up town.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

State Superintendent of Banks, B. B. Seymour, Discusses the Ohio Banking Law before Cleveland Chapter

In attempting to comply with the request of the chairman of your committee to discuss the new Ohio law, called the "Thomas Law," I must ask you to remember two things. That I never have and cannot make an address, that the law was only passed last May, and that I have only been in office since the middle of July. Therefore you must not expect me to make an exhaustive talk on this subject. It is of too great importance, has been too long in being enacted, and covers too many interests, to be lightly discussed or quickly passed over.

Nearly every one of the states in the United States now has a banking department. Ohio was far in the rear of the procession of states in this respect. There was no other state of anything like her power and influence but had long ago a banking department, and there seems to have been no question as to the good results from these departments in the various states, both to the banks themselves and to the people whom they serve, for the interests of the bank and its customers are alike, and no bank can be long successful which does not look after and care for the interests of its customers as well as its own, although this point is sometimes forgotten. In the state of Wisconsin, where a department was organized in 1895, not a failure has occurred in three years which caused a loss to depositors; in Michigan there was only one failure last year; and in New York State, while there were several suspensions, I believe all but one have since resumed.

There was a further reason for inaugurating these banking departments. The reason that, when a state has granted a charter to a company to do a certain kind of business, it should be the duty of that state to see that the business chartered is properly carried on; especially is this true of the semi-public and semi-philanthropic corporations like banking corporations. The Thomas law in Ohio was passed to meet these points, and it is a good law. It has been said, and can be successfully maintained, that a bank which faithfully obeys this law cannot fail. It says that the superintendent is "charged" with the execution of the law. Therefore, if the law prevents failure and the department is to see to its execution, it follows that if this duty is properly done no failure can occur. This, therefore, is what I would like to talk about; to consider in the most informal manner the actual practical application of the law as we see it, and some of the plans which we have laid down for this purpose.

To quote the words of the superintendent of the banking department of another state, Clark Williams, of New York:

"Banking departments are not for criticism; they are intended to strengthen and improve the condition of all institutions that are under their supervision and to make them more efficient in their service to the public."

Now this to my mind exactly expresses the duties of the banking department, and this is the aim which this department will have in mind as it proceeds to get in position to completely fulfill the objects of its creation.

There are these two points to be considered: the execution of the law, and its execution without becoming a disturbing element in existing business. The law has wisely provided in several ways for these results. It has been so arranged that it can be put into execution without any real disturbance to existing business.

The first action that was taken under the law was to make a call for a "Report of Condition"—Call No. 1. We know that the making of this report caused extra trouble to you gentlemen, but there was not a single question asked in that report which was not necessary. And it may be some little consolation to you to know that these reports caused us a great deal more trouble than the ones who made them out.

To go into this report in detail to some extent, I mention first the item of loans of the various kinds—mortgage loans, collateral loans and other loans. The separation of these loans no doubt made much extra trouble, but this is really very necessary. The blank will be continued in practically its present form. It is likely that but few changes will be made in the face of the form or in the published form, as these correspond, as nearly as possible, with the uniform form which is being adopted by the superintendents in the various states. Ours, of course, is somewhat modified to meet our particular law. The confidential report, which is sent directly to our office, may be changed a little on the back. Experience only will tell whether this needs to be done, but there are no questions asked on this report which are not of importance. I believe this was well understood, for the blanks that were sent in were almost without exception very fully and completely filled in.

There was some question as to the meaning of the item "Bonds held as lawful reserve." But this is covered, as you will remember, by the section of the law providing for reserves held by savings banks. This provides that 4 per cent of the savings deposits must be held in cash on hand, but that 2 per cent of one-half of this cash on hand may be held in special bonds which are to be kept on hand. These are bonds of the United States or of any foreign government, bonds of any state in the United States, and county and municipal bonds of the state of Ohio.

There is also the item of "Reserve." This blank was prepared to meet the wants of savings banks, commercial banks, trust companies and safe deposit companies. Of course a bank that was doing both a commercial and savings business would have the same reserve for both kinds of business. But a bank doing a commercial business only would use that part of the blank referring to commercial deposits, while a bank doing a savings business only would use that part of the blank referring to savings deposits.

I have with me an idea for a daily statement book which might furnish some suggestions in preparing something of this kind.

This new law places a far greater responsibility on the directors of the bank than formerly. It has made them the supreme power in the government of the bank. The officers are simply executives, but the board of directors is the supreme governing power. Section 30 requires that the directors appoint a committee who shall make a report once each year in duplicate, one copy to be filed with the directors themselves and the other to be filed in the superintendent's office.

This is similar to the law of the state of Michigan. We have a blank to be used in making this report, which is much like that used in Michigan, a copy of which I have with me and copy of which has been mailed to every bank in the state. This report is important—it covers not only the statement of the resources and liabilities, but covers also the judgment of the committee as to the value of its resources as compared with the amount which stands on the bank's books. It also covers the list of loans to officers and directors, the overdrawn accounts which have been on the books for any length of time and any excessive loans; and also a blank space for any suggestions which this committee may have to make as to the management of the bank. We believe it will give to each incoming board of directors a fairly accurate statement of what they have on their hands.

It also gives to the superintendent a basis of comparison when examinations are made and something with which to proceed to judge the value of the securities in any particular institution. One of two things must happen in this respect. This report, if made accurately, will be of great benefit, and if not, it will soon be found out.

As far as the reports are concerned, we would recommend that the bank books of the various institutions be so kept that the amounts of the real estate loans, loans on collateral, and other loans can be readily shown. Also, that United States bonds, state and municipal bonds be kept separately, and other bonds and securities be kept separately. We believe that most banks already do this. We also would recommend that the cash be separated in accordance with the blanks. This is also done by nearly all banks.

On the liability side we will be glad to have the books correspond with the various accounts that are named—individual deposits, official checks, certified checks, time certificates of deposit, savings deposits and trust deposits. Most banks already keep their books in this form.

We lately have had, frequently, asked us these questions: "What will be the benefits if we immediately accept under the Thomas act?" And "What is necessary for us to do to accept under this act?" These seem to us to be vital questions.

The question as to the benefits to be derived from the acceptance of the Thomas act is, so lar, a matter of judgment, as the act has not been in operation long enough to show its work, but no one questions the advisability or benefit to be eventually derived from this act, and the results in other states show beyond question its benefits. If the benefit will be derived on April 1, 1910, when it becomes mandatory and when every bank must accept under it, why should not the benefits be equally great at this time? In fact, I believe they will be greater to institutions which accept at the present time, because they do so voluntarily and are not forced to do so. The effect of such acceptance in a bank's immediate neighborhood cannot fail to be good. The mere fact that a bank is in a position to at once accept and fulfill the requirements of the law, in itself, is a strong point and means that a bank has been well managed and is in strong condition.

There are also the other points of definite and known law under which to operate; knowing what the requirements are, and being absolutely prepared to fulfill them as they arise. From our standpoint we will be glad to see the banks accept as soon as possible, because it that much sooner puts all banks on an equal basis; it makes our examinations easier and more effective; we can that much sooner get our office in shape and the department in proper running order. Without the acceptance we have some banks operating under one law and others under another law, the requirements being different in both cases. Then there is also the idea to be borne in mind that when it becomes necessary for banks to make any change in their investments, if any need to be made, it will not all come at once, and there will be less disarrangement of business if scattered over a period of time than if it all took place at once, on the 1st of April, 1910. So for these various reasons our office will be glad to have the banks accept as soon as may be convenient.

Then comes the question as to what is necessary to accept under the new law. The points that are most frequently raised with us are excessive loans, change of name, or increase of capital stock which has been subscribed and only 50 per cent paid in. Under the old law it was not necessary for the banks to pay in more than 50 per cent of the capital stock subscribed, but under the new law the whole stock subscribed must be paid in. Also, an institution using the word "Trust" must have a capital of not less than $100,000. Many companies using this name have nothing like that amount paid in. Regarding the payment of the balance of subscribed stock, the attorney-general has held in this matter that those banks whose capital is not fully paid in may accept under the Thomas law at once, and are not required to pay in the balance of their subscribed capital stock until after April 1, 1910. That is, they will proceed exactly like a newly organized bank at that date, which will have 50 per cent paid in to begin business and must then pay in 10 per cent monthly thereafter until the balance is all paid in. So that banks accepting under the Thomas law will proceed exactly the same in this respect as though they waited until April 1, 1910, before they accept. Those institutions which are using the word "Trust" can simply amend their articles and omit this word, which straightens out the whole matter. Very many of them have never taken advantage of the "Trust" section, having done no trust business. Therefore it will be no hardship to them to omit the word "Trust." Those, of course, who have a sufficient capital, would not even need to do this.

Regarding excessive loans, banks ought not to have them anyway, because the old laws are equally strict with the new law. The law of 1851 requires that the individual indebtedness could never be more than 10 per cent of the capital stock, the savings and loan that it should never be more than 20 per cent of the capital stock, while the new law provides that it may be 20 per cent of the capital stock and surplus, and in the matter of farm loans it is unlimited. So that the conditions necessary for acceptance under the Thomas law are not very stringent in this respect, but the effect of immediate acceptance certainly will be beneficial because of the uniform responsibility, uniform laws, uniform securities, which will be well known and understood by everyone, both banks and depositors alike.

You all understand, of course, that the mode of accepting under the Thomas act is to give thirty days' notice to your stockholders by publication in a newspaper of general circulation, and the resolution accepting must be carried by an affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of the stockholders of each institution.

The important part, after all, in the execution of the Thomas law as far as the banking department is concerned, is the work of its examiners. We have already made a few examinations, probably about fifty, and we hope soon to be prepared to go into this in a more thorough manner. But I ask you to remember that when these examinations are made, they are not made for the purpose of unduly criticizing, unless some very serious irregularity should be found to exist, which I do not believe will be found in many institutions in this state; rather the object and effect of these examinations will be to help and strengthen in every reasonable way possible, and this to us is the plain duty of this department at the present time.

These are some of the plans and recommendations which have been perfected for the early application of the Thomas law.

I notice that your by-laws state as one of the objects of your meetings, "The study of the science and practice of banking." As bearing on this subject, I want to repeat the remarks of some gentlemen I lately heard, which although not a part of the Thomas law, are of importance in banking. One was the address of a gentleman on banking. He said that he didn't know anything about banking, although he had been in the business some nineteen years, that he had spent all his time loaning his money so that he could get it back again. That certainly was the very important part of banking.

The other gentleman was speaking of overdrafts, which are the bugbear of everyone, I believe. This man did not believe in them, and when asked how he got rid of them said his remedy was simply, "Don't have them." It seems to me these two gentlemen have gotten at the principal part of the science of banking. If these two things are handled properly, the rest will take care of itself.

In conclusion, I wish to repeat to you other remarks some bankers made to me a short time since.

The first, a gentleman of long experience in the banking business, highly successful, one of the older men of the state, said, "I cannot see why any young man goes into the banking business. It is a life of hard work and of small profits. I cannot see what attracts young men toward it." But a short time after, another banker, also a successful and experienced man, in speaking of another banker who had passed away, used these words: "He was a man of spotless honor, unquestioned integrity, of the highest ideals. No transaction was ever considered for one moment about which there was the faintest tinge or suspicion of irregularity; everyone, rich or poor, could rely on him, knowing that their interests would be faithfully protected. No worthy person ever asked for help which was not freely given. He was always ready to listen to the troubles of others; his advice and experience were freely used for the benefit of others. His life and example were of lasting and constant benefit to everyone with whom he was brought in contact."

These words, to me, seem to explain "why men become bankers." And men of whom these words can be used are those who should become bankers.

Minneapolis-Milwaukee Chapter Debate

The Minneapolis-Milwaukee Chapter debate upon the proposition that the best interests of the country would be subserved if all banking business were transacted through national banks, held in Milwaukee recently, was the occasion of considerable argumentative and oratorical effort on both sides. The respective combatants went at the subject with vim, evident careful thought and preparation, and with determination to show that their side was the side. The fact that the decision by the judges, prominent men in educational and business affairs, gave the victory to the Milwaukee team, was evidently for the reason that the judges believed the Milwaukee bank clerks had put up the strongest or the most persuasive arguments. This decision was in no way a reflection upon the strength and force of arguments produced by the Minneapolis clerks, who held their antagonists down to a close game.

The Milwaukee team of the Milwaukee chapter consisted of Alexander Wall, of the First National; S. M. Smith, Marshall & Ilsley Bank, and Frank Bachhuber, of the South Branch of Marshall & Ilsley, the latter two representing state banks, in employment. Milwaukee had the pole in the race, that is, the affirmative side, or that they believed the country would do better to have only national banks as financial mediums.

Minneapolis was ably represented, on the negative side, by Gray Warren, of the First National of that city; Charles J. Norman, of the Farmers & Mechanics Savings Bank, and Thomas M. Rees, Security National. The judges were L. F. Bower, W. N. Fitzgerald and Carrol G. Pearse. The decision by the judges was two to one in favor of the affirmative side of the proposition, as presented. J. H. Puelicher, Wisconsin member of the American Institute of Banking, presided.

Each debater was given twelve minutes for his argument in chief and five minutes for rebuttal. Each man spoke well and the arguments were concisely presented by each. The affirmative took the ground that the question was understood by that side to mean banks under federal control, and the arguments were made upon the presumption that the government might change and enlarge the national banking law to cover the various kinds of banks, and that trust companies should be kept from the general banking business. The negative stood upon the ground of the value of banking institutions not allowed under the federal laws, particularly the mutual savings banks of New England, and the trust companies. It was shown that these latter differed from the commercial bank in that they, the savings banks, are conducted for the profit of the depositor, only, and not for the banker as deposits are made for the saving feature.

Outside of the interest in the able arguments brought out by both sides, the debate was an educational treat, from the standpoint of a study of financial and banking questions, and as such was enjoyed by friends who were present as auditors.

A dinner at the Plankinton, given by the Milwaukee chapter in honor of their guests from Minneapolis, closed the most instructive and pleasant affair.

Canadian Bank is Optimistic

The directors of the Merchants Bank of Canada, in their report on the business of the year, say they had early indication of the financial depression through which the country has recently passed, and that they prepared in advance for the storm, which they were enabled to weather without inconvenience to their customers.

The precautions taken included the holding of a larger amount than is usual of the assets either in cash or in securities or loans that could be at once realized on. This, they say, was the more necessary because the public had had many lessons in what imprudent banking might result in, and stable and conservative institutions had to be even more than usually conservative. The directors say that the likelihood of anything untoward turning up is, however, daily growing less, and that there is every indication of a clearer financial outlook and a general revival of trade.

The bank has assets of $56,598,625, and on a paid-up capital of $6,000,000 the profits for the year were $738,597, of which $480,000 were used for the payment of an 8 per cent dividend.

A New Book by Holman Day

The author of "King Spruce," Holman Day, has written another story of his favorite Maine woods, this time for young people. "The Eagle Badge" takes a young hero into the forest wilds in the midst of the lawlessness which the woods invite by their nearness to the Canadian line, where smuggling and counterfeiting are opposed by the honesty and good-will of the genuine woodsmen. The lad is elected "Mayor of the Woods," which always means excitement, and has plenty of adventures in the mixed company of outlaws and guardians of the law, powerful drivers of the logs and gay-hearted French Canadians. It is a story of outdoor life breathing the fragrance and mystery of the woods, full of incident and suspense—a fresh tale which will no doubt attract an enthusiastic train of readers among young folk of twelve years or over. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York.

Detroit Chapter Doings

BY W. E. BULLARD.

At the regular meeting of the Detroit Chapter at its new rooms in Elk's Temple, Friday, December 18th, E. St. Elmo Lewis, advertising manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, and one of the leading men in his profession in the United States, gave an address on the duty and privilege of advertising a bank. This address was certainly worth a great deal more than the trouble of going to hear it, and those who did not attend the meeting lost a splendid opportunity to get something of great value for the mere trouble of listening. Mr. Lewis concluded his remarks by giving his text: "He profits most who serves best."

The second meeting of the law class was held at chapter rooms in the Telegraph Block, and its members got down to business and adopted Crawford's text-book on negotiable instruments. Mr. Oxtoby started us in by taking the text of the negotiable instruments law and explaining it section by section. There were 30 present, which is a pretty good representation of chapter men for this kind of work; we expect many more to join the class and also that the class will be the biggest success of its kind heretofore put forth by Detroit Chapter.

Detroit Chapter's honor roll is steadily increasing and five more of our chapter members have received merited promotion: viz.:

Ben. G. Vernor, Edward C. Mahler, and Walter E. Winckler, of the Old Detroit National; Samuel R. Kingston, of the National Bank of Commerce, and Walter G. Toepel, of the Michigan Savings Bank. Messrs. Vernor and Mahler have accepted the positions of assistant cashier for their institution, Messrs. Kingston and Winckler that of auditor for their respective institutions, and Mr. Toepel, the auditorship of the Peninsular Savings Bank.

Mr. Vernor is well known among chapter members, having served as president, and his name can always be found on one or two committees. His conscientious work in the interests of the chapter, especially along educational lines, has established a record of which we are proud.

Mr. Toepel has been another hard worker. In his good work on numerous debates he has done more than his share toward bringing a favorable decision to Detroit Chapter.

Mr. Kingston is an enthusiastic and earnest institute worker. He has done much to make Detroit Chapter as progressive as it now is.

Messrs. Mahler and Winckler have been chapter members from the time of its inception and have always manifested an interest in the welfare and work of the chapter.

South Dakota Banks

That the South Dakota banks are doing a volume of business twice as large as five years ago, that number of banks have doubled in seven years, that 39 have been added in the past year and that the total deposits in state, private and national banks, as shown by the last reports, is $54,965,428.01, are interesting statements in the annual report of public examiner John L. Jones. He states that, under the requirements of the law, 1,600 examinations should have been made the last year, but that of course this was impossible with but two deputies and one clerk, and states that to examine the banks, the 53 counties and the state institutions and to check up the accounts of the state officers and oil inspectors will require two more deputies.

Examiner Jones professes his dissatisfaction with the state banking laws, declaring they should be virtually reconstructed. Among the numerous changes in the law urged by the examiner are the following:

Issuance of bank charters and regulation of stock issues by the public examiner and liquidation of insolvent banks by the public examiner instead of a receiver, it being argued that a deputy examiner could do this more cheaply and quickly.

Prohibition of loans to officers or directors of banks, without collateral or indorsement.

Authority in the examiner to designate reserve banks.

Incorporation of all private banks and requirements of a minimum capital for a state or private bank of $10,000.

Requirement of a board of five directors, each of whom shall hold five unpledged shares.

Report by directors under oath upon the assets of their banks.

Requirement of a 25 per cent reserve of lawful money in all reserve banks.

Prohibition of the issuance of certificates of deposit for borrowed money, but that bills payable be made out instead.

Liability of each director for all overdrafts allowed by the officers and for every loan in excess of the maximum in the law.

A provision that an overdraft of over 60 days' standing be not allowed as an asset.

The examiner urges also the preparation and passage of a savings bank law, to safeguard the investment of savings funds.

A Fine Book for Boys

"The Wolf-Hunters" by James Oliver Curwood, is one of the very best of this season's holiday books for boys. It tells of the adventures of two fine lads in the frozen wilds of Canada. Wabi (the son of an English trader and an Indian woman) is sent to school at Port Arthur, and later at Detroit, where he distinguishes himself. Here he meets Roderick Drew; they become fast friends, and Roderick returns with his Indian comrade to the great Northwest, where they hunt—and in turn are hunted by wolves. The boys' adventures, hunting, fishing, and fighting hostile Indians. With their old guide, Mukoki, and their tame wolf, make very pleasant and exciting reading. Especially good are those chapters which tell how Wolf became the companion of men, and how he took vengeance on his people. The book is thoroughly well written and appropriately illustrated by C. M. Relyea.

Published by Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis, Ind. Illustrations by C. M. Relyea.

Nebraska Bank Raids

Lincoln, Neb., December 30.—Robbers raided the State Bank of Ceresco, eighteen miles north of this city, last night, overpowered a boy who surprised them at work, demolished the vaults, took $3,000 and escaped.

The bank was attacked at 1:30 o'clock this morning. Clarence Boyle, who was passing in front of the building, was seized, blindfolded and gagged. He was tied in the bank, and Cashier L. Lead received his first intimation of the robbery when he found the boy this morning.

Wednesday night a bank in Chase, Chase county, was robbed. Thursday night banks at Keene and Gibbon were looted, the robbers getting $5,500. James Malone, chief of Burlington detectives, said this morning that the same gang undoubtedly robbed all the banks.

J. R. Rainey has been elected assistant cashier of the First National, of Longview, Tex.

The record of 1908 in real estate in St. Louis, computed in dollars and cents, was one which gives the realty operators just cause for congratulation. The striking thing of the year's record was the added prestige given to real estate as an investment. The hard times at the beginning of the year and the shrinkage of values in many lines of securities that had commanded first attention helped build this prestige. As a result hundreds of new investors have entered the real estate field, they having become convinced that the only security the average investor can depend upon all the time is real estate. The newcomers have been garnered from men of moderate means largely.

Springfield Bank to Reopen

Plans are being perfected for the reorganization of the Exchange National of Springfield, Mo., which suspended three weeks ago. It will be reorganized with L. S. Meyer, former president, at its head and with new capital.

"The bank has assets which form a strong reorganization basis," J. F. Downing, president of the New England National, said. "It will reopen for business as soon as the necessary details can be perfected."

Elaborate Bank Souvenir

The Union Bank and Trust Company of Houston, Tex., has issued a profusely illustrated booklet descriptive of the bank in all of its departments.

Pictures of all the officers and of the active employees appear in half tone. The building occupied is reproduced and the instruments used in business with the institution are shown in explanation of the methods followed.

Embossed on the cover of the booklet is a map of Texas in gold. The inside pages are of the finest laid paper with the printing artistic in its arrangement.

The book is one of the most elaborate and complete in its arrangement of any yet issued by a banking institution in Texas.

The Bank of Wathena

An attempt to rob the Bank of Wathena at Wathena, Kan., just across the river from St. Joseph, at 11:30 o'clock Saturday, was frustrated by the town marshal and several residents who were aroused from their beds. A street fight between a negro, who was the bank robber, and the marshal took place and the negro escaped. The marshal was uninjured.

The negro had effected entrance to the bank by means of an opening in the cellar. The marshal saw him working in the cellar.

The Southwest National to Open January 4th

Kansas City's new million dollar bank, the Southwest National, will open for business January 4th. It will have quarters in the east room of the New York Life building pending the occupancy of the west room in the same building, formerly occupied by the Union National.

The complete board of directors has selected the following officers: Fernando P. Neal, president; Edwin W. Zea, vice-president; John M. Moore, cashier; Eugene P. Davis, assistant cashier.

Three of the officers were active officers of the Union. Mr. Neal was the active vice-president, with the practical management of the bank. Mr. Zea was cashier for three years and was previously a director and a stockholder. Mr. Davis came to the bank four years ago from Kansas, where he was a national bank examiner. Mr. Moore, the new cashier, was born in Kentucky. He has lived in Kansas City for a number of years, and has been cashier of the Fourth National of Wichita, Kan.

All of the directors of the new bank are Kansas City men except Mr. Moore. They are J. P. Townley, S. H. Velie, C. J. Schmelzer, Edward George, H. L. Root, W. H. Johnson, L. T. James, Frank G. Crowell, Nathan Schloss, John G. Groves, George R. Hicks, Fernando P. Neal, Edward W. Zea, John M. Moore.

Kansas City Bank Employees Remembered

Most of the Kansas City banks "remembered" their employees this Christmas. The New England National, following a custom established two years ago, gave to employees who have been with that bank more than one year an amount in cash equal to 10 per cent of their annual salaries. Employees who have worked less than one year received 5 per cent of their annual salaries. The Interstate National and the Commercial National Banks in Kansas City, Kan., gave employees who worked more than one year cash to the amount of 5 per cent of their salaries. Other banks gave money to employees.

Greenville, Tex., Banks Consolidate

One of the most important business deals was closed recently whereby the Commercial National and the Greenville Bank and Trust Company of Greenville, Tex., were consolidated, the Commercial National taking over all the assets and notes and accounts belonging to the trust company.

This will give the Commercial National between $400,000 and $500,000 deposits and it will be classed as a half million dollar bank hereafter.

New York Banking News

Recovery from the panic conditions of 1907 was much more rapid in banking than was the revival of industry in general. The cash which had been withdrawn from banks and hoarded during the panic was rapidly returned and the deficit which the New York clearing house banks reported on January 4th of $11,509,550 had been converted into a surplus by January 18th of $22,635,475. The largest surplus reported by the clearing house banks in 1908 was $66,098,800 on June 27th.

General Movement to Amend Banking Laws

There was a general movement among the states whose legislatures met in 1908 to amend their banking laws so as to prevent, if possible, in future the practices which may have contributed toward the panic. The amendments of the banking laws of New York were made in accordance with the recommendation of a commission of bankers appointed by Governor Hughes, and it is believed that the practices which led to the embarrassment of state banks and trust companies just prior to the outbreak of the panic of 1907 will hereafter be impossible if the laws are faithfully administered.

Instituted New System

More important even than the amendments made to the banking laws is the efficient administration of these laws. Under the authority which was already vested in him by the laws as they existed before the recent amendments, state bank commissioner Clark Williams instituted a system of weekly reports of state banks and trust companies, the results of which, so far as concern New York City, are given out every Saturday at the same time with the clearing house bank statement. Reports of state banks and trust companies outside of Greater New York are published on the following Tuesday. The mystery which formerly attached to the changes in the weekly bank statement has been almost entirely removed and an increase or decrease in the loans or cash reported by the clearing house banks is often supplemented by an opposite change in the reports of the trust companies.

Ten Banks Resumed Business

There were comparatively few banks outside of New York which were forced to suspend in consequence of the panic. There were fifteen institutions in New York and Brooklyn which closed their doors at the height of the panic in October, or subsequently, as a result of the panic. Of these fifteen, three were national banks, eight were state banks, and four were trust companies. Nine of the institutions were in Manhattan, and six in Brooklyn. Of these fifteen banks and trust companies, ten have resumed, and five remained closed and are in process of liquidation. None of the depositors of these suspended institutions will lose a dollar of their money, but in some of them the stockholders will sustain losses more or less serious.

New York Stock Exchange

The New York Stock Exchange has made a new rule, by which hereafter all bonds dealt in on the exchange will be at price and accrued interest instead of flat, as before.

Kent, manager of the foreign exchange department of the First National of Chicago. F. N. B. Close, formerly assistant secretary, was appointed secretary; H. W. The new capital is to provide for the completion of the company's new plant in the Bronx.

407 Monadnock Block - CHICAGO

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, December 31. —Declaring that opportunities for fraud are presented to dishonest debtors by the Carter postal savings bank bill, which provides that deposits shall be exempt from any legal process, R. Lewis Rutter, secretary and manager of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, said that the more important further effect of such a law would be to retard building operations in the city and country, also working an injury to general realty values, adding:

"Moneys deposited in any of the existing savings banks are, of course, subject to judgments and garnishments, and even funds in a safe deposit box may be seized to satisfy a debt. With one brief paragraph, however, the proposed Carter law affords effectual means to thwart the present law, by declaring that postal savings depository funds are hereby declared to be public moneys and subject to the safeguards and preferences provided by statute therefor. After their receipt from depositors they shall be exempt from demand, garnishment, execution, attachment seizure, or detention under any legal process against the depositor thereof. Such funds shall not be subject to taxation by the United States or any state and no person connected with the Postoffice Department shall disclose to any person other than the depositor the amount of his or her deposits unless directed so to do by the Postmaster-General.

"One of the effects of this exemption is likely to be felt disastrously in marriage relations for either a husband or a wife might put the community money into his or her name in postal savings banks, and it is there locked up absolutely beyond the possibility of control by the other. The effect is to nullify the community laws of the state of Washington, which hold that money or other property acquired by either husband or wife after marriage is presumed to be community property, in which each has equal share.

"It is uncertain how much the postal savings banks would affect the existing savings institutes, but whatever gain might be made by the postal banks of the Northwest would be distinctly the loss of the Northwestern community.

"We have deposits of $750,000 in our savings department, and mortgages on Spokane homes and business property form the most important element of investment for our savings funds. From June 1, to December 1, 1908, we made mortgage loans of $550,000 in Spokane. Of that $300,000 was in building loans at not to exceed 40 per cent of the value of the property. This means that more than $300,000 worth of desirable property has been added to Spokane as a result of the savings bank mortgages, and in addition there is more represented by loans which largely represent funds placed at lower rates with local money.

"In what ever degree postal savings banks make a gain in Spokane they would work a corresponding injury to the city's growth, to building and to general real estate values.

"One thing certain is that the government requires the banks to guarantee savings funds in the same way that the banks guarantee other public funds, by depositing bonds to the amount of the funds. The effect in the Northwest would be to send the sum of the postal savings Eastward to New York to be invested in bonds, and in this way the Northwest would be stripped for the benefit of the East."

The Union Trust Company

Union Trust Company, of which James C. Cunningham is secretary and treasurer, is having plans prepared for a 11 or 12 story office building, 100 by 142 feet, at Riverside Avenue and Stevens Street, to cost from $800,000 to $1,000,000. Work is to begin within six months. The site, which was bought for $200,000 from D. C. Corbin, president of the Spokane International Railway Company, some time ago, is occupied by a one-story concrete structure, used as railroad offices, but as there are no leases they may be razed at any time. Mr. Cunningham recently refused an offer of $300,000 for the property. This is an advance of $100,000 over the purchase price and gives some idea of the increase in value of desirable business property in Spokane. The company acquired the site for the purpose of erecting a modern office building, which, Mr. Cunningham says, will be second to none in the city. The company will occupy part of the ground floor and expects to get into its new quarters before the close of 1910.

The Exchange National

Thomas H. Brewer, vice-president of the Exchange National, announces that plans have been made for a structure 90 by 90 feet, 10 stories high at Riverside Avenue and Howard Street. The new building will cover the sites of the present bank and the Glenn and Postal Telegraph buildings. More than $750,000 is involved. Mr. Brewer said it is expected to begin work within 12 months, adding:

"Plans for the development have been changed to include all of the bank property on the north and west of the main building, and a structure 90 feet square will be erected. The Glenn and Postal buildings will be torn down, and the new structure covering this ground will be built to 10 stories high."

The Washington Trust Company

M. B. Connelly, president of the Washington Trust Company, announces that plans are making for a modern bank and office building to be erected as soon as a suitable site is obtained. He offered $200,000 for a lot 56 by 100 feet at Riverside Avenue and Post Street, but Gardner Chamberlain, the owner, declined to sell, saying the land is not on the market.

Two Mortgages Given

Two mortgages, one for $18,000 and the other for $12,000, have been given by Seymour Birch to the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company to refund a blanket mortgage of $35,000 at 8 per cent, given by Mr. Birch to Patrick Clark, a year ago. The loan for $18,000 is secured by the three-story building with a frontage of 80 feet on Wall Street and 57 feet on Second Avenue, erected four years ago. There are five stores on the ground floor and 18 apartments above. The gross income of the property is $6,600 and the net income $5,800 a year, or 6 per cent on $98,000. The ground bought five years ago for $6,500 is now worth $30,000. The mortgage is for three years at 6½ per cent. The loan of $12,000 for three years at 7 per cent, is on the Espanola apartment house, at Second Avenue and Oak Street. This property is 100 by 100 feet and three stories with full basement. The building cost $60,000 and rents for $13,000 a year, leaving a net revenue of $10,000.

Less Money Sent Away

Millard T. Hartson, postmaster of Spokane, says that less money was sent out of Spokane during the holiday season of 1908 than in 1907, his explanation being that in the fall of 1907, when financial conditions were unsettled, many foreigners sent money to Europe to deposit in the government postal savings banks. Now, however, he added, there is a general sentiment among the newcomers, as well as others that prosperity has returned and that it is a good thing to keep the money here. Most of the money orders this season were purchased for Norway, Sweden and England. The immigrants from these countries usually adapt themselves to conditions here and become citizens, so that what they send back to the old country is usually as gifts to relatives.

To Handle Farm Loans

William McGregor, Jr., of Philadelphia, has completed arrangements with the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company to handle farm loans in the Northwest for a Philadelphia house, which expects to invest a large amount of capital in Washington during the next two years. Mr. McGregor said that opportunities in this state are not equaled anywhere on the continent, and that after seeing what has been accomplished he is ready to believe anything that may be said of the resources.

Building and Loan Associations

Twenty-one representatives of building and loan associations in Washington have organized a league with these temporary officers: President, A. B. Weed of North Yakima; vice-president, R. Campbell of Seattle; secretary, Dudley Eschelman of Tacoma. The purpose is to secure amendments to the present laws. Probably the most important amendment will wipe out the section of the law to report stock of the companies for taxation. A delegation from the league visited the tax commission to discuss that matter and its members were assured by Tax Commissioner Frost that the commission would not oppose a law which exempted building and loan stock from taxation. E. D. Olmstead of Spokane made the chief argument for the delegation. A legislative committee, headed by E. D. Olmstead of Spokane, was named to draft the proposed amendments for presentation to the legislature in January.

Spokane Bank Clearings

Spokane bank clearings will break all previous records in 1908. The clearings already exceed the mark of $301,000,000 set in 1907. Including December 21 the clearings for 1908 totaled $299,190,766. For the entire 12 months of the year of 1907 they amounted to $301,419,017. For December, 1907, the clearings amounted to $21,637,527, while for the first 21 days in 1908 they reached $22,453,043.

State Bank of Washington

E. F. Swanson, formerly president of the defunct State Bank of Washington, says the creditors will soon receive their deposits, adding: "According to advices received from our attorneys and decisions from the supreme and superior courts, the depositors of the State Bank of Washington will soon receive dollar for dollar on their deposits."

Banking Notes

The Boundary Investment & Trust Co. has succeeded the British-American Trust Co. at Grand Forks, B. C.

First National of Hermiston, Oregon, has been authorized to do business with $25,000 capital. The officers are E. L. Smith, president; J. R. Haley, vice-president; F. B. Swayzee, cashier.

Another bank is to be started at the new town of Malden, Wash. J. W. Hughes, who is associated with banking enterprises at Rockford and Fairfield, is back of the enterprise and will erect a brick building.

This World's Record Comes Home to You!

Specially designed cars driven by experts break speed records and win races; and much money is spent in advertising the fact. But what has that to do with you, Mr. Buyer?

Nothing whatever, except should you buy a car whose reputation is made in racing, you get the same nameplate on a different model and contribute your share toward the maker's racing expenses. Small comfort in that.

But there are world's records that affect you.

For instance, every mile your car travels in your service means more or less actual expense to you.

Part of that expense is in the driving — whether your car is handled skillfully or otherwise.

Most of that expense is in the car itself.

Therefore, a world's record on upkeep expense affects you, especially when the record-making cars are in every respect commercial, stock models, and the records are made in the every-day service of common-sense business men like yourself.

These are precisely the conditions under which the

Was your upkeep expense for 1908 as low as that?

Do you know of any other car the world over that can make anything like this exhibit of certified facts?

If not, then this world's record affects you personally, doesn't it, as showing how you can enjoy release from the annoyance of repair bills, of disappointed touring expectations, and of street car and horse service necessitated while your car is in the repair shop?

Yes, and not only does the Winton Six give you security from repair bills, but it gives you that contentment due to the ownership of a car of quality, a car up-to-the-minute in the mechanical superiority of six cylinders, a car so superb in its performance as to make you the envy of your friends.

The Winton Six costs $3000 in 48 horse-power, five-passenger style, or $4500 in 60 horse-power, seven-passenger style. An absolutely new price standard as pleasing to the buyer as is the excellence of the car's design, material, workmanship and service-capacity.

Seattle Chapter Meeting

Seattle Chapter of the American Institute of Banking has begun work on its organization of a model bank. "The Mail" was the subject taken on the first night. Various features of a bank's daily work will be taken up at the meetings this winter. Large attendance marks the occasions. A monthly magazine is to be issued by the bank clerks in the near future to give additional stimulation to the interest now manifest in the organization.

Fort Wayne Chapter News

Fort Wayne, Ind., Chapter of the American Institute of Banking has decided to hold regular monthly meetings henceforth. It now has a membership of 53, and Edward Detzer, of the First National, is president. Good speakers will be provided at each meeting.

Treasurer Found Dead

Frank W. Cutting, for the past forty years connected with the Worcester (Mass.) Mechanics' Savings Bank, and for seven years its treasurer, was found dead by suicide at his home last week. The bank officials express the belief that his accounts are correct, as two examinations have been held recently.

The Worcester Mechanics' is the second largest banking institution, in point of deposits, in Worcester. According to the latest available report it holds $11,784,960 belonging to depositors. It is one of the oldest banks in Worcester, having been organized in 1851.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

Geo. D. Bartlett, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, of Stanley, has decided to give up the active management of the Citizens State Bank at an early date. Mr. Bartlett organized the bank ten years ago, and for six years before that time was cashier of the State Bank of Anoka, Minn. One of the most active workers in the Wisconsin Bankers Association the past five or six years has been Mr. Bartlett. He ably divided the state into groups, and has been a tireless worker at group meetings. Everything that he takes hold of thrives. He was the father of the insurance department in the Wisconsin Bankers Association, and this department has shown a splendid growth every month since its inception over three years ago. During the month of November over $300,000 of burglary insurance was placed through the association.

Would Make Excellent Paid Secretary

Mr. Bartlett would make an excellent paid secretary and the Wisconsin Bankers Association should follow the lead of Illinois and Minnesota, and other states, and secure the services of such a capable man. The Wisconsin Bankers Association has grown so in every department that the services of some one without other business matters engaging the larger part of his time is really needed. Mr. Bartlett expects to take a month's vacation, and in the meantime the executive council of the Wisconsin Bankers Association should get busy, and secure his services.

Money Sent Abroad

In and Around Pittsburgh

By
LATIMER T. LAWTON

After a year's operation Commissioner of Banking Berkey finds that the new system of bank examinations inaugurated by him at the beginning of 1908 has been entirely successful and he has decided to continue it. This system involves dividing the state into nine districts and apportioning the examiners so as to secure the highest degree of efficiency.

Under this system it was possible to make during the year about 1,000 examinations of banks and trust companies, or an average of more than two examinations of each institution. Seven hundred building and loan associations also were examined. Mr. Berkey believes that the thoroughness of the examinations is partially to be credited to the fact that there have been no defalcations or serious failures.

The work of the department is growing to tremendous proportions. The Commissioner of banking has under his supervision 145 banks, 327 trust companies and 1,400 building and loan associations. Of these Philadelphia has 13 banks, 70 trust companies and 700 building and loan associations, and Allegheny County has 33 banks, 93 trust companies and 240 building and loan associations. This work is handled by the Commissioner, his deputy and 20 examiners.

Commissioner Berkey will ask the legislature to pass bills providing a more expeditious method of liquidating insolvent institutions. The act of 1895 is too slow. He is preparing bills on this subject.

The Second National of Pittsburgh

Among the modern and imposing buildings of financial institutions of Pittsburgh another is to appear that will be the equal in convenience, beauty and substantiality of any of the present attractive group. This latest structure will be the new ten-story granite building of the Second National, which will replace the old-time skyscraper on the corner of Liberty Avenue and Ninth Street.

The first three floors of the building will be occupied by the bank, while the balance of the building will be rented for offices. The main entrance to the bank will be from Liberty Avenue, while the office entrance will be from Ninth Street. The banking room will also open into the Ninth Street vestibule. The most modern equipment will be installed and will include power plant, plunger elevators and freight lift.

The present building will be razed about April 1st and work will be started on the new structure at the earliest possible date. During the construction of the building the bank will occupy temporary quarters in the Westinghouse Building.

The Real Estate Trust Company

Stockholders of the Real Estate Trust Company of Pittsburgh, received the regular New Year's dividend, being the quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. The disbursement amounted to $50,000, and was payable to stockholders of record as of December 28th. The payment of this dividend brought the dividends paid by the Real Estate Trust to a total of $1,340,000.

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, December 31.—Des Moines bankers, pleased with the remarkable growth of the past year, are enthusiastic for a brighter twelve months in 1909. Not only in Des Moines have banking conditions been such as to make bankers joyful, but the same condition prevails all over the state. Iowa financially was never more solid, her crops were never better and her people never so happy and prosperous. Although the results of the panic of 1907 were keenly felt throughout the state, the unsettled condition has gradually given way to thorough contentment. It is estimated that more money was spent at Christmas this year than ever before while postal officials without respect to location declare that postal receipts for Christmastide break all records. During the year there have been new banks formed. The number of mergers have been few. The merging of the Cedar Falls National and the Cedar Falls Savings was the most recent merger of consequence. Earlier in the year the Merchants National and Citizens National merged at Cedar Rapids, making one of the biggest institutions in the state. Another national bank merger at Marshalltown was an important event of the banking year.

Wonderful Year for Iowa

"The year 1908 was a wonderful year for Iowa," said Homer A. Miller, of the Iowa National. "The close of the year finds business in Iowa on a very good basis. We never had better crops and prices are very satisfactory. Farmers also have a good holding of stock. The real effects of these prosperous conditions on Iowa farms will not be felt in banking circles until they are transferred into money in February and March. I look for the best year for Iowa banks in history during 1909."

Conditions Excellent

"I regard conditions as most excellent at the beginning of the year 1909," said Arthur Reynolds, of the Des Moines National. "We have felt the results of the panic somewhat and there has been a decrease of balances particularly as affected by the country banks. As for the Des Moines National, we never had a better year. Our net profit earned was 30 per cent, which is the best on record. We have by no means felt the panic as they did in the East and rates of interest have been very satisfactory. The West has not had the flood of money with which the East contended, but we had plenty at all times and a good rate of interest was maintained. There have been many new banks organized in the past year and many savings and state banks have been nationalized. I believe there is a tendency that way in Iowa."

Continued Prosperity

"I foresee nothing but continued prosperity and growth in Iowa banking circles this coming year," said G. E. MacKinnon, of the Mechanics Savings. "There has been a good healthy demand for money the past few months with good rates of interest maintained throughout. Deposits are increasing and there is everywhere a good feeling of prosperity that augurs well for the coming year. Business has increased most noticeably since the election. I believe, too, that there have been more new bank buildings erected in the state the past year than ever before with prospects for no abatement along this line."

Banking Conditions Fine

"Banking conditions could hardly be expected to be better," said G. D. Ellyson, of the Marquardt Savings and president of the Des Moines Bankers club. "There is a feeling of prosperity in the air. You notice it as you walk along the street and every banker knows that there is no comparison now with conditions at the close of last year. I feel optimistic as to what the future twelve months have in store not only for Des Moines, which is making an unprecedented growth, but for all Iowa."

Postal Savings Bank

Much interest has been attached to statements of Senator A. B. Cummins anent the postal savings bank proposition since his return to Des Moines for the holidays. Senator Cummins is taking a great deal of interest in the proposition and says he was surprised that the people are not discussing it more generally. Outside of bankers, he finds little discussion of the question, he says.

"Personally I believe in the system and want to vote for it not only to carry out the provisions of the republican platform but because I think that in many parts of the country, even if not here, it would greatly promote the welfare of those whose savings are small and who do not deposit in the ordinary bank," Senator Cummins says:

How Funds should be Distributed

"There are, however, two features in the bill now before the senate, one of which would destroy the good sought to be obtained and the other of which is fundamentally wrong from every standpoint. The bill as reported provides that the money collected at the post offices shall be deposited by the postmaster-general in such national banks as he may select in the general locality from which the deposits are drawn. Any one familiar with the banking business in Iowa will know that that arrangement will take away from the small towns and the communities tributary to them a great deal of the money with which they now carry on their affairs. This will be especially true at the very times that they most need the money that belongs to them. Unless I see some good reason to change my mind I intend to do what I can to require the postmaster-general to deposit the funds in the state as well as national banks."

First Lien upon Assets

"The bill also provides that the deposits made by the postmaster general shall be a first lien upon the assets of the bank which holds them. I am opposed to any such provision. The ordinary depositor has as complete right to protection as the government and it is unfair to make such depositors suffer the entire loss if failure should occur. If the government wants to exact a bond for repayment let it do so but to secure the savings deposits by pledging in effect the property of the other depositors is so manifestly unjust that it cannot meet with the approval of fair minded men.

Gold Pieces Popular

No more popular Christmas presents were found in Des Moines than the new $5 and $2.50 gold pieces which several of the banks secured. Before Christmas day, not a bank in the city had any of the $2.50 gold pieces and the larger ones were scarce. People went from bank to bank inquiring for them the day before Christmas, but the famine was on. Bankers say that the custom of giving gold coins for Christmas presents is gaining in favor from year to year, but the charm and mystery surrounding the brand new gold pieces seemed to augment the popularity this year.

Guaranty of Bank Deposits

W. A. Pollock, cashier of the bank at Clemons, has some ideas on guaranteed bank deposits that are being discussed by Iowa bankers. Mr. Pollock favors a plan which amounts in substance to an association of banks guaranteeing depositors having money in any bank belonging to such association. This implies an arrangement which is now in working condition in Minnesota, i. e., such association having its own bank examiner paid by said association. This, one can see at a glance, has some very good features. First, a small bank belonging to an association that has for membership several big banks is tremendously strengthened as a depository. Again this system of its own examiner enables all to know what each individual bank is doing, and how they are doing business. Probably such a plan has also weak points, but out of all this will come some arrangements that will make a postal bank system unnecessary and unprofitable, Mr. Pollock thinks.

Sioux City Tax Case

The famous tax ferret case at Sioux City, wherein D. B. Shontz sought to collect taxes of $75,000 from the Sioux City Stock Yards Company on the ground that it should be assessed as a corporation and not as a merchant, has lost a point in the courts at Sioux City, where Judge Gaynor sustained a demurrer filed by the treasurer of the county. Shontz was overruled by the treasurer and sought to mandamus him, but the treasurer demurred on grounds approved by the courts. Shontz will appeal.

Pioneer Banker Discussion

Des Moines bankers are having a lively discussion as to which is the pioneer banker of the city. When Simon Casaday resigned from the Iowa National and Des Moines Savings he was credited with the honor. Then came J. G. Rounds, of the Citizens National, who began his career in 1872. Then George Dissmore, of the Iowa State, who started in 1871, claimed the place. R. T. Wellslager, of the Central State, served from May, 1861, to January, 1865, in B. F. Allen's bank. He has been associated with banking in other capacities ever since and appears to have won the place of honor.

Banking Notes

Charles A. Sherman, a pioneer banker at Boone, died suddenly at his home in that city. He sat down in a chair and apparently fell asleep. Later, when his daughter went to awaken him, he was dead. He was at one time a banker and postmaster at Fort Dodge and acquired prominence as railroad builder in the early days.

Robert Armstrong, assistant secretary of the United States treasury under Secretary Shaw, was in Des Moines spending a few days at his old home near here. Mr. Armstrong started his public career as a newspaper reporter for the Des Moines papers.

J. D. Whisenand, of the Central State, was in Minden on business several days last week.

The Cedar Falls Trust Company has increased its capital stock to $100,000, instead of $75,000, as was first contemplated.

The Owassa Savings has filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $10,000 and is now doing business.

The Comptroller of the Treasury has extended the corporate existence of the Iowa State National at Sioux City to December 22, 1928.

The Citizens National of Des Moines has been approved as reserve agent for the First National at Valley Junction.

The new home of the Burton & Co. State at Kellogg is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy early in the year. It is a structure that is a credit to Kellogg and one such as is found in few towns of that size.

Checks Foreign Loans

London, December 23.—The "Times" publishes a dispatch from its Peking correspondent on the present state of China's finances and the result of the recent mission of Tang Shao-yi to America. He says:

One result of the mission of Tang Shao-yi to America has been the arrival here of a representative of one of the leading American banking institutions in the Far East, to make inquiries respecting the prospects of offering a loan to China with a view to her participation in the construction of the Canton-Han-kau Railway. The money would, it is understood, be provided by the group of Belgian financiers, who are still anxious to become identified with this railway, although they are aware that the option of its construction has been secured by the British, under the terms of the Hong Kong loan, which has been granted China for the repurchase of the concession from the American syndicate, who were the original holders.

The representative has returned to Shanghai convinced that the moment is ill-chosen for offering a loan to China. The financial condition of China will presently be causing considerable anxiety, arising from the heavy fall in silver, the debased subsidiary coinage, the reduced customs, revenues, the overspeculation and overtrading of native merchants in Shanghai, Han-kau, Tientsin and other great business centers, and the many failures. The Tien-tsin Consular body and the Chamber of Commerce have submitted a report to the diplomatic body, pointing out that the native merchants of Tien-tsin are able to show assets of only one million sterling against debts of nearly two millions to foreign firms, mostly German and Japanese. The ever increasing silver levies upon the provinces issued in order to meet the indemnity payments in gold add to the general embarrassment, while China, through her ignorance of the elementary principles of sound finance, is increasing the currency confusion, although she is under a treaty obligation to reform her finances.

The diplomatic body have addressed a dispatch to the Wai-wu-pu, urging the adoption of immediate measures to check the currency chaos, to forbid the present issue of bank notes by irresponsible banks not possessing a reserve of bullion, and to control the unlimited issue of provincial notes which are not also protected by a cash reserve.

China will have to make a radical change in her methods before she can hope to obtain again such favorable terms as she secured in the case of the last Anglo-French loan of £5,000,000 for the redemption of the Peking-Han-kau Railway. China badly needs money, yet the way in which loan moneys are being wasted is bound to shake foreign confidence. Investors will cease to lend money to China on a Government guarantee without effective supervision over expenditure.

The latest scandal is in connection with the English section of the Tien-tsin-Yang-tsze Anglo-German trunk line. The northern two-thirds, that is, the German section from Tien-tsin to the Southern border of Shan-tung, is making good progress under a Chinese managing director, who allows the German engineer-in-chief an adequate staff, and who is actively co-operating in the work. The Southern third, that is, the British section, under a British engineer-in-chief, from the Southern border of Shan-tung to Yang-tsze, is making no progress whatever. The managing director, who is a native of Canton and has been educated in America, is effectively preventing the work of construction.

Although the contract is signed and the work is to be completed in four years, an official report, dated December 5th, states that the survey has been completed, but that no rails have been ordered, no sleepers purchased and no earth-works constructed. The managing director, instead of residing on the railway, frequents Shanghai, and has been seen only once by the chief engineer in the course of two whole months. Sir John Jordan, the British Minister at Peking, has the matter in hand, and a foreign representation has been made, but owing to the mourning of the Court, diplomatic intercourse in Peking is much hampered.

Bank Accused

Knoxville, Tenn., December 31.—The Knoxville Water Company to-day filed a bill in the Chancery Court here against the East Tennessee National, the leading bank of this section, seeking a decree for some $2,300 and charging that in law the bank has made itself a party to the embezzlement of the cashier of the Knoxville Water Company, Isaac C. Martin, who is now a fugitive from justice, short $8,000.

Martin had deposited several big checks drawn by parties in favor of the Knoxville Water Company in his own name at the bank.

The water company kept its deposits in the Third National and claims that in receiving this money and permitting Martin to check against it as he did the bank was guilty of fraud and is liable to the water company.

The bill is said to involve an entirely new theory of law.

New Jersey Banks

According to the quarterly report of State Banking Commissioner Watkins, of New Jersey, the 26 savings banks in New Jersey have $35,555,102 invested in bonds and mortgages; the 75 trust companies have $28,829,051, and 19 state banks have $551,280 invested in the same class of securities. The report shows for the savings banks, $92,489,364 due depositors. The trust companies have $62,900,957 in time deposits, $1,743,535 in time certificates of deposit, $68,940,350 demand deposits, $1,664,243 demand certificates of deposit, $227,448 certified checks, and $362,197 outstanding treasurer's checks. The 19 state banks have demand deposits of $10,059,685, time deposits of $3,110,345, demand certificates of deposit $38,330, time certificates of deposit $76,291 and certified checks $30,084.

The Inter-Mountain State Bank

The Inter-Mountain State Bank of Crawford, Ida., reports capital of $10,000; surplus $1,000 and deposits of $12,000. L. M. Gorton is president; T. L. Worthington, vice-president; H. C. Sims, cashier, and J. D. Patterson, assistant cashier.

A new building is to be erected by the Empire Bank and Trust Company of Lewistown, Mont., at a cost of $30,000.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"

Many of the best literary authorities of the country claim that John Fox, Jr.'s, new novel, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is the greatest novel of the year. It is a love story of fire and passion and deep sentiment amid the feuds and fighting of the Kentucky mountains. The peaceful life of the remote Kentucky mountains, the feuds and fights of the mountaineers, the intensely dramatic trial of Bad Rufe Tolliver and its outcome, with the love story binding it all into one intense romance, are described as only John Fox can describe them. In this, his greatest story, he rises to a power of description, to an expression of dramatic force and profound feeling that make a novel which exceeds in strength and beauty even "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

Of this story the New York Times says: "Mr. Fox has written one of the most charming stories in the world. Here is a romance of the Southern mountains, every page of which is delightful reading, every one of the characters in which—though some are dare-devil outlaws—is a welcomed new acquaintance, and from the reading of which every man and woman must arise with the feeling that the world is still the right sort of a place, and that love and honor are as fine things to-day as they ever were in the most romantic and chivalrous of ages."

Critics generally proclaim it is the greatest of modern novels.

Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The State Savings Bank of Springfield, Mo., has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

Postal Banks Growing

Washington, December 30.—The Philippine scouts are highly commended, the bill to amend the Philippine tariff act now pending in the Senate is endorsed, encouraging progress in the Philippines and the maintenance of peace and order in Cuba throughout the year are announced in the annual report of Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, which was made public to-night.

Reference is made in the report to the bill which passed the House at the last session, but was still pending in the Senate before committee when Congress adjourned, to provide free entry into the United States of Philippine products, with certain exceptions, and free entry of United States products into the Philippine islands, and free trade between the United States and the Philippines without exceptions after April 11, 1909.

The report says the friends of the measure are entirely agreeable to the inclusion of a clause limiting Philippine sugar to be admitted under its provisions to 400,000 tons annually. This, the sugar people admit, would be sufficient to restore some of the former prosperity to the sugar interests in the islands. A reduction of the present duties on tobacco, the report suggests, would afford encouragement of which producers in the islands now stand so seriously in need.

In the postal savings bank part of the Bureau of Posts, there is shown a steady increase of business, and the institution has been well received by all classes. Of the depositors 50 per cent are Americans and 40 Filipinos. The separate deposits range from a few centavos to over 5,000 pesos.

Excess of insular expenditures over revenues during the last fiscal year was $570,524.

"The Marooner" by Charles Frederick Holder

Mr. Holder has given us some of the cleverest books in print on sea faring subjects. "Big Game of the Sea" and "Log of the Sea Anglers" are of the better known. "The Marooners" is a collection of tales, beginning with the capture of an "abandoned ship" off Key West. Then to the Canadian woods where the chapters describe a young painter's life in trying to follow the wonderful changing Lorelei lights over sea and mountains, are beautiful, while the story of the half-frozen newsboy who saw "the sailor man get off the ship at the corner of Broadway," in the great blizzard of 1848, taken by itself is perfect in its way.

Not the least interesting part of the book is the preface, in which the author, (himself an old sailor and ex-midshipman of the United States frigate Dale) who has "known many wreckers, good men and true," tells us that the wreck of the old ship that came across the barrier reef (as described in the story) was visited by himself and could be seen as late as 1867 at Garden Key.

Published by B. W. Dodge & Co., New York.

The Peoples Bank of Muskogee

The Peoples Bank and Trust Co., of Muskogee, Okla., is the title of a new enterprise. Capital $50,000. W. F. Esco is president; J. B. McCullah, vice-president, and J. E. Johnson, cashier.

Half a Million Dollars of Currency Destroyed Yearly

The Treasury reckons that about one-half million dollars' worth of paper currency is lost or destroyed in one way or another in this country every year—that is to say, either lost for all time or else spoiled to such an extent as to be impossible of redemption.

The methods adopted for spoiling money are as queer as they are varied. For example, there was a woman out in Indianapolis, not long ago, who, in some way unexplained, got $10 worth of greenbacks mixed up with the vegetable "greens" which she was preparing for dinner. The notes were boiled to an unrecognizable mass, and the treasury at Washington, to which they were sent in the hope that they might be redeemed, could do nothing with them, being unable to recognize the remains.

Then there was the unhappy father of a Philadelphia urchin, who forwarded by mail a few strips of greenish paper and a score of little pellets of the same material. He explained that they represented $20 in bills, which his boy had torn to pieces, rolling them into balls and blowing them through a glass tube at the family cat, the canary bird and the housemaid. This was not such a hopeless case, and the loser got some of his money back.

"In the Wash," $260

A resident of Rochester sent a mass of pulp which, he said, was $260. He had gone to bed with the money in the breast pocket of his nightie for safe keeping. Next morning he forgot about it and went off to business. Meanwhile his wife sent the night shirt to the laundry, from which it was recovered after being for some time in a revolving cylinder full of water, soap and unasorted garments. On being examined at the treasury those of the bills that were in best condition were found to be split, the faces separated from the backs. Nevertheless, the whole amount was identified and redeemed.

For quite a while a Brooklyn shopkeeper named Brendel was robbed by a mysterious thief. Every night cash amounting to from $1 to $5 was missing from his till. It was always paper money that was taken; the thief did not seem to care for silver. A watch was set, but the stealing went on just the same. One day a carpenter was hired to make some alterations. Incidentally to knocking down a partition he came upon the robber's nest, which contained five young rats and the remains of $60. Part of it was redeemable.

A Goat Ate Thirty Dollars

A farmer, residing near Ogden, Ia., drove into town one day, stopped at the hotel, tied his horses and went into dinner, leaving his coat in the wagon. When he came out he examined the coat and found six $5 bills missing. He accused a passer-by of having stolen the money. The passer-by denied the charge, declaring that the bills had been eaten by a goat. He pointed out the goat and said that he would pay the amount of loss if the cash was not found in the animal's stomach. It was necessary of course, to sacrifice the goat, but sure enough an autopsy disclosed the farmer's "wad," which was forwarded to the treasury.

A stockman near Galveston, Texas, sold a bunch of cattle for $470. He put the amount in a wallet without folding the bills, so that there ends stuck out. Later in the day, while busy at something, he threw his coat upon the ground in a cow lot. Probably the wallet fell out. At all events soon afterward a yearling calf was discovered in the act of eating the money, of which it had already swallowed all but $210. The only way to recover it was to kill the calf, whereupon the $260 extracted from the animal's stomach was sent to Washington. All of it was redeemed.

Burned in Train Wrecks

When there is a railroad collision, followed by fire, the express car is not infrequently destroyed, and with it the express safe containing more or less money. Such safes are not fireproof. It is customary in cases of the kind to forward them bodily to Washington, without opening them. Of all such instances on record the worst one was one in which a few years ago a passenger train and a freight train loaded with coal tried to pass each other on the same track in a tunnel in Kentucky. The experiment was not successful, and the wreckage, with the help of the coal, burned thirty hours, during which the tunnel was a literal furnace. In the express car of the passenger train was a safe containing $1,600, of which amount $700 was eventually redeemed.

The currency of the United States is printed on a very superior and tough quality of linen paper. When burned it does not look like ordinary burned paper, but almost like burned linen cloth. It may be reduced almost to literal ashes, and yet, as above suggested, be not hopeless of identification.

The Boston Money Market

The Boston money market is very quiet, so far as new business is concerned. About the only demand is for call and short time, and for these loans, rates are firmer. Borrowers are somewhat more anxious to protect themselves over the year, and lenders, on the other hand, are more disposed to go strong over that period. Call money ranges from 3 to 3½ per cent. For time money, 4 per cent is practically the minimum for all dates.

The Farmers Savings Bank, of Struble, Ia., is a new institution. Capitalized at $10,000. Henry Becker is president; John McMahon, vice-president, and P. H. Becker, cashier.

Elected President of Detroit Bankers Club

George H. Barbour was elected president of the Bankers' Club, of Detroit, at the annual banquet and meeting at the Hotel Cadillac recently. Mr. Barbour succeeds John H. Johnson, who presided at the event. Col. Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, who was secretary and treasurer of the Bankers Club for eight years, is succeeded by John W. Staley, assistant cashier of the First National. Hamilton Dey was elected vice-president. Emory W. Clark and Charles A. Dean were elected members of the executive committee.

George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National, of Chicago, and formerly a director of the United States mint, was the principal speaker of the evening. To overcome the inelasticity in the national currency system, Mr. Roberts proposed the organization of a central bank of issue.

"There are two general plans for an elastic currency," Mr. Roberts said, "one contemplates issues by all the banks of the national system against their ordinary assets in their own possession, and looks for control to a system of rapid current redemption through a system of clearing houses conveniently located over the country. It has been indorsed by the American Bankers Association, but it is a significant fact that practically all the other important countries of the world have given a deliberate decision against that plan and in favor of the other, and that other is the central bank of issue. Instead of scattering the note-issuing function among a multitude of small banks, it is centralized in one great, strong semiofficial institution, immediately under the eye of the government and under the scrutiny of the whole financial world.

"Whenever a central bank has been proposed for this country, objections have been raised that we have had experience with such an institution; that it got into politics and probably would again; that it would be in the nature of a monopoly, and that we have developed a system of independent local banks and that it would be injurious and unfair to them to establish an overshadowing and competing institution.

"All of these objections, I believe, could be met in the organization. I would not myself advocate the establishment of a central bank as an independent, competing institution; but I believe that it might be organized into the national banking system, as an agency through which that system might perform certain services which the individual banks are not so well qualified to perform.

"The essential feature of the Central bank plan is that of a central organization of some kind, which will stand behind the whole banking and business situation with the power of note issue—the ability to actually increase the supply of lawful money when needed, and to take over the ordinary commercial assets of a bank and advance currency on them. The natural impulse of the scattered banks to take care of themselves always aggravates the dangers of the situation."

One of the Wild Widows

"The Wild Widow" is the title of a new book published by the Empire Book Co., New York. It is English and by an English woman, Gertie de S. Wentworth-James. Concerning it the Cincinnati Times-Star says: "Let us introduce 'The Wild Widow.' She comes from England, where Paul of 'Three Weeks' lived. Gertie de S. Wentworth-James is the authoress. It is frankly an unusual story that comes perilously near the jumping-off place into the realms of unclad and virgin realism. It is passionate, palpitating and ingenious. The plot is unusual and the English readers liked it much."

The Milwaukee Free Press says: "'The Wild Widow' is well named. Katherine Orlison, with her striking looks and red hair, is the adventuress of imagination and originality. Her friend, Honora, was one of the true feminine type, Katherine being one of whom it was sure to be said that the gray mare was the better horse. Between them these ladies contrive to juggle with some of the deadly sins and to fracture several of the commandments, and when at last it turns out that none of the ten is broken beyond repair, nobody will be more justly surprised than the reader of this extraordinary tale."

Insurance of Bank Deposits

"Insurance of Bank Deposits" is the South Dakota idea, to be expressed in a new state law this winter and to be carried to Washington by Governor Coe I. Crawford, who will be elected United States senator at this winter's session of the legislature.

And this is to be recognized as republican doctrine in South Dakota, and will be advocated in the United States senate as republican doctrine when Crawford gets there.

Any charge of inconsistency with, or opposition to the position of President-elect Taft, who vigorously opposed Bryan's bank guaranty scheme, is answered with the declaration that the South Dakota plan is new and distinct from that put forth by the democratic candidate for president.

Governor Crawford, Governor-elect Vessey and other republican leaders of the state are being consulted in the preparation, now going on, of a bill which will give every state bank in South Dakota an opportunity to insure its deposits with the state.

Bryan's plan, like that of Oklahoma, proposes to compel all banks to qualify for a government guaranty of the deposits. The South Dakota law will create a department of bank insurance, probably attached to the office of the state examiner. It will be announced that the state is prepared to insure payment of the deposits of any bank that can pass the required examination. The conditions are expected to be so exacting that none but a perfectly solvent bank can obtain a state policy.

Not Compulsory Guaranty

Governor Crawford recognizes that there is weight in Judge Taft's argument that compulsory guaranty would be unfair to the honest and strong bank, when the reckless or weak bank is given equal protection and thus made equally attractive to depositors.

But it is in the practical administration of the two methods that Governor Crawford and Governor-elect Vessey find the most difference between the plans. Under a compulsory guaranty, each bank would be obliged to pass the examination or go out of business. This would subject the examiner to the alternative of recognizing a bank as entitled to a state guaranty, or of closing its doors. This, it is argued, would prove most embarrassing and could not be operated in justice both to the banks and to the state, for the reason that often banks are not exactly insolvent and yet are in such a condition that the state would be reluctant to assume responsibility to the depositors.

In the case of insurance of bank deposits, however, the examiner could maintain a high standard, by rejecting peremptorily all applications for insurance from banks not in shipshape condition. Thus, it is argued, the system would have the effect not only of placing a premium upon good banking, but of encouraging all banks to better themselves.

"In practical operation," says Governor

Crawford, "insurance of bank deposits would be used quite as extensively as a form of compulsory guaranty. Every bank obtaining a policy from the state would put in its front window a placard something like this:

"'Deposits of this bank insured with the state of South Dakota.'

"And I think it would be found that in a short time its competitor would apply for state insurance. Even the banks in the small towns compete with those in neighboring places, so that a well guarded system of insurance of deposits would speedily be accepted by practically all of the state banks."

The cleverest books come from L. C. Page & Co. of Boston, at this season of the year. One of them is an addition to the famous "Roses of St. Elizabeth Series" and is "O-Heart-San," the story of a Japanese girl. The romance is by Helen Eggleston Haskell, who wrote the famous "Billy's Princess" and the illustrations are all in colors by Frank P. Fairbanks. The heart of any American girl will be delighted with a copy of the beautiful book, and the more beautiful heroine O-Heart-San.

W. S. Monroe, who wrote "Turkey and the Turks" has furnished Page & Co. with "In Viking Land," bound in enameled cover and illustrated very fully by photogravure. Viking Land includes "Norway; its people, its fjords and its fjelds." The illustrations are from special photographs, and help to make the splendid book a complete presentation of this wonderful country with its mountains, ice-fields, water falls and fjords. The human interests are uppermost—the people, their habits, customs, traditions, their developed and developing civilization. The geography of the country gets a special chapter, but the viking age will appeal to most persons as of chief interest. The new kingdom with its new king, are fully and fairly treated. Religious, folklore, music, traditions, literature, painting, sculpture, and the fine arts are interesting subjects faithfully treated. For those who would read further an appendix and annotated bibliography are included. Sells at $3.00.

"The Travel Lover's Library," published by Page & Co., covering a score of countries and cities, has an important edition this year in "Old Edinburgh" in two handsome volumes. The volumes are of Frederick W. Watkey's and contain 82 illustrations from rare and valuable old paintings, prints and from photographs. No city in the world is a serious rival of "Old Edinburgh" in interesting memories. The covers of the two volumes have the Castle in gold with a deep blue sky in enamel. The coat of arms is in its real colors. The volume can have no other effect, more marked, perhaps, than in its stimulating influence upon travel. To read the volume is to want to go to Edinburgh. The author has not attempted a tiresome "whole history" of the famous city but gives the principal and interesting things with an account of the manners and customs of her old-time citizens. Index and bibliography are included. The two splendid volumes are but $3.00.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Jerome, Ida., has been incorporated and is capitalized for $15,000. It is the intention to change to a national bank in the spring. R. S. Fraser is president; J. M. Hall, vice-president; O. Z. Burkhead, cashier; Paul R. Kartzke, secretary. The bank is located in the J. M. Hall building.

The Hudson Realty Company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. Books closed December 21st and reopen January 2d.

CORNER OF GRAND BALL-ROOM

The prospect for the A. B. A. convention to open the New La Salle Hotel with its 1909 Chicago convention looks promising. The dining room features are fifty per cent larger than those of any existing Chicago hotel, and its ball-room is to be in a class by itself. There will be sleeping rooms for 1400 persons and none but bankers permitted to register. If it all works out, the event will be the greatest in the proud history of the American Bankers Association.

American Trust

Takes over the nonsuccessful profit sharing Mutual Savings Bank of this city with its two millions of deposits.

President Edwin A. Potter, of the American Trust and Savings Bank of this city, has announced the taking over of the business and deposits of the Mutual Savings Bank, which was started three years ago upon the profit sharing plan. The merger was approved at the annual meeting of the Mutual directors on Monday and the previously prepared announcements were sent out at once. The terms of the merger were not made public, but Mr. Potter explained that the interests of the Mutual stockholders had been liquidated. The Mutual is capitalized at $250,000, Lawrence Heyworth, the president, being the largest stockholder, with 600 shares of the par value of $100 each.

The total resources of the Mutual amounted in November last to $2,662,773.17, an amount which is approximately the same as the resources of the bank to-day. The total resources of the American Trust amount to $34,631,874.90. The deposits of the Mutual amount to about $2,000,000.

The plan on which the Mutual was based was that after 6 per cent annually had been paid to the stockholders, one-half of the remainder of the earnings for the year should be divided among the stockholders and the depositors. The only payment ever made under this plan, however, was in 1907, when one-half of per cent was divided among the stockholders and the depositors. The Mutual Bank differed from other profit sharing banks in this country in that it had stockholders. It is stated that it was unique among American financial institutions.

Mr. Heyworth will not become an official of the American Trust and Cashier Edgar F. Olson will not take other than temporary employment in helping with the conversion of the business. Wm. J. Henley, a director, will become a director of the American Trust. He is president of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad and will bring strength to the already able board.

The following was in part the formal statement of the Mutual Bank:

"The stockholders and directors of the Mutual Bank have felt for some time that the Mutual plan of dividing profits with depositors, beyond the regular 3 per cent dividends on savings deposits, could not continue and the bank be operated on conservative lines, unless the capital stock be largely increased, which was not an easy task owing to the small promise of dividends to investors who might otherwise feel disposed to buy additional stock, and your stockholders therefore voted to discontinue the profit sharing plan."

The directors of the American Trust are: Joy Morton, E. H. Gary, E. P. Ripley, Theodore P. Shonts, John F. Harris, T. P. Phillips, W. H. McDoel, Charles H. Thorne, E. J. Bufington, William Kent, Gilbert B. Shaw, Benjamin Thomas, James R. Chapman, Edwin A. Potter.

The bank was established in 1889 with a capital stock of $3,000,000. Its surplus and undivided profits December 31, 1907, amounted to $2,000,000. In 1903 it paid 6 per cent dividends and 14 per cent in 1904. In the three succeeding years it paid 8 per cent dividends, and during the year 1907 its stock ranged in price from $275, the high mark, to $200.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE handsomest letter opener ever sent out by a bank is that being distributed by the Drovers Deposit National of this city. R. T. Forbes, president, with the famous bull's head for a handle. The "white face" is perfect and the well known "quick service" monogram of the bank is in gold relief upon an old ivory blade. President Forbes is quite as much of an enthusiast upon the benefits of advertising as upon the subject of golf and trap shooting.

SNELSON CHESNEY, president of National Stock Yards Nat., was in the city for a brief holiday visit. "Deposits high and business booming" is his report.

THE postal bank bill is attracting attention in Missouri and other states where the number of state banks exceed by large figure the number of national banks. The reason is obvious. The redepositing by the government would benefit only the nationals. The following trite opinions from two eminent St. Louis bankers will be read with interest:

CHARLES H. HUTTIG, president Third National, said: "I am opposed to the postal savings bank because it will have a tendency to draw the banking business, an economic enterprise, into politics. I understand it is the plan for the government to redeposit the funds intrusted to it in the national banks. These, in too many cases, depend upon the recommendation of the senators and representatives of their state in order to obtain government deposits. Under an enlarged system of national deposits, increased opportunities for this evil would be offered. I see no reason for any such extraordinary innovation in the banking business of the country. Our present banking institutions, as was shown in the recent severe panic, are perfectly capable of handling the business of the nation. What we need is a few minor reforms in banking and an improved currency system. To this end the Congressional Monetary Commission is at work at present, aided by the Currency Commission of the American Bankers Association."

A. O. WILSON, Vice-President State National, and Treasurer Missouri Bankers Association, said: "There is almost unanimous opposition to the postal savings bank idea on the part of the bankers of Missouri.

"They are agreed in feeling that there is no occasion for the government to enter banking in competition with them, as they feel they are furnishing sufficient banking facilities. The country banks believe they will suffer most under the proposed new system, as the deposits now intrusted to them will be gathered by the government and placed, they fear, in the large city banks.

"Another point is that there are only 110 national banks in Missouri, while there are about 1,000 state banks. The latter would be entirely excluded, I understand, from participation in the deposits of the postal savings banks, and their business could not help but be deeply disturbed. The bankers do not favor any plan which would put the government into the banking business in competition with themselves. If the government is to be in the banking business, receiving deposits, and redepositing or extending loans, serious trouble would certainly be precipitated, especially in view of the political influences which might from time to time enter into the conduct of the affairs of the proposed system."

THE State National, of St. Louis, is taking on new life and now shows deposits of over twelve millions.

DANIEL G. WING, president of the First National, Boston, spent the holidays with his family in Davenport, Iowa, where Mrs. Wing formerly resided. Stopping at Chicago a day on his way back to Boston, Mr. Wing stated that financial conditions were first rate in New England and that the outlook for the future was promising. The First National occupied new banking quarters the first of last July opposite the Federal building, in the heart of Boston's business and financial district. At that time their deposits were $40,000,000; they are now nearly $55,000,000.

PRESIDENT WING is a splendid example of the Western boy who has made his way financially in the East. Formerly Mr. Wing was connected with the First National, at Lincoln, Nebraska, and Charles G. Dawes brought him to the Republican National committee headquarters in 1896 and made him the cashier and accountant of these headquarters when vast sums were being expended in the campaign of that year. After the election and Mr. Dawes was appointed to the comptrollership, Mr. Wing was made bank examiner and assigned to the New England district. At the time of the disastrous failure of the Globe National of Boston, he was placed in charge of the affairs of that institution, and the record made there, as well as the reputation for thorough and efficient service as an examiner, resulted in his being offered the vice-presidency of the old Massachusetts National Bank. Later on he was elected president and brought about a consolidation of two or three of Boston's solid financial institutions under the name of the First National.

OUR old friend John Schuette, of Manitowoc, is commended to the new "Bank Deposit Guarantee Journal," just started at Vinita, Oklahoma, as one of the ablest in the field of writers on deposit insurance. Likewise the new Volume I, Number 1 of the Journal will delight Mr. Schuette.

FIVE states, Indiana, Ohio, Minnesota, Montana and North Dakota, gave their electoral vote to Taft, but elected democratic governors. It is a mystery how Mr. Bryan can fail to understand so strong a hint as to the habitat of the next democratic favorite son.

WHEN your bank gets "anonymous" letters don't hire a private detective agency unless you want the letters to continue. This is one way of promoting business and works well upon sensitive society women and elderly rich men. Banks ought to know better. "Attempts" upon bank safes and private houses often are made in the interests of the "private watch" service.

H. N. TINKER, the active vice-president of the Union Bank & Trust Company of Houston, reports a prosperous year for his bank and for the Southwest generally.

I. B. TIGNETT, over at Jackson, Tenn., has a bank of the same name as Mr. Tinker's and reports much the same for his state in the way of good times. Bear these two young men in mind—Tignett and Tinker. They both have big futures.

THE Jefferson County Savings Bank, of Birmingham, Ala., is a gem or a gold mine, as you choose. It has $100,000 capital with a surplus of nearly double that amount. The deposits are a million and a quarter and the rate on savings is 4 per cent. The dividends are 12 per cent a year. Christian F. Enslen is president and Eugene F. Enslen is cashier.

THE name of a bank and the name of its location seldom smack so much of novelty as do these: Tishomingo Banking Co. of Iuka, Miss. The bank is but two and one-half years old but makes a good report. On a capital of $25,000 the deposits are above a hundred thousand and "no overdrafts allowed."

THIS is the way President James H. Faircloth writes of his bank: "Open for business two years and five months, paid five semi-annual dividends of 5 per cent each, do not try to do all the business in North Mississippi, but always take care of such business as is safe and profitable. We issue no interest bearing certificates, have never restricted payments at any time, always meet every demand promptly, receive deposits payable only on demand, create no enterprise, but foster at all times legitimate enterprise to that extent that is conservative and safe, always looking to the end that it must be a SUCCESS and not a FAILURE, and assisting all customers in a safe way as to counsel and advice together with their reasonable wants as to means when needed. We desire the name of every man, woman and child in Tishomingo county to be on our books. If you have no account with us, start one at once, we can help you, and you can help us."

CASHIER.

Chicago Board of Trade Election

John A. Bunnell, of the firm of Hately Bros., Monday was unanimously elected president of the Chicago Board of Trade to succeed Hiram N. Sager, who has held the office for two terms. He received 925 votes.

John C. F. Merrill, of Merrill & Lyon, defeated R. D. Richardson for second vice-president, the vote standing 556 to 341.

There were ten candidates for the five directorships, those chosen to serve for three years, with the vote cast, being James C. Murray, 682; Ernest G. Brown, 575; C. F. Schneider, 492; John C. Wood, 491, and Charles P. Randall, 490. The defeated candidates were James Pettit, James B. Carter, Mark Bates, Willis Counselman, and Edward P. McKenna.

On Trial Second Time

Pittsburgh, January 4.—J. B. F. Rinehart, former cashier and vice-president of the defunct Farmers and Drovers' National of Waynesburg, Pa., was placed on trial in the United States District Court to-day and a jury to try the case was secured during the first hour. When Rinehart was tried a few weeks ago in the County Court of his home town on a forgery charge growing out of the bank wrecking, three days were occupied in securing a jury and 300 men were summoned in the several venires. The jury finally disagreed and a mistrial resulted. It was charged in open court after the jury disagreed that some of the jurors had been bribed.

The New Nebraska Banking Bill

Lincoln, Neb., January 4. Notice has been given out that a new banking bill is to be offered in the senate at an early session by Senator Volpp of Sumner. The movement is intended to forestall a guaranty act which is threatened. The new bill will put a stop to all wildcat and private banking and has a depositors' protective feature. Some of the main features of the bill are:

Banking Board Established

Section I. There is hereby provided and established, a state banking board, with full power to grant charters to banking corporations in accordance with the provisions and requirements hereinafter set forth, or to refuse applications therefor when it shall appear in their judgment that the applicants therefor are unfit persons to conduct a banking business; to have general supervision and control over any and all corporations, partnerships, firms or individuals heretofore granted charters empowering them to conduct a banking business, or which may hereafter be allowed charters for the transaction of such business under the laws of this state; to appoint a secretary and such other clerical help as may be needed in the administration of the office; to appoint a corps of examiners of such number and ability as will enable them to thoroughly inspect all banks as hereinafter provided; to appoint such special agents as may be necessary in the closing up of the business of insolvent banks, and to levy and collect such assessments from the banks as may be necessary under the provisions hereinafter made and provided for the purpose of protecting depositors of failed banks from loss.

The membership of such board shall be comprised of the governor, the treasurer and the attorney-general of this state, all of whom shall hold such membership ex officio by virtue of their respective offices. Such banking board shall hold regular meetings at least once each month, and may be convened in special session at any time upon call of the president thereof. The governor of this state shall be ex officio the president of the state banking board and a majority of such board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Private Banking Under the Ban

Sec. II. Every corporation, partnership, firm or individual transacting a banking business under the laws of and within the state, and every building and loan association, and every other corporation, partnership, firm or individual attempting to, or pretending to receive moneys from the public and to care for such moneys in a fiduciary capacity, shall be subject to the provisions of this act, and regulated by the state banking board.

Sec. V. It shall be unlawful for any concern in this state to receive deposits, issue exchange, or in any way conduct a banking business without first having obtained from the state banking board, a charter as hereinafter provided, which charter shall be issued only to corporations organized for the specific purpose of conducting a banking business. No charter shall hereafter be issued unless the corporation applying therefor has an actual paid-in capital stock as follows, to-wit:

In towns or villages having a population of 500 or less, not less than $15,000.00.

Severe Penalties Provided

Sec. VI. Any corporation, partnership, firm or individual attempting to transact a banking business, or to conduct a Building and Loan Association, or any other business involving the receiving of moneys from the public, and purporting to hold such moneys or credits therefor in a fiduciary capacity, not so chartered as set forth in Section V of this Act, unless already established prior to the taking effect of the same, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be subject to a fine of fifty dollars per day, for each day it may attempt to transact such business. The fine or penalty herein provided shall be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction, and it is hereby made the duty of the attorney-general to enforce the fine or penalty herein provided.

But the officer administering the oath or affirmation to the person verifying such report shall be in no way interested in such bank as a stockholder, partner, member of the firm, or bank officer.

Examiners to be Bankers

Sec. X. The State Banking Board shall appoint suitable persons, each having had at least three years' experience in the banking business, or with the affairs of the State Banking Department, to make an examination of and into the affairs of every bank, and every corporation, partnership, firm or individual transacting a banking business in this state, as often as shall be deemed necessary and proper, and not less than twice each year. But no person shall be appointed to examine the affairs of any corporation, partnership, firm or individual transacting a banking business, of which institution such person is a stockholder, officer, partner, member of firm, or employee. The number of such examiners to be appointed shall be left to the discretion of the State Banking Board, and they may also dismiss any examiner from his official position at any time for any cause excepting his political affiliation, it being the intention of this act to make such position of examiner nonpolitical.

Sec. XII. Examiners appointed under the provisions of this act shall receive compensation as follows: For the first year of service, eighteen hundred dollars ($1,800.00), and for each additional year of service thereafter an increase of salary per annum of one hundred dollars, until a maximum salary of two thousand four hundred dollars is reached. Provided, that in the event any bank shall become insolvent, and it is shown that the examiner or examiners who, during the two years prior to insolvency, examined such bank, failed to discover irregularities which existed at the time of such examination, the salary of such examiners shall not receive the increase herein provided, but instead shall be decreased for the year following, by one hundred dollars,—all this to be done by a vote of the State Banking Board upon a showing of the facts in the case. In addition to the compensation of the examiners above provided to be paid, the actual traveling expenses of the examiners incurred in the discharge of their duties, not to exceed six hundred dollars ($600.00) per annum, shall be paid out of the "Banking Fund" of the State of Nebraska.

Banks to Pay Pro Rata

Sec. XIV. It is hereby declared the intention of this act, that all the expenses connected with the administration of the Banking Department of this state, including the examination, supervision, and regulation of banks, shall be borne by the several banks in proportion to their average deposits for the year preceding. At the beginning of each year, the State Banking Board shall make an estimate of the amount necessary to defray all the expenses for the year ensuing, and shall thereupon levy an assessment against all the banks of this state, operating under the laws of Nebraska, sufficient to meet such estimated expense, and the several banks shall thereupon remit such amount to the treasurer of the state of Nebraska, and he shall place the amounts so received in a fund known as "Banking Fund," and from this fund, all expenditures are to be made during the current year. And the State Banking Board shall have authority to levy a special fund, if such "Banking Fund" be depleted, in an amount in their judgment sufficient to meet expenses to the close of the current year.

Sec. XV. Every bank, corporation, partnership, firm or individual transacting a banking business within this state, shall at all times have on hand as a reserve against deposit liability, in available funds, fifteen per cent of the aggregate amount of such deposit liability. Two-fifths of such fifteen per cent must be in actual cash in the vaults of the bank, and the balance of the amount of reserve required over the amount of actual cash on hand, may be deposited, subject to withdrawal on demand, with solvent banks approved by the State Banking Board. Provided, that before any bank may be approved as a reserve agent, it must show to the State Banking Board, satisfactory evidence of its ability and fitness to so act as a reserve depository, and at all times maintain such cash balances as will justify its position as reserve agent for other banks.

The Declaration of Dividends

Sec. XX. Any corporation, partnership, firm or individual transacting a banking business may semiannually declare a dividend of so much of the net profits as it, they, or he may judge expedient, but before the declaration of such dividend such bank shall charge to the account of profits all bad or doubtful paper listed in its bills receivable, and provided, that such corporation, partnership, firm or individual shall before the declaration of a dividend, carry one-tenth part of its net profits to its surplus fund until the same shall amount to twenty per centum of its paid up capital stock.

Sec. XXV. It shall be unlawful for two or more banks, transacting a banking business in the same city, town or village in this state to have or use the same name, or names so nearly alike as to cause confusion in transacting business, and in all cases where such a similarity of names now exists, or may hereafter exist, complaint may be made to the State Banking Board and if, in the judgment of said board, such a similarity does exist, and does create confusion in conducting the business of either or both of said banks, then said board may require the junior bank in time of organization to so change or modify its name as to prevent such confusion, and the change of name so made shall be approved by said banking board.

Depositors' Protective Fund

Sec. XXXIV. The State Banking Board shall provide for the establishment of a fund to be known as the "Depositors' Protective Fund," to which incorporated banks meeting the requirements hereinafter set forth may subscribe, and the purpose of which fund shall be to protect the depositors of insolvent banks, subscribing to such fund, from loss. At the first meeting of the Banking Board provided herein, and at each regular meeting thereafter, they shall consider the applications of banks desiring to participate in such protective fund, and shall admit to participation therein, such incorporated banks as meet the requirements hereinafter set forth, and which in their judgment are solvent and capably managed, and they shall thereupon levy against each of the banks so admitted, an assessment of one per centum of its average deposits as shown by the four statements last preceding. The assessment so levied shall be paid by each bank from its undivided profits account, and be placed upon the books of such bank to the credit of the Treasurer of Nebraska, "for account Depositors' Protective Fund" and shall be subject to withdrawal upon the order of the treasurer, countersigned by the President and Secretary of the State Banking Board.

Sec. XXXV. The State Banking Board may admit to privileges of the "Depositors' Protective Fund" and issue a certificate of such membership only to banks meeting the following requirements, to-wit:

(a) Such bank must be incorporated, and its articles or a certified copy thereof on file and approved by the State Banking Board.

(b) It must have a paid up capital of not less than fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000.00) and a surplus fund of not less than twenty per centum of its capital.

(c) It must have not less than five directors, each of whom shall own in his own name not less than ten shares of stock of said bank, none of which ten shares shall be pledged or hypothecated for the security of any debt, and it must be shown to the satisfaction of the State Banking Board that suitable loan and auditing committees have been appointed and perform their duties with care and regularity.

(d) It must show to the satisfaction of the State Banking Board that no money has been loaned to its active managing officers, including president, vice-president (when active), cashier, or assistant cashier. It must furthermore show that all loans to directors are approved by the entire board of directors, and such approval made a matter of record on the minutes of the said board of directors.

(e) It must show that its combined capital and surplus are at least ten per cent of its gross deposits.

(f) It must show to the satisfaction of the State Banking Board, that no loan to any single person, firm, partnership, or corporation exceeds twenty per cent of its combined capital and surplus, and in considering such loan as to excess, there shall be grouped together all loans made to groups of persons or corporations so closely affiliated as to constitute practically the same risk.

(g) Such bank shall agree, not thereafter to pay a higher rate of interest than may be permitted to be paid, under orders of the State Banking Board, which rate and the conditions under which interest is to be paid shall be fixed by said State Banking Board, and shall be uniform throughout the state, and shall not in any case exceed four (4) per cent.

In considering the qualifications set forth above, the State Banking Board may accept the sworn statements of the active officers of such

All Building Records Broken in Chicago

While the real estate market reflected the depressed conditions which prevailed in business circles generally during the year, building with which it closely is correlated, not only showed a large gain over the figures for the previous year, but also broke all previous building records in the history of the city. It is under the circumstances little less than marvelous and goes to show how rapidly the city has grown even in the face of greatly depressed business conditions.

The year 1906 held the best previous record with a total of 64,298,335, exceeding by less than $1,000,000 the great world's fair building record of 1892, which amounted to $63,463,400. The year 1905 was close up with a total of $63,455,000, while 1907 was looked upon as making an excellent showing with $59,065,000.

This, however, will be over $8,000,000 behind the figures for last year, which will reach the huge total of $67,237,190, and when it is considered that the cost of building materials during the year has been about 15 per cent less than during 1907, the actual gain in the volume of the year's building as compared with 1907 has been about $17,000,000, or a total of about $76,000,000 as compared with the standards of 1907.

Albert S. Cox

Albert S. Cox, cashier of the Merchants National, New York, spent a day in Chicago recently en route home from a trip through the Northwest. Mr. Cox is the convention "goer" for the Merchants National and is a very popular and welcome visitor to all of the conventions.

First National's Year

The annual report of the First National, of Chicago, which owns the First Trust and Savings Bank, was issued Friday by President J. B. Forgan. The profits of the two institutions roundly were as follows:

First National ..... $1,440,000
First Trust and Savings Bank ..... 850,000

Total profits ..... $2,290,000

Inasmuch as the earnings of both institutions are applicable to the stock of the First National, or surplus of the First Trust, the earnings are equal to 28 per cent on the $8,000,000 capital of the First National.

Mr. Forgan announces in the annual report that beginning April 1st, it is contemplated paying quarterly dividends on First National stock of 1 per cent out of profits of the First Trust, which will place the First National on a 16 per cent dividend basis.

The First National added $480,000 to its profit and loss account, while the surplus of the First Trust was increased to an amount equal to the capital and there remained a balance of $205,000 to the credit of profit and loss.

The Colton (S. D.) State Bank, which was recently burned out, will rebuild.

Chicago Banks

Banking in Chicago for 1908 was almost without a demerit mark. There were no failures, as usual, and the public was given every reason for a continuation of confidence in her splendid financial institutions.

Prices of the Chicago bank stocks advanced during 1908 to an extent which indicated recovery of confidence in bank share investments. Throughout the depression there were few sales of such stocks, although the bid and asked prices dropped from forty to sixty points. Interest rates during the year were low, and necessarily the profits to be shown on the occasion of the annual meetings will be much below those of 1907.

Clearings of Chicago banks showed no special improvement over last year until the month of November, when, instead of a decrease, such as was recorded for previous months, there was a gain of $198,672,000, or 24.1 per cent. For the month of December, partly estimated, there was a gain of $364,390,650, or 44.7 per cent. The record of clearings must be accepted as evidence of the return of normal business conditions.

The national banks of Chicago showed large improvement in the matter of deposits compared with the previous year. The last report to the comptroller was made as of November 27th. The gain in deposits was over $11,000,000 compared with the figures of July 15th. Prior to the latter date, however, the banks had already begun to show recovery over the previous year.

In the matter of cash resources the percentage of increase as compared with July was much larger than the growth in deposits.

The state banks did not show such speedy recovery as characterized the national institutions. They took advantage of the law which allowed them to demand thirty and sixty days' notice of intended withdrawals of deposits.

The savings depositor, being usually a small capitalist was much more disturbed by inability to procure money due him than was the depositor in the national banks. But as the year wore on the savings depositors recovered confidence and the state banks began to show marked improvement.

The bank clearings of Chicago are now overtopping the highest record previously made. New York is also passing its old record and throughout the country different important centers are showing exchanges in excess of previous high marks.

Chicago Stock Exchange

Business on the Chicago Stock Exchange for the year 1908 was active. This was especially true of the bond department, where the sales were $15,261,000, or almost 100 per cent better than the previous year.

The stock dealings, however, in the matter of shares, were but a little ahead of 1907.

An increase in business followed the removal of the exchange to its new quarters. About that time the Chicago Railways securities began to be traded in and the bonds have since proved the feature of the market so far as volume of transactions is concerned. At the same time they showed large appreciation in values.

Chicago Wholesale Trade

The Tribune estimates the wholesale trade of Chicago last year at $1,684,057,000 against $1,828,977,000 the previous year and value of local manufactures $1,598,147,500, against $1,865,959,100.

Ohio Banking News

The Cincinnati market for securities during 1908 was spasmodic, the spurts of activity being coincident with the quarterly periods of dividend and interest disbursements, except that during the last quarter, or more particularly since the election, there have been evidences of a little more permanence to the trading. It has been a better year than 1907, not so much because of the demand for stocks, which was but a little greater than the demand during 1907, but because the public has been seeking good, safe investments, which has resulted in a strong bond market, and aggregate sales almost $2,500,000 greater than in 1907.

Toledo Business

Business in general in Toledo during the year 1908 shows a considerable decrease from that of the previous year. Conservative business men estimate the slump at about 12 per cent. The falling off of business was perceptible soon after the first of 1908 and until October and November.

Stock market operations for the past year have been way off, especially during the first nine months. This branch of business seems to have suffered more than any other. Toledo dealers are pleased with the outlook and predict a prosperous new year.

The recent business depression struck a severe blow to real estate dealers and builders. Under normal conditions the new building valuation of Toledo for 1908 could not have equaled the record for 1907. The sixteen-story Nicholas Building and the twelve-story Ohio Building were built during 1907, enabling that year to break all records. The renewed activity that is now apparent promises a banner year for 1909 in new buildings for Toledo.

Conditions Fine in Cleveland

In the bank clearings figures for December and for the year are an index to the city's business conditions. The year as a whole shows a decline from $897,170,784 in 1907 to $749,846,710 in 1908 in the bank exchanges in Cleveland. At the same time the December clearings were $67,495,850, as against $63,784,627 last year.

The business year started with depression everywhere. It ends with manufacturers, merchants and bankers confident. The effects of the early months' dullness in all lines was not fully overcome, and the decline in business activity for the year as a whole has been estimated at 15 per cent, a figure which the bank clearings report closely follows.

The Columbia Bank and Savings Company

The Columbia Bank and Savings Company, of Cincinnati, has declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent and an extra dividend of 3 per cent on all stocks, payable January 15, 1909, to stock of record December 28, 1908. The capital of the bank is $100,000 and the surplus is $200,000.

First National of Cleveland

The First National, of Cleveland, declared its second semiannual dividend of 2 per cent, payable January 15th.

The Cincinnati Banks

The banks of Cincinnati during the past year added to their reputation for conservative and safe business methods. They passed through the trying months of money stringency and industrial depression with scarcely a strain and emerged from those trials without blemish, and every one to-day presents a stronger statement than a year ago.

There are at this time nine national banks and trust companies in Cincinnati and suburbs. There were 11 national banks a year ago, but in the past 12 months the Third and Fifth consolidated into the Fifth-Third and later absorbed the American. The state banks and trust companies are the same as a year ago.

By the statements issued in response to the calls of the Comptroller of Currency and of the Auditor of State for November 27, 1908, these banks show the following aggregate:

Capital $18,055,700, compared with $18,175,477 in 1907.

Surplus and undivided profits $14,695,535, compared with $14,545,070 in 1907.

Total cash reserves $24,308,982, compared with $20,353,771 in 1907.

Total assets $161,989,649, compared with $160,496,945 in 1907.

As indicating the part these banks have taken in the business operations of the city and surrounding country the past year, the report of the clearing house shows bank exchanges aggregating $1,230,180,300, compared with $1,361,879,950 in 1907. The smaller clearings in 1908 fairly well represent the contraction of trade and industry in this territory in 1908 as compared with 1907.

Columbus Banks

Though a gradual resumption of business along good-time lines is now in progress in Columbus the year 1908 has shown a substantial decrease compared with 1907. The total bank clearings for the year, as shown by the clearing house, speak eloquently of the decline in general business. At the close of the year they show a total of $253,756,600 as compared with $284,670,800 in 1907. This is $30,914,200 less than for 1907, and is also $20,425,000 less than in 1906.

Mills and factories have been the hardest hit, and, though few of them have been entirely closed down, none of them is yet running its full complement of men.

hand, have declined  $33\frac{1}{2}$  per cent from the value of the output of 1907, when manufactured products amounted to about \$56,000,000.

Building operations for 1908, except on a small scale, were entirely arrested.

The year begins under more favorable auspices. Money is easy at the banks and is seeking investment. While no boom has commenced, manufacturers report an increase in orders and a growing demand for their products, while their old men are daily returning to work. Bankers are asking for good loans, and merchants are much encouraged at the outlook for the next few months.

The Market National

The directors of the Market National, of Cincinnati, have added $50,000 to the surplus out of the undivided profits. This makes the undivided profits fund aggregate $350,000.

The State Bank of Castle Rock

The State Bank of Castle Rock, Colo., reports capital of $10,000. Andrew Nickson is president; Samuel R. Ditmars, vice-president, and M. J. Casey, cashier.

Indianapolis and Indiana Banking News

By CHARLES REMINGTON

The volume of business done in Indianapolis and the entire state in 1908, does not compare favorably with that of 1907. Some lines have made gains, many have about held their own, but most of them show a loss.

Inquiries in the wholesale district at Indianapolis disclose conditions that are far from satisfactory and that the year has been a hard one with many concerns, particularly those that handle goods used by manufacturers.

The last two months of 1908 will compare very favorably with the same period of 1907, as business is now on the up grade not only in Indianapolis, but in the other larger cities where the depression has been felt because of the closing down of many factories.

The report of the Indianapolis Clearing House Association for the year 1908 shows that the clearings of the Indianapolis banks amounted to $380,372,084.08. The clearings last year were $399,269,144.38. While the report shows a net loss of about $19,000,000 on the year, the clearings for December, 1908, are $37,171,871.73, against $25,224,323.91 for the same month last year.

In financial circles there is a feeling that is decidedly optimistic. There is plenty of money in the banks and loans are being made on good security at a moderate rate of interest. There is no longer any trouble in obtaining an abundance of money for legitimate business enterprises in Indiana.

Reports compiled by the city building inspector show that building operations were but $73,000 less than they were in 1907, and that permits were issued for more new buildings than last year. The permits for this December amounted to $282,640, against $79,808 for December, 1907.

Hammond Banks Consolidate

The First National of Hammond took over the Commercial Bank of the same place last week and began business upon the new basis Monday. A. M. Turner, president of the First National, will be retained in his position, while Thomas Hammond, former president of the Commercial will be made vice-president of the new corporation. W. C. Belman will remain as cashier.

The merging of the banks places the First National at the head of the list of northern Indiana banks. It now has a capital stock of $150,000, a surplus of $100,000, and deposits to the amount of $1,500,000.

J. W. Dyer, formerly cashier of the Commercial Bank, has announced his retirement from banking.

The Petroleum Bank

The Petroleum Bank has opened for business.

The bank starts out with a capital of $13,500 and the stockholders of the bank represent nearly $1,000,000 in property. This will make the institution one of the strongest in the state. It will also be a good thing for Petroleum, as the people in that vicinity can do their banking at home instead of coming to Bluffton to do it.

The stockholders in the institution are: Amos R. Williams, Levi Dulinsky, Henry C. Schott, Lewis A. Nutter, Henry E. Johns, Samuel Warner, William C. Johnson, Sanford H. Templin, John E. Kirkwood, Samuel Burgess, George Kirkwood, J. J. Borrer, Frank G. Haecker, Byron Witmer, Joseph P. Lockwood, Henry C. Arnold, Samuel Bender, William A. Kunkel, R. S. Todd, and Albert B. Cline.

Outline of Accounting Bill

The outline of a bill for a law to provide for a uniform system of accounting in all public offices in Indiana was adopted at Indianapolis last week at a meeting between the representatives of the Indianapolis Merchants Association, the various county and township officers' associations and Senator Ezra Mattingly, of Washington, who probably will have charge of the legislation.

The law is to mark the beginning of a very important reform in the conduct of public offices. It is to be drawn so that the same system of accounting will prevail in every county, and so that grafting will be almost impossible.

Under the present lack of system at least half of the counties recently have been involved in some sort of scandal by their public officials. Probably no two countries have the same method of bookkeeping, and each official has been free to follow his own ideas.

The provisions of the bill were read by Charles Hanna, former superior court judge. The bill provides for a state examiner of accounts, to be appointed by the governor. The state examiner shall organize a department of examination. There shall be two chief deputies, representing the opposite political parties. Field examiners will be named.

The governor, auditor of state and state examiner shall constitute a commission to work out a uniform system of accounting, the nature of which shall be determined by them.

The representatives of the County Officers' Association said that they favored the bill. They will help work out some of the details. All of the organizations have appointed committees to take part in the discussion of the measure.

Deeds Over Farm to Bank

Abe Brubaker, former cashier of the Kosciusko County Bank of Warsaw, which was closed six months ago by the state, when the institution was found to be insolvent and failing, and who was one of the heaviest stockholders, has deeded over to the bank his farm of about ninety-six acres, located north of Warsaw, and which was valued at $9,000. The bank must make a full settlement with its depositors within one year from the time Warren Darst, of Oxford, O., was named as trustee of the institution. Nearly seven months of this time has already expired, and 45 per cent has been paid to depositors, with the probability that another dividend of 15 per cent will be paid soon.

It is expected that the other $150,000,000 will be printed by February 15th. The expense of printing the currency, counting it, and storing it is borne by the banks. An emergency force of ten clerks, counting this money, has been at work over three months.

Philadelphia Banking News

By J. IRVING COOPER

Neither aggregate dividends paid nor earnings of the Philadelphia trust companies in 1908 amounted to quite so much as in 1907. They paid dividends amounting to $3,722,967 in 1908, or 8½ per cent on $43,470,000 capital; in 1907, $4,019,939, or 9.3 per cent; and in 1906, $3,639,939, or 9 per cent. The highest rate paid by any one company is 28 per cent. The net earnings of all companies applied to payment of dividends and carried to credit of undivided profits or surplus account aggregated 11 per cent in 1908, against 12 per cent in 1907 and 18 per cent in 1906. A slight gain in average book value of the trust company shares is indicated for the year, due to the comparatively small accretions to surplus account in 1908.

Philadelphia Building

The total estimated cost of all building begun during last year was $28,408,580. Although this is considerably less than the figures of the last few years, when the building boom was at its height, the record is considered a remarkably good one when the severe financial depression which has prevailed during the last year is taken into consideration.

In all there were 8,809 permits granted for 13,950 separate operations. As usual more money was expended upon the erection of two-story houses than for any other class of buildings, there being 1,049 permits issued for 5,405 houses, estimated to cost $10,380,450. In 1907 there were 7,317 two-story houses built at a cost of $13,385,135.

The officers of the Central National of Philadelphia received many congratulations from visitors on the opening of business in their handsome new quarters in the Lafayette Building. The desks of President Elliott and Cashier William Post were covered with flowers sent in by friends of the institution.

The Real Estate Trust Company

All arrangements have been completed for the erection of a seventeen-story addition to the office building of the Real Estate Trust Company, of Philadelphia, at the southeast corner of Broad and Chestnut streets. The plans are now being drawn by Frank C. Roberts & Co. and Edgar V. Seeler, and work will be started next summer.

The addition will be built on the property at 1338 Chestnut Street, which the Real Estate Trust Company bought eighteen months ago from Abner H. Mershon for $500,000. As the lot has a frontage of only 22 feet and a depth of 159 feet, the price paid was at the rate of $22,725 a front foot, which is the highest figure ever obtained for Philadelphia real estate.

The plans call for a building designed in the same style as the present Real Estate Trust Building. The first floor will contain a store or brokers' offices, being finished in accordance with the wishes of the tenant, and will extend the full depth of the lot. The sixteen upper stories will extend only a distance of 52 feet back from Chestnut Street, leaving the remainder of the space vacant in order to allow ample light for the present offices.

Adds Special Banking Department

Samuel A. Boyle, Jr., & Co., of Philadelphia, are now in their new offices at 141 South Fifteenth Street. The firm has added a special banking and bond department, and hereafter will engage extensively in the bond business. They are also contemplating keeping open at nights for the convenience of their depositors.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Bank elections have begun in the Twin Cities and will continue until January 12th. The Minneapolis State Bank, a new institution, expects to elect B. W. Smith, president of the City Sash & Door Company, as president. The bank has under consideration a change of location. The stockholders of the Metropolitan State elected directors on January 5th, who will meet on January 12th, to elect officers. Few changes are expected in the banks as a rule, although some of the smaller institutions have decided upon several substitutions. The Germania Bank will consider a new location and increase in capital. At the Minnesota National meeting the subject of new location, increase of capital, initiation of dividend payments, and other important matters will be discussed. At the People's a president will be elected to succeed the late H. G. Merritt.

The First National of Minneapolis went on a 10 per cent basis by declaring a quarterly dividend of 2 1/2 per cent. The bank has been paying 8 per cent. The gain in deposits for the year was reported to the directors at $6,500,000, or a total deposit of $20,500,000.

At the meeting of the Northwestern National directors their attention was called to the fact that 1908 had been one of the most remarkable years in the history of the institution. The volume of business handled amounted to $1,387,981,000, or more than the clearings for all the banks. The Security National declared a quarterly dividend of 12 per cent and the Germania one at the rate of 8 per cent.

At the Northwestern National deposits, the number of depositors, and the number of employees have doubled in the year. Two new receiving tellers were appointed January 1st. The bank distributed $7,000 in gratuities to clerks. For service up to 5 years the basis of distribution is 5 per cent of annual salaries, for 5 years and over, 7 1/2 per cent, for ten years and over, 10 per cent. The Northwestern National is extending its banking room to the front of the building. Since the bank was built the front ground floor has been used for offices and for a directors' room, and the banking room was thus without opening to the outside except through a long lobby. Half of the work is completed and the appearance of the bank room is much improved. A total of 2,700 square feet will be added.

Minneapolis Bank Clearings

Minneapolis bank clearings for 1908 were less than for 1907. The total is considered creditable inasmuch as two of the largest banks were removed from the clearing house association membership by absorption by another bank. The clearings for the year were $1,057,468,860. For 1907 they were $1,145,462,149. The city remains in the billion dollar class which it entered one year ago. The December clearings were $98,403,704 as compared with $102,246,014 a year ago when the grain movement was late in the year.

Bond Holding State

Minnesota ranks as one of the heaviest bond holding states in the union; something like $10,000,000 in all. State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart included in his receipts due for January 1st, $39,925 interest due on Massachusetts bonds and $31,175 on Virginia bonds. Interest on bonds for Delaware, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, and other states is now due.

A "Frost" Story

Secretary C. R. Frost of the Interstate Protective Association has one on Jimmie Gaynor, known as the king yeggman of the country. Jimmie is in jail at Olivia awaiting trial for the robbery of the State Bank of Danube on October 6th, the swag being $2,234. With him are three other men.

The joke came about in this way. Frost was waiting for a train at the Minneapolis union station. He had half an hour and decided to stroll over to a hang-out where he thought he might find some of his quarry. Sure enough there was Jimmie Gaynor behind the stove smoking a pipe.

"Well, hello, Jimmy," said Frost. Have a ginger ale?"

Jimmy was willing.

"We didn't get you, Jimmy, for that last job where we had you vagged until we could look up evidence."

"No," said Jimmy.

"Well, we'll get you yet, Jimmy," said Frost, and he went out.

Secretary Frost is a great huncher. The Danube job worried him several weeks. He couldn't help thinking about Jimmy, Pit Slim, and some of the other boys who hadn't been doing anything for some time. He sent up one of the shrewdest association detectives to Danube and told him to root around until he connected somebody with the job. The result was that Jimmie Gaynor, Ex Baxter, John Collins and William Streeter were taken from Sioux Falls, S. D., where they were being held under sentence for misdemeanor.

The Minneapolis Trust Company

Booth & Company

Stockholders of A. Booth & Co., through their protective committee, on Monday made a formal offer of terms for settlement with the creditors' committee representing the banks, who are the largest creditors of the fish company.

The protective committee holds that the indebtedness due the banks on loans is roundly $5,000,000. The committee offers to pay these notes on the basis of 40 cents on the dollar, not in cash, however, but in 5 per cent twenty year first mortgage bonds. It was given out that so far as the banks are concerned the offer will not be accepted.

Rugby Bank Closes

Washington, January 4.—The First National of Rugby, N. D., closed its doors to-day by order of its own directors, and the Comptroller of the Currency has appointed George W. Swords as receiver. The bank has a capital of $250,000 and deposits to the amount of $249,468. The bank was in trouble some months ago and its failure is no surprise to the treasury officials.

Peoples Trust Dividend

The Peoples Trust & Savings bank of Clinton, Ia., J. H. Ingwersen, president, at the annual meeting January 5th added $10,000 to surplus making that sum $235,000. A six per cent dividend was declared, 3 per cent payable at once and 3 per cent on April 1st. Under Mr. Ingwersen's direction the bank has made most substantial gains.

Increase in Bank Note Circulation

There was an increase last month of nearly 14 million dollars in the amount of national bank notes in circulation, based on government bonds. The total of bank notes now outstanding is 667 million dollars, 13 millions less than a year ago.

The Farmers State Bank of Harvey

The new Farmers State Bank of Harvey, N. D., reports capital of $25,000 with the following officers: F. O. Brewster as president; Hugh Montgomery, vice-president; L. W. Miller, cashier, and J. A. Dolesley, assistant cashier.

Bank Examiners Hear Reports

Following a plan arranged by Comptroller of the Currency Lawrence O. Murray, the first meeting of the national bank examiners in the newly assigned district of the middle west was held Wednesday in the federal building in this city. Reports were read on conditions of banks in the district, and methods of bank examinations were given consideration.

Deposits of $741,550,329 Held by Chicago Banks are the Largest Total on Record

The immense growth of banks in Chicago during 1908, as indicated by the expansion of deposits, shows conclusively that these institutions have not only the good-will of the community served from this center, but that confidence in their stability has turned to them much additional business since the panic broke a year ago last fall.

Not only have a greater number of interior banks placed their funds in more liberal amounts on deposit with the banks at this center, feeling perfectly safe in so doing, but business interests, large and small and extending far beyond the former boundaries of limitation, have sent business to Chicago banks direct during the past twelve months, and where it has been shown that the banks have exhibited marked expansion in certain lines of their pursuit it may be said that the growth is new business in the full sense of the word without the slightest semblance of exaggeration. The Chicago banks are as strong as the rock of Gibraltar.

There are no banks in Chicago that will back "wildcat" schemes or lend their name and assistance to further projects of that nature. This is conclusive in that no local institution went down in the crashes of last year, which uncovered methods of that character practiced by banks in some cities elsewhere.

Deposits held by Chicago banks at the close of 1908 top all previous records in the annals of the city.

At the end of November the official reports of all banks show deposits aggregating $741,550,329, and these figures, which appear to have grown even larger during the last month of the period, represent an increase of $73,500,000 since February, 1908, a space of only a few months.

Cash resources of all the banks combined reached nearly $300,000,000, which is an immense holding against the deposit liability. The gain in that item since February was nearly $37,000,000.

The loan account of all banks shows a total of nearly $450,000,000, an increase of slightly more than $28,000,000 in less than a year.

Below is a comparative table showing the totals of loans, deposits, and cash resources at the date of the earliest and latest official reports of the year 1908:

|-----------------|-------------------|-------------------|
|                 | Nov. 27-28, 1908. | Feb. 14-15, 1908. |
| Loans:          |                   |                   |
| National        | $237,075,066     | $223,457,857     |
| State           | 212,460,596       | 198,012,631       |
| Totals          | $449,535,662     | $421,470,488     |
| Deposits:       |                   |                   |
| National        | $378,381,380     | $345,051,828     |
| State           | 363,168,949       | 323,075,679       |
| Totals          | $741,550,329     | $668,127,507     |
| Cash resources: |                   |                   |
| National        | $168,298,048     | $149,961,601     |
| Totals          | $296,136,027     | $259,530,524     |

One of the striking features throughout the year, and that which tends to show the greatest strength of banks, was the large and steady increase in the percentage of cash resources reported by local institutions.

Below is a record of the percentages at the date of each national and state bank call during 1908, and the last official statements issued in 1907:

It is a matter of no little local pride that neither during the prevalence of the panic nor in the long period of depression which followed as a natural consequence were there any bank failures in Chicago.

History of the year among the banks of Chicago reads along similar lines as that of other important money centers of the United States, in that it was devoted largely to active recovery from the unprecedented stress of the panic of 1907.

At the very beginning of the year local institutions had begun to show unmistakable signs of recovery and restored confidence, and, although the device of the issuance of clearing house certificates in lieu of currency was still in force, before the end of January this form of settlement was almost wholly confined to transactions between banks, and the great pay rolls of the city and tributary territory were promptly made up of "real money."

Practically in April all the clearing house certificates and circulating checks had been retired and a cash basis restored.

At the beginning of the trouble in 1907 banks of the city decided upon a concerted action of support, and thus averted even the appearance of weakness on the part of financial institutions. All worthy enterprises were helped by the banks without the slightest hesitation.

The system of clearing house examinations which is conducted by joint agreement of the associated banks independent of the national and state authorities, has served to solidify the banks of Chicago.

City Deposits in Pittsburgh

The mayor of Pittsburgh has refused to sign the contract with the six city banks for which they are charged with paying to corrupt aldermen the $176,000 mentioned in the city graft cases. It isn't likely that any attempt will be made by the banks to compel him to sign. They will be busy enough restoring the amount paid out to the councilmen to its proper place in the bank, and a new ordinance has been offered covering the whole matter of city deposits in a new form. The new ordinance provides that all depositaries must be national banks and members of the clearing house association, and that each must have a capital and surplus of at least $1,500,000. The city moneys must be deposited equally among them, equalization being made monthly by the city treasurer, and each must pay 2½ per cent on daily balances. Two of them, however, are to be designated as "active banks," and each of these may carry a city deposit of $100,000 on which no interest will be exacted.

The measure provides further that if the city deposit is in excess of the bond given by any depositary an additional bond must be filed. Figures were submitted to show that 12 banks in Pittsburgh now come under the required provision as to capital and surplus, with combined capital and surplus of $46,825,000—only three of which are now city depositaries.

No new arrests have been made and it is asserted those already made were precipitated by the "discovery" of the $17,500 payment by the Germania National, by the bank examiner. Many other arrests are to follow, if reports are true. The next letting of city funds in Pittsburgh is likely to be on the square.

It is reported that the plan followed in the alleged bribing of councilmen to secure bank deposits was an unique one, but if it really occurred it can be traced readily. Some of the banks reported to have put up money notified their correspondents in New York to forward a certain amount to a Pittsburgh bank, where the money was placed to the credit of one of the accused councilmen, who it is said, then made the distribution by means of his own personal checks. Twenty of these checks have been secured by the probers, and will be used as evidence.

That Philadelphia, too, is in for a cleaning up of some sort, when those in authority have finished with Pittsburgh, has been predicted.

The exposure of the twin corruption of business and politics in Pittsburgh would not have been half so extensive and far-reaching had not six special bank examiners been hurried to that city by President Roosevelt as soon as he had been informed of what might be disclosed by prompt and simultaneous investigation. "Be sure to get the bribe givers as well as the bribe takers. One can't exist without the other," were his instructions.

embracing many novel features. The law was enacted in 1907 but went into effect fully on November 25th of 1908. National banks are not included in the application of this statute, of course, which is intended to regulate the banking as conducted by private corporations, as well as by incorporated banks, by throwing around it safeguards which make for the protection of the depositor. The purpose of the law in its present form will be further promoted by several important amendments which will be proposed during the coming session of the legislature. The principal provisions of the law are:

(a) Limits total liability to any bank by any person or corporation to 25 per cent of aggregate paid-in capital and surplus of bank making loan.

(b) Requires publication of detailed statements, the same as are now published by national banks.

(c) Regulates amount of capital stock of banks according to population of city in which they are located.

(d) Requires banks in cities of less than 50,000 population to carry available cash reserve of 15 per cent of their demand liabilities, and 10 per cent of their time deposits; in cities of 50,000 population and more banks must carry cash reserves amounting to 25 per cent of their demand liabilities and 10 per cent of time deposits; at least one-third of these reserve percentages shall consist of actual cash on hand.

When further amended, as is hoped, it ought to provide Oregon with a safe and an adequate banking system. Depositors will be much better protected than in the past.

Better Banking Laws Needed

Philadelphia's great merchant prince, probably the greatest in the world, after the late Marshall Field, also is a power in religious and moral work of the churches of the country. Mr. Wanamaker is none other than the great Sunday-school Wanamaker of whom all the children know. In his talk to them on Sunday Mr. Wanamaker referred to the great Italian earthquake as only an evidence of God's displeasure with the ways of man.

"Men the world over act," he said, "as if they believed the laws of the Mount had been repealed."

"The great spell over the country to-day is the belief that money, no matter how gotten, is well gotten, but there comes a time when

God's patience is exhausted, and he breathes upon the sea, even as he did upon the Mediterranean.

"In our country he writes upon the walls of the capitol at Harrisburg the doom of the men who had to do with the building of it. One by one they are being taken. In the last year no less than fifty bank officials have committed suicide to escape exposure. God is speaking to all governments of earth to heed that there is a government above all other governments."

There has been an epidemic in line of banker suicides since last October and it is unfortunate for banking that Mr. Wanamaker should include banking, even remotely, along with public, political grafting at Harrisburg, and along with the religious and moral shortcomings of the Latin countries. Lax legislation permitting all sorts of wildcat banking is responsible for most bank failures. Lax administration of good laws permit the rest. This being a legislative winter in many states the good example of Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri should be followed and new banking laws adopted. Nebraska promises well.

New Nebraska Banking Bill

A new banking bill has been drawn by Senator Volpp, of Sumner, Nebraska, which will be offered in the senate at its first session. The proposed act covers the organization and control of banks and provides for the protection of depositors. Senator Volpp hopes to secure the support of bankers and the sensible people of his state. The points upon which the provisions of the bill will rest are that the law follows the general lines of the present law, thus avoiding confusion; the changes that have been made are in the direction of more rigid regulation and control; the bill provides for payment to depositors of failed banks within 30 days and for a "Depositors' Protective Fund" and nowhere is the word "guaranty" used; there is very little question of the constitutionality of the various measures. No bank, state or national, will be forced into the protective system and none remain longer than they wish. Senator Volpp believes that a thorough inspection and a rigid control of the banks under his plan will prevent failures, and that it may be many years before the protective fund is ever called on for a dollar.

A resume of the proposed act is printed elsewhere in this issue and will repay reading and careful study of all bankers. The legislative end of the banking business will require careful watching for the next two years if mistaken statutes are to be kept from the books.

The sections not printed conform very closely to the present act or to existing laws elsewhere and provide in detail for the operation of the banking department and the conduct of the examiners. The Volpp bill is said to have been promised strong support.

Forty-one Banks Share in Keeping City Cash

Forty-one banks were named Monday by the Chicago city council as depositaries for the city's funds during the coming year.

The convening of the council at the first of every year is required by law for this purpose. Last year twenty-six banks held the funds. This year every bank that bid was named as a sharer in the benefits to be derived from handling the municipal cash.

Each bank is given a limit to which it may receive city deposits. Nearly all promise to pay 2 per cent interest, and a few offered 2½ per cent. Last year the average rate paid was 1 per cent higher, which means that this year the city will receive about $70,000 less in interest.

The First National of Englewood, the Cook County State Savings Bank and the Drexel State Bank each agree to pay 2½ per cent, while the Lake View Trust & Savings and the Union Stock Yards State Banks offer 2¼ per cent. The other banks, with the amounts they are to hold during the year, and who are to pay 2 per cent, are as follows:

Death of Henry C. Potter, Jr.

As a result of continued ill health Henry C. Potter, Jr., a well known banker of Detroit, committed suicide on Monday last. His affliction was heart trouble, which caused nervous depression. Mr. Potter was an ex-president of the Michigan Bankers Association and at his death was a vice-president of the Peoples State Bank, of which George P. Russell, ex-president of the American Bankers Association, is the president. Mr. Russell has announced that Mr. Potter's estate is worth half a million and that financial matters had no part in causing his death.

The Bridgeport, (Ill.) Banking Co. is a new enterprise. W. D. Finley is president; William Seed, vice-president, and Roy H. Loughlin, cashier.

Reform in Bank Censorship

Washington, D. C., January 4.—National bank examiners will be put upon a salary or per diem and expense basis, and the present fee system will be abolished, if recommendations made by Secretary Cortelyou, Comptroller Murray, and Deputy Comptroller Kane of the Treasury department are carried into effect.

Members of the national monetary commission, who will transmit the suggestions to Congress for enactment into law, believe the proposition will meet with favor.

Under the fee system the Comptroller does not direct the routes of the examiners. They pay their own expenses out of the gross amount of their fees and therefore lay out routes in such a manner that the expenses may be kept to a minimum, following a certain program month after month.

Will Improve Efficiency

According to testimony of Deputy Comptroller Kane, before the monetary commission, any bank on the list of a certain examiner may locate him at any time on the route and anticipate about when he will reach that bank for examination. Mr. Kane to-day reiterated that when an examiner enters a town in which there are two or more banks his presence in one of the banks is immediately known to the others.

"It is also known," said Mr. Kane, "that they will be examined in order and this knowledge enables a bank to prepare for the examiner's coming and destroys in a way the efficacy of examinations without warning."

Under a per diem basis it is the theory that an examiner will vary the order of his examinations so that it will be impossible for a bank to know when to expect a visit from him. Placed upon a salary basis it is believed also that the tendency to superficiality in examinations will be removed in large part.

Cost Not Serious Obstacle

Despite the increased cost to the banks under the change suggested a great many banks have recommended it and few are expected to bring forward serious opposition.

"It takes an examiner some little time to get a thorough knowledge of the paper that he handles," said Mr. Kane. "He becomes acquainted with the financial responsibility of the borrowers and the securities. On the other hand sometimes where an examiner, because of his long stay in one district, becomes too well acquainted with the bankers, he takes too much for granted."

Spokane Banking News

Spokane, Washington, January 7.—Directors of the Old National of Spokane, of which D. W. Twohy is president, will submit a plan to the stockholders at the annual meeting, January 12th to increase the capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000, buy the Union Trust Company's property at Riverside Avenue and Stevens Street for $300,000 and erect a 12-story bank and office building, 100 by 142 feet, and sell the marble bank building, 117 by 85 feet, at Riverside Avenue and Wall Street for $500,000 to the Union Trust Company, which is to increase its capital from $220,000 to $500,000 and establish a savings bank. As the directors control the majority of stock in both companies the decision practically amounts to final action on the part of the stockholders. The marble bank building, which was originally 45 by 85 feet, was built by the late A. M. Cannon.

Progress and Prosperity Reflected

Progress and prosperity are reflected on all sides in Spokane and the big district tributary to it, called the Inland Empire of the Pacific Northwest, and, while it presented some problems by reason of the depression in eastern financial centers and the presidential campaign, the year was one of achievements without a parallel in the history of the city and the country. There was a tremendous influx of capital and population and all indications are that the year was a forerunner of still greater activities in 1909 and 1910.

Spokane Trust Companies

All the trust companies in Spokane have had a good year, and several have been able to handle some local paper, whereas in 1907 and previously there was little done in that line. This was especially true of bond issues. The companies have been able to take care of considerable of the special improvement bonds that have been marketed in the last twelve months. The growth of these institutions has been healthy. One company has been added to the list. The outlook was never brighter and 1909 holds out promises for the record year in Spokane and the territory tributary to it. We have reasons to look forward to gains after what was accomplished in 1908.

Spokane Clearings

Spokane is probably the only city in the United States showing gains in clearings over 1907, the banner year in the history of the country, and as an indication that business is improving rapidly it may be mentioned that the clearings in October, 1908, were within $880,000 for the same period in 1907, previous to the flurry, and that last November and December showed gains of more than $13,000,000 over the last two months in 1907. There were also great gains in building operations, the number of permits issued being 2,927 in 1908, valuation $5,927,548, as against 1,870 permits, involving an expenditure of $5,778,876 the year before, when the Paulsen building, $750,000, and the Federal building, $600,000, and several other large structures were included.

Southwest National Opens

Kansas City now has a new million dollar bank. The Southwest National, organized by some of the former officers and directors of the Union National, opened for business in an east room on the first floor of the New York Life building Monday morning. All of the officers and directors were present. The bank will remain in its present quarters until the old quarters of the Union National in the same building can be occupied. The lease of the Union National was transferred with the other assets of the Union to the National Bank of Commerce. These are the officers and directors:

Pittsburgh Bank Clearings

Pittsburgh bank clearings for December 31st were $7,345,146, compared with $8,066,736 last week and $7,746,812 on the same day last year. For December clearings are $182,525,760, against $203,043,735 a year ago. The clearings for the year are 2,004,632,960, against $2,743,570,484 in 1907 and $2,640,847,045 in 1906. The total for 1908 is the smallest since 1904.

Millions of dollars in interest on bonds, dividends on stocks and interest on savings bank deposits were distributed among the residents of San Francisco and Oakland as a semiannual payment January 2d. Forty-five companies whose stocks and bonds are listed on the local exchange and the savings banks of San Francisco, and Oakland distributed $8,063,361 as follows: Interest on bonds, $3,250,000; dividends on stocks, $1,443,000; interest on San Francisco savings deposits, $2,741,979; interest on Oakland savings deposits, $622,381; total, $8,063,360. The savings banks in San Francisco pay an average of 2 per cent interest semiannually, and the aggregate of their deposits is $137,098,974. The Oakland banks of like character pay the same interest and have a total of $31,119,991 of savings deposits. There are 45 companies of the stock exchange which pay bond interest and stock dividends as semiannual payments on January 2d. There are many companies and firms which will add $1,500,000 to the total.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

New Orleans Chapter Debate on Postal Savings Banks

At a regular meeting of the New Orleans Chapter, in Progressive Union Hall, the Chapter held a debate which was a great success from every standpoint. Very much valuable information was presented upon a subject about which almost nothing is known by people in general, and yet a subject which will undoubtedly be brought up at the present session of Congress for final action to be taken upon it.

It is embodied in the following, which was introduced:

"Resolved: That the establishment of postal savings banks would be in the best interests of our country."

W. B. Machado led off as the first speaker for the affirmative. He said in part:

"The subject of postal savings banks depositories is not new in this country, and it may be truly said that nearly every Postmaster-General since the year 1873 has advocated their establishment. The affirmative desires to prove that the establishment of a postal savings system will be:

"First. A positive benefit and help to the individual.

"Second. An excellent auxiliary and feeder of the banks.

"Third. In the best interest of our country.

"We have therefore selected as a proper conveyance the bill introduced in the United States Senate April 2, 1908, by Mr. Carter, of Montana, because this bill was read twice and reported favorably by the entire committee in the recent session of the senate of the Sixtieth Congress, and there is no question of its passage in the coming session of the senate whenever it reaches roll-call. The house with a strong Republican majority, in view of the platform declaration of the party, can do little else than to vote it through.

"This bill provides that money-order post-offices shall receive money on deposit, and $1 may open the account, but thereafter multiples of ten cents will be received. Upon these deposits the government is to pay two per cent interest up to $500. Above that, no interest will be paid. One thousand dollars is the largest amount any one person may carry on deposit, and $200 is the largest amount any one person may deposit in any calendar month. These funds the government in turn is to deposit in national banks, located as near as may be in the neighborhood where such deposits are received, at a rate of interest not less than two and one-fourth per cent. If deposits cannot be made in national banks at the specified rate of interest, the Postmaster-General may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General, invest the same in state, county, or municipal bonds. If we should pass this bill, we would have immediately thirty-eight thousand commodious savings banks conveniently located, known to the people, and sufficiently manned by competent officials.

"Such a system as the bill above mentioned would make it possible for one hundred persons to save their earnings where one now does, and would make it impossible for any depositor to ever lose a cent. This would encourage and stimulate saving, which would not only be a blessing to every family by laying up something for a rainy day, but it would, besides, make every depositor a better citizen.

"A place near at hand, where a dollar may be deposited and may be secure against the temptations of the burglar, the thief and the saloon-keeper, even if it accumulates but very little, has everywhere proved a strong inducement to saving.

"The postoffice is near to every citizen; the savings bank must always be remote from the most. This is demonstrated by the fact that in New England the average distance of the savings banks from the postoffice is about fifteen miles; in the Middle and Eastern States, about twenty-five miles; in the Southern States, about thirty-three miles, and in the Pacific Slope States, fifty-five miles."

Edward Luria opened the argument for the negative as follows:

"There is no need for further facilities for savings in the United States, because the number of existing institutions is ample. For we find that at present there are some twenty-three thousand institutions engaged in the banking business, and that, out of that twenty-three thousand, ninety per cent of them receive savings accounts of almost any denomination. Under the class of savings institutions, we Americans find that there are three distinct heads—namely, first, trust companies; second, building and loan associations, and, third, private banking houses.

"The statement that, though the Eastern and Middle States may be well supplied, there is further need for banks in the South and West, I say is untrue. Honorable judges, it stands to reason that settlement must precede the accumulation of wealth, and we are taught, on the very first pages of economics, that there are two most important considerations to be taken into account by persons desiring to establish a bank—i. e., the demand for it, and, second, the density of the population in the proposed community. In the South and West real estate can at present be bought for far less than in the North and East, and why? Because of its unpopulated sections.

"The soundness of our existing institutions for savings is undeniable, because failures at present are rare, and consequently the exception. The total numbers of failures, according to the report of the Comptroller of the Currency, during the year ending June 30, 1907, was thirty-four banks. These were ten state banks, four trust companies, and twenty private banks. In the year 1906 the aggregate net loss to depositors in savings banks was the trivial sum of $120,000, being three ten-thousandths of one per cent on a total of $3,500,000,000 in savings deposits; whereas, the proposed government rate of interest—that is, two per cent—would have deprived the depositors of at least $50,000,000 in interest in that very same year. Think of it, honorable judges, $120,000 lost, whilst the proposed establishment of postal savings banks would have shown a loss of some $50,000,000 in interest to depositors within the same period.

"The accommodations offered by existing institutions are excellent. The adequacy of existing facilities is well shown by actual results, for there is, at present, more money deposited in the savings banks in the United States than in any other country, the amount being some $3,500,000,000, which is an amount equal to one-third of the savings deposits of the entire world. The deposits here average $41 per capita of our population, against $11 in Canada, and $23 in Great Britain.

"Allow me to quote from a speech of Mr. Wm. Hanhart, of New York, who said:

"Let the government attend to its political, judicial and legislative functions as clearly defined in the Constitution, and I am sure that our enterprising citizens will attend to all other business, including banking. Proper supervision of banks, railroads, insurance companies and all other corporations is correct and justifiable, but government ownership of such, no matter by whom advocated, should be resisted vigorously by all patriotic citizens who have the welfare of this great Republic at heart."

F. G. Walle presented the second argument for the affirmative, stating in part:

"The claim has been advanced, and will, doubtless, again be taken up by our opponents, that the government should not enter the banking business, and that it is in the spirit of our country that whatever can as well be done by private enterprise as by the government should never be entered upon by the latter. We most heartily agree with our opponents on this point, but must add that it is equally true that whatever can be done better by the government than by private enterprise should always and ever be done by the government.

"The first speaker on the affirmative has shown conclusively that our present banking facilities are entirely inadequate for the needs of our country, and I will present arguments to show that postal savings banks will not invade the domain of legitimate banking business, but, on the contrary, will be a sustaining force behind the banks, and an efficient agency to help them to carry on the business of our country.

"By no rational construction can the system which we advocate be regarded as banking business. Deposits are limited in amount, no payments are made on checks, no loans are made, no exchange is bought or sold, nor, indeed, are any other banking functions to be performed, except perhaps the purchase of a few bonds, and even that only in exceptional cases.

"Statistics show that there are from seven to eight hundred million dollars of hoarded wealth in our country. Undoubtedly a large part of this sum is withheld from the banks and placed in hiding because of lack of confidence; another part is not deposited in banks because the amount on hand seems too trifling and small to bring to a bank, and the remainder is not finding its way to the banks because, in many localities of our vast country, there are no banks to go to; for it must be remembered that, except in the New England States, commercial or savings banks are established to earn dividends for their stockholders, and consequently they are located in well-selected places, where there is enough business to warrant their existence.

"Our opponents say that postal savings banks are sure to interfere very seriously with the business of our existing institutions, which cannot hope to compete with the government. To this argument we reply that no private savings institution that is resting on a solid foundation and blessed with honest and prudent management needs to indulge in gloomy forebodings over the advent of this system. Unless human nature changes radically, are we not justified in assuming that a properly conducted savings bank paying three and one-half or four per cent interest will have nothing to fear from a competitor paying two per cent? It must be borne in mind that postal savings banks are not intended to appeal to the man of means—the man with $1,000 or more—but to the poor man, whose earnings are small and who needs every inducement we can offer him to save anything at all out of his meager earnings. To such men the postal savings banks will be a preliminary schooling, from which he will graduate to a private savings bank, where he will earn nearly twice as much interest.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I repeat that it is far from the purpose of the advocates of postal savings banks to supersede or interfere with sound banks now or hereafter organized by private capital, and we of the affirmative hold that, in this as in every other country, the postal savings banks would be a help and not a hindrance to ordinary banking."

F. L. Ramos, the second speaker for the negative, said:

"The argument that postal savings banks are practicable, necessary and beneficial, because (as has been claimed) they are successful abroad, is unsound. Before any such assertion can be made the conditions in the different countries must be compared, and I can positively state, and defy the opposition to prove the contrary, that conditions as they exist in the United States are in no way similar to those in Europe.

"One of the greatest differences is the large government debt in European countries, which furnishes a large field for investment. And may it not be that these governments are greatly influenced towards postal savings banks in order that their bonds might be readily absorbed, and they might be issued at a reduced rate of interest. As a proof of this, statistics show that in these countries the rate of interest on government loans has been greatly reduced, and to compensate for this reduction in interest and high price of the bonds the rate of interest to postal depositors had to be reduced, due to a decrease in revenue from these same government bonds in which investments were made. A questionable method of financiering, indeed!

"Look at the density of the population in Europe. Why, just imagine: You could take the whole Continent of Europe (eighteen countries), and the sum of their combined areas would not equal that of the United States, and yet the population of these countries is nearly 400,000,000, or about five times that of ours. To make the contrast greater, take Belgium, a country but one-fourth the size of Louisiana, yet containing six times the population, equivalent to a difference of twenty-four times the density.

"Then the facilities offered by the private savings banks in these countries are limited. In reality, the private savings banks make no effort to receive the small deposits, nor do they offer any inducements to small depositors. In some countries we might say there are no private savings banks. Why, everything over there in the matter of finances is in the hands of the government, or so greatly influenced by it as to be practically so. The government banks are in accord with the paternal character of the governments, and the minds of the people have been so trained to look up to the government that, in a country like ours, they would be like so many lost sheep.

"Another point, the postoffice. Is our postal system in such a state of perfection that it might take over new duties? Does it come up to the standard of European systems? It does not.

"After years of experience, it has been found to be expensive, inefficient, ridden with politics, and backward in introducing any improvements. The men chosen to fill offices are chosen more for their political influence than for any particular fitness in postal duties.

"Think of it! Out of a total of seventy thousand and postoffices there are only twenty thousand in which money-orders may be issued. The offices of Presidential grade, to which it is claimed savings offices would necessarily be limited, numbered, in April, 1908, only 6,821. Think of this for a while. Why, there are no less than forty towns in Louisiana and Mississippi in which there are banks and no money-order offices. There are two not more than thirty miles from New Orleans—namely Madisonville and Slidell."

Mr. Ramos then went on to prove that our country was at present quite amply supplied with banking facilities, but that, at the various times of the establishment of the postal systems abroad, those countries had very little savings bank facilities. Also, that abroad the postal system could not anywhere really be considered a full success.

Mr. Rudolf S. Hecht, the last speaker in the affirmative summed up the points made by his colleagues, and, in continuing the argument, laid great stress on the fact that our commonwealth and country as a whole would be vastly benefited by the passage of the proposed postal savings bank bill. To prove his contention he submitted that the establishment of postal savings banks would:

"First. Do much to prevent panics, and thus help our business world to escape the ruin which inevitably follows their track.

"Second. That it would strengthen our national credit.

"Third. That it would elevate our people and lead to better citizenship.

"Fourth. That it would mean a policy of 'square deal,' guaranteeing equal facilities for saving to all our citizens."

In speaking of the panic last fall, he said:

"Suddenly the foreigner, with his fear of private institutions, the ignorant with his suspicion of banks, and the poor man with his small savings, became alarmed and would listen to no reason, but rushed to the banks, withdrew their deposits and hoarded them. I need scarcely say that it takes but few, very few, dollars to be kept out of circulation by each person to absolutely paralyze business, and nothing helped more to aggravate the situation and make the crisis so severe than the fact that nearly three hundred millions of cash disappeared from sight in a few weeks, and that we suddenly found ourselves without sufficient circulating money to carry on the business of the nation."

"But let me show you quite another reason why we should give the masses the opportunity to place their hard-earned savings in the hands of the government. All power under our form of government comes from the people—an aggregation of individual voters—and, just as a chain is only as strong as its weakest link, so is the permanence and security of our government dependent on the prevailing standard of citizenship, and the interest and loyalty of the masses towards it.

"Does anyone suppose that a man who has a bank account with the government would fail to realize that socialism is but an idle dream, that anarchy is a crime, and that mob violence and revolution are a danger to the nation's credit and, therefore, detrimental to him? Do you know of any stronger motive to make him vote more intelligently himself, and can you doubt that he would appeal to his more radical fellowmen to redeem the government with ballots instead of destroying it with bullets?"

In regard to our foreign population the speaker said that most immigrants come from countries where postal savings banks have long been established, and that as a consequence, all foreigners are suspicious of private banks, and annually send away millions to be deposited in foreign postal savings banks.

In closing Mr. Hecht said:

"Now, I ask you, honorable judges, why should we permit this vast amount of money to leave our country? Why should we not give these people the opportunity to deposit their savings with the government in which they have such unbounded faith? Why should we not accept their savings, small as they may be, in the hope that they will ultimately grow large enough to be invested permanently in our country? What stronger incentive can you give the foreigner to become a loyal American citizen than to have the government act as guardian over his hard-earned savings? It will give him a higher regard for our country, it will give him deeper concern in our political affairs, and last, but not least, it will elevate him and have a tendency of keeping both him and his money permanently with us.

"Gentlemen, in conclusion, let me say that, if our government is really a government for the people, if we really earnestly desire to give paramount consideration to the needs and wishes of the plain people upon whose industry and frugality the prosperity of our country depends, if we really desire to benefit the laboring man, and if our cries for a 'square deal' are not empty words, then, gentlemen, the inauguration of this system cannot be far distant."

Abe Luria, the third speaker for the negative, said:

"Are we to follow the examples of countries that are altogether different from our own? Countries whose economic conditions are consequently different? Governments in whose commercial banks typewriters are looked upon as a luxury but rarely used—let alone an adding machine, as the third speaker of the affirmative himself stated before our chapter in his report on his experiences amongst the European banks last summer? Are we to change and check the wonderful advancement made by our savings institutions, for the unAmerican-like spirit of bringing our government into the commercial limelight? To those questions I have just put before you I know there is but one answer in your minds, and that is 'no' to them all.

"Never before was there a realization for a demand of postal savings banks until, unfortunately, that question formed a plank in the different political platforms.

"I cannot see where postal savings banks would be of any great good to our country, considering, amongst other arguments, our superior savings facilities to those that were in vogue abroad at the time of the establishment of postal savings banks there, and considering, likewise, the enormous additional expense to our government for going into a field that is well taken care of by our enterprising countrymen.

"In defense of my statement that the government would be injured, I wish to say it would be injured both politically and financially. Politically, because functions that are paternal are improper for a republican form of government.

"The government should not strive to undertake any enterprise that can be successfully conducted by its individual citizens. I maintain that the government should not usurp those rights. Furthermore, if we allowed the government to establish postal savings banks, it would pave the way to the accomplishment of far greater socialistic ideas.

"Now, to my statement that the government would be injured finally I present the following arguments:

"First. It is obvious that the number of postal employees would be heavily increased.

"Second. Salaries would be raised because the politicians would not fail to lay stress on the greater responsibilities to postal clerks in conducting the banking business.

"Third. As Ralph Curtis Ringwalt, former lecturer in public speaking in Columbia University, puts it: 'There would be a loss from unprofitable investments.'

"Fourth. From dishonest and inaccurate employees.

"Fifth. Having such a large amount of money on hand, Congress might be tempted to use these savings funds for improper purposes.

"Sixth. Popular agitation might compel the payment of a higher rate of interest than investments permitted.

"To my argument that postal savings banks would be injurious to the people I will bring in support the following additional arguments: As a postal savings bank would not lend a red cent to a depositor, it would hamper the progress of communities by paralyzing borrowing sections. The manufacturers, the merchants, the farmers, the tradesmen, who deposit their money in local banks, in turn borrow from these banks.

"Now, to my argument that postal savings banks would be injurious to the people's enterprise—the American savings banks: Notwithstanding what my opponents may say, postal savings banks, having the guarantee of the government behind them, will undoubtedly harm our savings institutions, and, bear this in mind, that every penny of the millions of dollars that would leave our savings banks to go into the government banks is an argument in itself against their establishment. That the savings banks would be injured, you just have to recall the conditions in Great Britain as shown to you by my colleague a few moments ago, where fully fifty per cent of the trustee savings banks there were forced to close by the establishment of the postal savings banks."

This closed the regular addresses, after which each debater was allowed five minutes to speak in rebuttal. According to the rules, no new arguments could be advanced at this time, but each man having an opportunity to answer the arguments of his opponent. The decision then went to the judges, Messrs. Lynn H. Dinkins, Prof. U. B. Phillips and Mr. Wm. Beer, who rendered the verdict in favor of the affirmative.

St. Paul Chapter Debate

St. Paul bank officials who maintain that a bank clerk with a salary of less than $1,000 a year should not get married will have to explain the reason to the feminine contingent of the city, for the three women judges who took the arguments in the debate held at the Merchants' hotel recently by the St. Paul Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, have other views.

"Sure a clerk ought to get married, whether he gets $1,000 a year or not," said the judges in handing down a decision in favor of the negative side of the question, "Resolved, that St. Paul bank men be prohibited from marrying under a salary of $1,000 a year."

It is true that two of the judges, married women, were first inclined to favor the affirmative but the arguments of the unmarried judge about love in a cottage, and all that, were too much for them and they sided in with her.

M. Knauff and G. M. B. Pridham, who supported the affirmative, called attention to the high price of eggs and potatoes in support of their argument, but Dick Lilly and Jack McGillick, supporting the negative, won the day with talk about "two hearts that beat as one" and a little cozy flat in the winter time.

A large attendance, half of the number women, listened to the debate with a good deal of interest.

The judges were Mrs. C. E. Robertson, Mrs. E. W. Finck and Miss T. Elliott.

Violin solos were rendered by Emil Anderson, baritone solos by Harry George and a monologue by Lester Banks of Minneapolis. Refreshments followed a dancing program.

New York Chapter News

At a special meeting of the board of governors of New York Chapter, held recently, Newton D. Alling of the Nassau Bank was unanimously nominated for the office of president of the Associated Chapters of American Institute of Banking. The election will take place at the annual convention, which will be held this year at Seattle, Washington.

The Colorado National of Denver, is planning the erection of a new bank building.

Michigan Banking News

By W. T. FOSTER

The largest single industry in Detroit, that of automobile building, suffered less from depression than almost any other. Other manufacturing have within the last two months resumed nearly normal conditions. It is estimated that there are 25 per cent more men employed in the factories now than there were six months ago. During the year 35 companies have increased their capital over $6,000,000 in the aggregate, largely stock dividends from accumulated profits.

The estimated output of manufactories for 1907 was $180,000,000; for 1908, $155,000,000. Present indications are that the 1909 product will be larger than any previous year.

The wholesale and retail trades have kept nearly up to last year's figures. The holiday trade has been unusually good.

The stock market, on which Detroit is not specially prominent, has been very dull.

The 1907 bank clearings were $711,610,000; grain receipts, 9,902,535 bushels; exports, $40,488,000; imports, $6,252,000; internal revenue receipts, $5,134,000; postoffice receipts, $1,675,000; deeds recorded, 15,069; building construction, $14,226,000; Water Board census of families, 87,371; population, 407,000.

The 1908 bank clearings were $668,047,524; grain receipts, 9,741,732 bushels; exports, $32,910,000; imports, $6,565,000; internal revenue receipts, $5,204,000; postoffice receipts, $1,695,000; deeds recorded, 13,227; building construction, $11,770,000; Water Board census, 92,329; population, 425,000.

Alexander McPherson on the Outlook

Alexander McPherson, president Old Detroit National, says:

"The financial outlook is quite different from what it was a year ago, when the country was just recovering from the panic. The situation at present is good, to judge from the conditions of the business with which we have anything to do. I do not think a moderate tariff revision by Congress will affect the general advance of prosperity."

J. H. Johnson on the Outlook

John H. Johnson, president Peninsular Savings Bank of Detroit, says:

"Nineteen hundred eight has not been an unkind year to savings banks nor to savings depositors. In the first place, the demands of the closing days of 1907 and the earlier ones of 1908 were so fully met by our institutions as to thoroughly demonstrate their stability. They also demonstrated to the same institutions the desirability of sufficient quick assets. On the other hand, depositors have been quick to realize the nature, the character and stability of our institutions and have shown it by their support, best proven by the constant and steady increase of deposits."

Charles Moore on the Outlook

Charles Moore, vice-president Security Trust Co. of Detroit, says:

"A radical difference between the business conditions at the close of 1908 and business conditions at the close of 1907 is observable. At the end of the last year, the one object of the bankers throughout the country was to accumulate money so as to be prepared to protect their clients and customers in emergencies. Loans were made only when imperative. Moreover, the borrowing was to protect established interests which needed to be carried over the period of depression that had set in."

New Bank at Athens

The Farmers State Bank of Athens, with a capital of $30,000 has been authorized to do business by the state banking department. It will replace the defunct Athens State & Savings Bank which is now in the hands of a receiver. Frank Wolf, of Battle Creek, and A. T. Slaght, of Athens, are the principal stockholders and F. E. Estes is cashier.

Funds to be Kept Separate

"I shall insist that the various state funds be kept separate," says State Treasurer-elect Sleeper.

This plan, if adhered to, will work a big change in the handling of state money. The custom always has been to keep the accounts separate, each state institution mentioned in the budget having its account, but in drawing funds the treasury in general has been drawn upon. According to Sleeper's plans, when any specific fund is exhausted there will be no further warrants drawn for the benefit of that particular institution.

It is the transfer of funds to different accounts that has caused much of the trouble in the past.

To Regulate Brokers

The necessity of some kind of state supervision over such a line of business as Cameron Currie & Co. conducted for many years on Griswold Street, Detroit, is quite likely to be considered at the coming session of the legislature. Gov. Warner, without mentioning names, may refer to it in his third inaugural message next week.

Concerns such as Currie & Co. hang out the sign, "Bankers and Brokers." Yet, as one high state official says, they can, and do, as "bankers and brokers," carry on anything from a legitimate to the rankest kind of wildcatting, without any authority calling them to account, so long as they do not break one of the common laws against crime. They can even do an apparently legitimate banking business, and no state authority has any right to investigate their methods or financial condition.

Inasmuch as some of the concerns in the same general lines that Currie & Co. conducted are bucket shops and nothing more, those who are outlining legislative action say that nothing must be done that would give bucket shops legal recognition, even to the extent of imposing legal restrictions on them. Other states, however, so it is said, have imposed state supervision over brokers who hold themselves out also as bankers; and without sanctioning the existence of bucket shops.

Whether there should be state supervision over those who hold themselves out as plain brokers, yet have a line of customers who buy and sell stocks either on margin or outright, will also be considered by the legislature.

The Detroit Credit Men's Association

The Detroit Credit Men's Association, at its regular meeting last week in the Hotel Tuller, elected the following officers: President, Wade Mills; vice-president, William A. Petzold; treasurer, W. A. McWhinney; executive committee, John Ballentyne, H. A. Eberline, Frank R. Hamburger, Edmund Hobbs, A. E. Johnson and Charles B. Sawyer. Walter S. Campbell will be re-elected secretary by the executive committee. Fifteen members discussed the outlook for 1909 in five-minute speeches, and the general consensus of opinion was that the coming year would be a good one in all lines of business, though not much progress would be made in some until the tariff revision is settled. The association now has 175 members.

Kansas City

That St. Louis has fully recovered from the effects of the financial depression and that the year will start out with its industrial and commercial institutions in line to maintain the high standard acquired in 1907, which was one of the most prosperous periods ever recorded, is the claim made by the Merchants' Exchange and other organizations in their annual statements just issued. One of the best indications of the truth of these claims is found in the bank clearings, which have again passed the three billion dollar mark, a record only once before eclipsed in 40 years. The total clearings for the year reached $3,074,806,759 as compared with $3,145,619,327 in 1907, a decrease of about 3 per cent. The balances for the same period amounted to 303,178,358, against $270,671,942.

The building for 1909 will, from present indications, break all records, as the city will do work amounting to over $6,000,000, and there are now in sight three skyscrapers to cost $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 each.

The Houston Banks

After passing through a year of uncertainty, the banks of the city of Houston closed the business of 1908 on last Thursday with clearings aggregating for the year approximately $1,062,205,311. This is a marked decrease over the clearings for 1907, but it is pointed out by prominent bankers of the city that in spite of the apparent decrease, the showing is encouraging and that the figures for the last few months are of a character as to justify the expectation that good times have been fully restored and the banking business is on a better basis than it was before the days of the so-called panic of the latter part of 1907.

It can hardly be said at best that the clearings are a true indication of the condition of business, although they are generally regarded as an index of general development. The fact that the clearings have almost doubled in the last six months and that there has been an enormous increase in the deposits in the various banking institutions of the city during the same period is regarded as a good omen, and the bankers are among the most hopeful men in the city so far as the future is concerned.

Kansas City Banks

With deposits aggregating 11¾ million dollars a year ago, the thirteen banks in Kansas City, Kan., are starting the year 1909 with deposits aggregating $15,910,000. The increase for the year of $4,160,000 of deposits reflects a condition of financial affairs on the Kansas side that is in harmony with the progress of that city. In all lines, financial, commercial and industrial, conditions never were better, the bankers and business men say, than they now are.

The Peoples National, succeeding the Bankers National, will begin business Monday with a paid up capital stock of $200,000, at Seventh Street and Minnesota Avenue. C. C. Smith, formerly cashier of the First National at Ottawa, is president; Dr. George M. Gray, vice-president; E. W. Moore, for twenty years a banker at Bunceton, Mo., is cashier.

The St. Louis Money Market

Transactions at the St. Louis banks and trust companies are in good volume. Arrivals of funds from interior points over the holidays are quite heavy with all the leading institutions. There is a fair inquiry for money, and considerably renewing of obligations. Collections are fairly satisfactory, though interfered with somewhat by the holidays. Rates continue between 4½ and 5½ per cent.

The Mercantile Bank of Kansas City

The organizers of the new Mercantile Bank of Kansas City which is to occupy rooms at 545 Delaware Street, elected a board of directors last week. The new institution is capitalized at $100,000 under the state banking laws. It will be opened for business about February 1st. The following are officers and directors: W. H. Winants, president; P. F. Covington, vice-president; J. E. McDaniel, cashier; J. S. Morrin, J. W. Davison, C. F. Mitchell, T. F. Sullivan, A. D. Flintom, A. Basile, R. P. Swofford, R. A. Kirtley and W. F. Helm.

Paul F. Covington resigned as assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce to become vice-president of the new bank. Mr. Winants was formerly vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce.

The Manufacturers and Mechanics Bank

The new Manufacturers and Mechanics Bank, in a building just erected by its officers at 6800 Washington Park boulevard, Sheffield, will be opened for business Monday. Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company, is president. Mr. Cooke has been with the Fidelity seven years. Formerly he was cashier of the bank of Herrington, Kas., and for two terms secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association. He is director and officer of several Kansas banks.

The cashier and managing officer of the new bank is Sidney K. Cooke, also of the Bank of Herrington. Colonel Sidney G. Cooke, governor of the Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, and a retired banker, is also connected with the Manufacturers and Mechanics Bank.

The Western Exchange Bank

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Western Exchange Bank, of Kansas City, the men who held offices in the bank last year were re-elected. The list of elected officers and directors follows:

J. S. Lillis, president; W. T. Johnson, vice-president; Henry Koehler, cashier.

Directors—Henry L. Waldo, J. R. Lillis, D. S. McGonigle, William H. Lucas, J. S. Lillis, Henry Koehler and William T. Johnson.

The Business Year in Kansas City

It would not be true to say that Kansas City did not suffer as a result of the business depression of the past year. For, while the city seems to have made gains in every department of business in 1908, its gains would have been greater if conditions had remained normal throughout the country. But the surprising and gratifying thing is that in spite of the general depression, and the marked reaction in nearly every other big city, the volume of trade in Kansas City has been enlarged.

Taking the bank clearings as a criterion, Kansas City shows a gain of 12 per cent for 1908 over the record of 1907, and it is the only city in the eleven leading business centers to show an increase. The average decrease for the other cities is about 12 per cent, showing a difference in favor of Kansas City, as against the other collectively, of 24 per cent.

Banking conditions in Kansas City are about normal so far as they affect clearings. There are two unusually large banks and a number of lesser ones. The number of banks, in proportion to the volume of business, is probably about the same as in other big cities. Hence the comparison of clearings is a fairly good indication of relative conditions.

And Kansas City's prosperity is substantial. There is nothing artificial about it. Its big trade is legitimate. Its real estate activities are based on comparatively low valuations.—Kansas City Star.

Kansas City Postoffice Records

Records of the Kansas City postoffice were broken in December, 1908. The stamp sales aggregated $181,813.13, exceeding those of the same month, 1907, by 9.6 per cent. In money this represents $16,026.69. The total receipts for the year from stamp sales were $1,914,937.94, or $162,447.88 more than in 1907.

Year 1909 to Bring Progress

That 1909 is to be the greatest home-building epoch in the history of St. Louis is the belief of Joseph M. Levi of J. M. Levi & Co. The demand for residences, the number of vacant lots bought toward the end of 1908 and the plans of several corporations to fill up large vacant West End tracts with fine dwellings point to this conclusion, says Mr. Levi, who is one of the best posted realty men on Chestnut street.

The Commercial State Bank

The Commercial State Bank of Ridgeway, Mo., with a capital of $15,000 has been chartered by C. T. Webb and others.

The First State Bank

The stockholders of the First State Bank of Brackettville, Tex., have elected the following officers and directors: N. T. Peterson, president; George W. Hobbs and F. S. ### Forty-five Banks Incorporated in Missouri

During the past year there were incorporated in Missouri forty-five banks, which is ten below the number incorporated during the year immediately preceding. Though fewer in number, the new banks organized the past year had an aggregate capital stock $373,000 in excess of that represented by the banks incorporated in 1907. In that year the aggregate capital stock of the fifty-five banks incorporated was $717,000, while the forty-five banks incorporated in 1908 have an aggregate capital stock of $1,090,000, making a total of 100 banks in two years, with an aggregate capital stock of $1,807,000.

The Union Trust and Savings Bank

The Union Trust & Savings Bank, of East St. Louis, Ill., held its annual meeting Monday, and made no changes in any of its important officers. August Schlafly is president; E. P. Keshner, first vice-president and cashier; Joseph A. Kurrus, Prosper J. Soucy and Mayor Silas Cook, vice-presidents; M. T. Murray, secretary, and Paul S. Schlafly, assistant cashier. A semiannual dividend of 5 per cent was declared and $50,000 added to the surplus.

New York Banking News

The 1908 financial conditions show great improvement over 1907. Banking and credit affairs are sound; capital is plentiful for legitimate purposes, and all the tendencies of the times are toward recovery. Railroad stocks are held very high: so high as to remove many of them from the speculative field, bringing into prominence many of the cheaper issues. Confidence is gaining among investors, but the latter still show a decided preference for bonds, which offer surer if smaller returns than stocks. As a result the bond market is in good condition. Money promises to be reasonably easy during the next six months. New applications for capital will probably be large, especially from the railroads, and this will stimulate certain lines of industry and give employment to labor. The mercantile outlook has improved greatly during the last three months, and trade promises to expand more freely in the coming year.

The outlook is decidedly better than it was a year ago.

Banks Pay $20,000,000 on Savings Funds

Twenty million of dollars is the reward at the beginning of the new year for the thrift that the people of Greater New York have shown, as represented by their deposits in savings banks.

This is the amount, approximately, to which the semiannual interest payment to savings bank depositors at this time will amount. It breaks the record for volume. The great sum will be divided among nearly 1,800,000 separate accounts.

Every savings bank in Manhattan and the Bronx, thirty-two in number, has declared interest for the half year at the rate of 4 per cent per annum. Their combined deposits are nearly $750,000,000.

While they are distributing $75,000,000, the savings banks of Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island will be dividing at least $5,000,000 among their depositors.

New York Clearings for 1908

The clearings for last year at New York aggregated $79,275,880,256, against $87,182,168,381 for 1907 and $104,675,828,656 in 1906. The clearings in December were $9,266,286,519, compared with $5,349,926,947 in 1907 and $9,227,894,634 in 1906. The balances for the year were $3,693,086,812, and in December $397,717,396.

Cash Balance in Treasury

State Comptroller Glynn has made public his second annual report to the legislature, showing the financial condition of the state and the operation of the bureaus of his department for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1908, the cash balance in the Treasury on that date being $31,785,076.

A. R. Flower Dead

Anson R. Flower, a New York banker and brother of the late Governor Roswell P. Flower, died at his home in Watertown, Sunday, following an illness of several months. His wealth is variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000.

The Trust Company of America

The annual statement of the Trust Company of America, whose first dividend since the financial crisis of the fall of 1907 was paid recently, has been issued as of December 31, 1908. It shows substantial gains in all the important items in contrast to the situation as it stood five months ago, when the company made up its last tabulation.

The deposits are now $26,911,874, as against $20,659,417 on August 31st; almost $4,000,000 of this gain belongs to the last month. The company, despite its dividend payment, has gained $55,000 surplus in the last four months and now has $6,261,550 over and above its capital stock of $2,000,000.

The total assets have increased since August 31st from $29,079,194 to $35,324,171, and the cash held from $5,276,926 to $7,776,912. Its cash is therefore more than $1,000,000 in excess of the 25 per cent reserve which a national bank doing business in this city would have to carry against the volume of deposits held by the Trust Company of America.

The New York Merchants Association

Business men of the country are enlisting in the fight for a postal savings banks system. The Merchants Association of New York has taken the lead in the movement, and is sending a strong printed letter to commercial organizations and to individual business men asking co-operation and setting forth the advantages of the proposed legislation.

ular methods the clearing house would soon know about it through the inspections made by its examiners.

In June the banks began to show improvement, and up to the close of the year both national and state banks reported substantial gains in all items. There was here as well as elsewhere all over the country a plethora of funds, and at no time in the history of the city has less currency been withdrawn by smaller banks in the interior for crop moving purposes. In fact, the ease with which the crops of 1908 were moved to the primary markets is an epoch in the history of the country.

Owing to the lighter demand for money and the piling up of funds at the reserve centers, the earnings of Chicago banks last year—at least some of them—were smaller than the average for several previous periods, but the surpluses shown by practically all institutions indicate that the curtailment has at no time reached a point where the usual dividend payments were endangered.

A number of banks even commenced the payment of dividends and some institutions were able to increase their regular rates.

Local banks which stepped into the ranks of regular dividend payers during 1908 were the Harris Trust and Savings, which inaugurated an 8 per cent basis for the $1,250,000 capital stock by paying the first quarterly dividend of 2 per cent in March; the National City Bank of Chicago placed its $1,500,000 capital stock on a 6 per cent basis by declaring a quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent in June, and in September the Chicago Savings Bank & Trust Co. declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on its $500,000 capital stock, thus placing the shares on a 6 per cent annual basis.

Among the local institutions to increase their dividend rates during the year were the State Bank of Chicago, which advanced its quarterly rate from 2½ to 3 per cent in April, raising the annual rate on $1,000,000 from 10 to 12 per cent, and the Drovers' Deposit National declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent in April, being an increase of one-half of 1 per cent, and advancing the annual rate on its $600,000 capital stock from an 8 to a 10 per cent basis.

In December the Union Stock Yards Savings and the Peoples Trust and Savings Banks with capitalizations of $250,000 and $200,000 respectively, both increased their semiannual dividend rates to 4 per cent, thus advancing the yearly rate to 8 per cent in each case.

The National Live Stock Bank, which went out of business February 7th, and was succeeded by the Live Stock Exchange National, declared a dividend of $200 a share in liquidation. The successor institution established a dividend basis for its shares of 10 per cent annually, and paid 2 per cent extra.

Apart from the Oakland National's renewal of its charter, which expired by limitation, there were no further reorganization changes of importance among local institutions.

The only Chicago bank which went in liquidation during 1908 was the United States Trust Company, the remnant of the former Jennings' "All Night" Bank. Depositors were paid in full, and the stockholders have thus far received 40 per cent on account of their holdings.

In December the Federal National, which went into liquidation in September, 1907, practically wound up its affairs, the holders of the bank's $500,000 share capital having received the last disbursements from the available assets, making 75 per cent paid to them in all. There remains in the neighborhood of 15 per cent in Walsh securities unpaid.

Depositors of the Globe Savings Bank, which failed in 1893, were paid a final dividend of 3½ per cent during the year, making 53½ per cent in all.

There were fewer changes and promotions among banks' officers last year than usual.

L. A. Goddard resigned as president of the Fort Dearborn National and became vice-president of the State Bank of Chicago.

W. A. Tilden became president of the Fort Dearborn, resigning from a similar post with the Drovers' Deposit National. Vice-President R. T. Forbes of the Drovers' succeeding him as president of the latter institution.

John A. Spoor was elected vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National.

Henry A. Blair was elected vice-president of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank to succeed W. H. Reid.

Richard J. Street and Fred I. Kent, department managers of the First National Bank, resigned after long periods of service.

The only bank of importance to increase its capital stock during 1908 was Foreman Bros. Banking Company, which raised the amount from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Few new banks, national or state, were started in this vicinity during the year. Some new ones began business in suburbs of the city.

The records show that local banks lost about $18,000,000 in savings deposits during the panic period, but these accounts have been gaining since last June. The last official reports at the close of November indicate a gain of about $4,000,000 in that item since the statement issued in May.

In December savings deposits usually decline in advance of the holidays, although this year has been an exception to the rule. Since the close of November there has been a material addition to the savings held by many of the banks and there is reason for believing that perhaps one-half of the losses sustained during the period of the monetary crisis has been regained.

It is estimated that a very large percentage of these gains is due directly to the fact that confidence is being restored and that those who have hoarded their funds in safe deposit vaults and hiding places are bringing the money back to the banks.

A great deal of money of the savings classes was invested in securities and real estate during the early part of the year, but increasing values, particularly with reference to stocks and bonds, led to not a little profit taking on the part of the buyers. Since September many of these investors have turned over their early purchases at a profit, and in waiting for other opportunities they have redeposited the funds in their savings accounts, with a resultant increase in that item among the various banks of the city.

It's a Mistaken Notion That All Cars Cost as Much To Maintain as Yours Does

Many a man swallows his chagrin, sends a check to the repairman, and out of mistaken pride, tells his friends what a corking good car he owns.

That's why there is so much misinformation floating around about the cost of upkeep and the reputation of some cars.

Just because so-and-so says a certain car is good or otherwise, doesn't make it so.

So-and-so may be influenced by false pride, desiring not to advertise that he made a mistake in buying; or, as a matter of fact, he may honestly think that his upkeep expense is no greater than the average.

But upkeep expense isn't a matter of what anyone thinks; it is a matter of recorded dollars and cents, itemized, footed up and (in the case of Winton Sixes) sworn to.

Ten Winton Sixes (stock cars), owned by ten business men in New York, Boston, Brooklyn, Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, and Chicago, ran, in six months, 65,687.4 miles on a total upkeep expense of $15.12 1-2.

These records were compiled from month to month and were sworn to by these ten owners and their ten chauffeurs.

Nobody's say-so, guess-so or pride had anything to do with it.

These cars ran a distance greater than twice around the world, averaged 1078.6 miles per month, and cost for repairs (upkeep) $1 for each 4343 miles.

Marvelous? of course. And how much more marvelous than your own car, Mr. Owner?

There isn't any joy in repair bills. Nor in a car that you can't use because the repair man is working on it.

But there is supreme satisfaction in owning a car that runs and keeps running day and night, winter and summer—a car that is ready for use whenever you want it.

That's the kind of car the Winton Six is.

The 48 horse power, five-passenger Winton Six at $3000 represents the most profitable investment offered to you by motor car makers—BECAUSE— —it gives MORE power than any other car at anything like the price.

—it has a SIX CYLINDER MOTOR—the accepted high-grade type. If you have never ridden behind a REAL six-cylinder motor, you have the pleasantest surprise of your automobile experience awaiting you. Try the Winton Six and observe its superiority, its quietness, smooth-running, flexibility (which means any speed you want on high gear), hill-climbing, comfort, and all-round enjoyment.

—it has a mechanically-infallible SELF-STARTER (that eliminates cranking), and inflates its own tires.

—it's UP-KEEP EXPENSE is the lowest of first class cars.

—it is THE SAME CAR in every mechanical feature that we made last season and is therefore A PROVED CAR in every detail—a car without an experimental feature—no skimping in weight, quality of materials or character of workmanship.

For great power and a seven-passenger body, look up the 60 horse-power Winton Six, with four speed transmission, at $4500.

Write for literature.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

The aggregate bank clearings in Milwaukee during 1908 fell off about $50,000,000 as compared with those for 1907. The clearings up to noon on December 31st, were: Total clearings, $547,569,294.69, against $562,163,848.11 in 1907. The balances this year aggregated $61,854,420.30, against $67,015,282.84 in 1907.

Beginning with November the clearings began picking up materially, and this advance was experienced during the month of December, when the increase was $8,000,000, as compared with the corresponding month a year ago.

The clearings for 1908 were $547,569,294.60 as against a total of $327,533,760.04 in 1901, $359,522,622 in 1902; $393,692,610 in 1903, $408,769,461 in 1904, $430,472,761 in 1905, $493,415,885 in 1906, and the figures given for 1907.

Bankers explain that the decrease this year came as the expected natural result of the general business conditions of the year, as the heritage of the financial slump of a year ago, the brunt of which has been borne during the past year.

Big Growth in Stockyards

The year 1908 showed a vast difference in livestock receipts at the Milwaukee stockyards over the totals of 1907, net arrivals of stocks being 1,073,712 during the year, as compared with 868,658 during 1907, and an aggregate value of $15,000,000 was placed on the stock. All kinds of livestock, save cattle and horses, increased from 1907, and the difference between these was small. A total of 879,622 hogs arrived in 1908, against 703,173 in 1907. Cattle amounted to 47,513 for the year, compared to 48,233 in 1907. Calves numbered 103,686 in 1908, against 73,062 in 1907. Sheep receipts were footed at 44,453, an increase of 1,683 over 1907. The arrivals of horses numbered 648 in 1908 against 1,020 in 1907.

More Permits Issued

Although 531 more building permits were issued in 1908 in comparison with the figures of a year ago, the aggregate of cost for building operations is $934,157 less in 1908 than in 1907. A year ago the erection of the auditorium, Majestic and Caswell buildings was begun, aggregating nearly $2,000,000. The total financial expenditure for building operations in Milwaukee the past year is $9,837,087 against $10,771,244 a year ago. The total number of permits issued in 1908 is 4,156 against 3,625 the year previous.

The nature of the building operations is as follows: Flats, 721; cottages, 356; store buildings, 118; factories, 55; churches and public buildings, 18; barns, 165 and sheds, 104. Additions and alterations number 2,016. The total number of families accumulated in the new flats is 2,398. Sixty-nine structures were razed by order of the building inspector during the year.

The factories represent an expenditure of $437,900. Additions to the Pfister & Vogel Leather Company were made, costing $110,000 and to the A. F. Gallun Tannery Company costing $50,000. A shoe factory was erected on the south side at a cost of $50,000. The churches, schools and public buildings represent an outlay of $597,956. The largest permit in this class is St. Mary's hospital, to cost $400,000. Thirteen apartment building permits were issued calling for an expenditure from $40,000 to $80,000, and containing apartments ranging from six to forty. The building inspector has under consideration plans for two apartment houses to cost over $50,000 each.

Business for Ten Months Large

The fact that the annual figures, presenting the story of Milwaukee's manufacturing and wholesale and jobbing trade for the year 1908 will show a decrease in the aggregates, as compared with the figures of the previous year, of from 20 to 30 per cent, may be explained in two ways.

The trade in this city during ten months of 1907 was by far the largest of any year in the city's business, and would have been by many millions the heaviest in all lines, had the average for nine or ten months of that year continued throughout the twelve months.

The other cause of decrease during the year just closed may be attributed to the fact that the brunt of one of the most extensive financial depressions this country has experienced in a decade, was borne by trade in 1908.

Iron and Steel Trade

For years the iron and steel manufacturing trade has led all other products in Milwaukee, and with each succeeding year this has shown an increase until 1908. While the decrease may seem large it must be remembered that up to November 1, 1907, the greatest output in the history of the business was realized. In the light of this fact that the past year's business still shows a satisfactory result. The aggregate of nearly $30,000,000 for the machinery output during the year, as against over $40,000,000 in 1907, represents the actual trade conditions during many months of 1907.

Will Test Insurance Law

The case of the Columbia National Life Insurance Company against Insurance Commissioner Beedle in which the constitutionality of the new life insurance laws is to be tested, will come up for argument in the circuit court on Tuesday. A brief prepared for the Mutual Life of New York and other interested companies by John C. Spooner will be used in the argument. The principal point involved is as to the right of the legislature to enact a law requiring taxes and reports from companies having in force in this state policies of insurance after the companies have formally withdrawn from the state.

The Beloit Mutual Savings Bank

The Beloit Mutual Savings Bank, which has paid in fifty-five semiannual dividends since its organization the total of $322,300 to depositors, last week added the sum of $2,650 to the guaranty fund for the protection of depositors. It also declared its usual semiannual dividend of 2 per cent. The guaranty fund of the bank is now $53,423.

The Citizens National of Stoughton

A certificate has been issued authorizing the Citizens National of Stoughton, capital $50,000, to begin business. F. B. Hyland is president, Walter Atkinson vice-president, and R. D. McCook, cashier.

In and Around Pittsburgh

By
LATIMER T. LAWTON

The beginning of 1909 finds the banking position in Pittsburgh better than it has been for a number of years. The story of the year has been well told as the various happenings of more or less importance have developed. While there are chapters which might be left for repetition at some other time it can be said without reservation that the banks have done their duty by their stockholders and by their depositors in a manner to reflect credit upon the management under circumstances not always of the best.

The banking position has been improved. Deposits have increased, and the end of the year, without the seal of an official report, can be said to find national banks in much better shape than they have been. State banks and trust companies reflect the same condition, and the outlook for the future is bright in the extreme. Bankers are a unit in the statement that they are well satisfied, and prospects are such as to lend every encouragement.

There have been times during the year when money was not in great demand, but that was generally in the early period before enterprise had taken courage and continued its onward march. The banks have, as a rule, been careful in placing loans, and while funds were abundant they have carefully scrutinized collateral and have been thoroughly convinced that every dollar put out was fully secured. This system might have worked hardship at times, but it was recognized by the business public that last year was a time of extraordinary care and no risks were to be taken.

The closing of two national banks by the Comptroller of the Currency, and of two small trust companies and one state bank by the banking commissioner was felt to some extent. When these happenings came they had their influence, but it may be said to the credit of Pittsburgh bankers that they met the situation in the right way.

Some changes in officers have occurred, but as a rule Pittsburgh bankers do not often find new positions. The tragic death of John B. Jackson, president of the Fidelity Title and Trust Company, was among the saddest happenings of the year, coming as it did without a moment's warning and very soon before the annual meeting of that particularly prosperous institution. Mr. Jackson was succeeded by J. J. Donnell, a thorough banker, who had long been identical with the institution as vice-president.

Another important change was the resignation of F. H. Skelding as president of the First National of Pittsburgh and the election of James S. Kuhn to the vacancy. Mr. Skelding had become connected with the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad and the West Side Belt Railroad as receiver, and these duties pressed upon him so that he could not give his attention to the institution he had served for a number of years. Mr. Kuhn had long been connected with the bank as director, and was at that time, as he is at present, president of the Pittsburgh Bank for Savings.

The Union Trust Company

The Union Trust Company, of Pittsburgh, now has a surplus fund of an even $25,000,000. One million was added to this fund last week by the directors at their regular meeting. This in addition to declaring the regular quarterly dividend of 15 per cent on the capital of $1,500,000.

The Penbrook National

The new Penbrook National will open for business about February 1st, capitalized at $25,000; surplus $2,500. W. H. Wolf is president; John A. Ebersole, vice-president, and W. R. Faust, cashier.

Mr. Price's Summary of 1908

President William Price of the Diamond National of Pittsburgh, in reviewing 1908 says: It is always interesting to review history. I think the readers will agree with me that the year closing will go down into history as a most eventful one in the financial and industrial world and if reviewed carefully and thoughtfully should be of lasting benefit to our city. No new truths have been learned but many old truths have been crystallized and have been made to stand out prominently in the public eye; namely, that character in the individual and the corporation has been put to a very severe test and in every case true character has come off victorious and has demonstrated to the world that honesty and the square deal are the safest assets for any individual or institution.

Many old methods of business procedure that a few years ago were thought to be clever, I am pleased to note, are now in the light of recent events frowned upon and I feel that in the future most of all transactions will be made on a safer and more equitable basis. I believe the outlook for business in the mercantile and industrial world is much brighter and I look for a slow, steady and permanent improvement. The financial situation of our city is sound, in capable hands and conservatively managed.

There is still one bad feature, in my judgment, that should be eliminated; that is, the paying of interest on daily balances for active business accounts. I find the great majority of merchants and manufacturers hold the same opinion. In view of the services rendered by the bankers to their clients they owe it to their stockholders and employees to discontinue this custom and I believe the public will approve of the same and trust it will come to pass by united action of the bankers in the very near future.

The John B. Barbour Company

John B. Barbour, Jr., one of the best known members of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, has admitted to partnership William J. Bauer, and the house in future will be known as John B. Barbour & Co.

The Pittsburgh Stock Exchange

Trading at the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the year was not marked by any particular period of activity. Business was carried on with much the same method and regularity from month to month, with here and there appearing a short space in which some particular security commanded attention. Total transactions in stocks amounting to $1,530,644, comparing with $3,044,135 in the preceding year, when the exchange was opened less than ten months. The bond market was a little more active, total sales being $900,000, as compared with $822,500.

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, January 7.—Several important changes ushered in the new year in Des Moines banking circles. That which perhaps attracted the most attention was the entrance of Simon Casaday into the Central State as president. Mr. Casaday's resignation as vice-president of the Iowa National and president of the Des Moines Savings occasioned considerable surprise a few weeks ago, but it was not suspected that he had planned a fusion with J. D. Whisenand, who organized the Central State in 1895 and has built it up into the largest dividend payer among the banks of the city, it is said. H. B. Hedge, who has been president, will be one of the vice-presidents after Mr. Casaday's entrance. Announcement has been made that with the entrance of Mr. Casaday, the capital of the Central State will be increased from $50,000 to $200,000. Both Mr. Casaday and Mr. Whisenand are among the best known bankers of Des Moines and Iowa. It is possible that no successor will be chosen to Mr. Casaday when the Iowa National and Des Moines Savings meet January 12th. H. S. Butler will probably remain as single vice-president.

Mr. Whinery Retires

Another important change was the retirement of H. M. Whinery as cashier of the Century Savings. Mr. Whinery handed in his resignation to President W. G. Harvison some days ago, stating that ill health of himself and of Mrs. Whinery demands that he retire. They will probably go West. Mr. Whinery has been cashier of the bank since it was organized, August 10, 1903. Until his successor is named at the annual meeting, January 23d, Assistant Cashier D. A. Byers will act as cashier.

The Des Moines National

The Des Moines National announces at the beginning of the year that it will organize and operate a savings department in connection with the former beginning about March 1st. The capital stock will be $60,000 and it will be owned in its entirety by the stockholders of the National. The officers and directors will be substantially the same as those composing the board of directors and officers of the National.

Bankers Interested in Sale

Another change in which Des Moines bankers were interested was the sale by Des Moines parties of the Bank of Earlham, at Earlham, to a copartnership of prominent business men of that little city. The Des Moines owners of the institution were H. E. Teachout, A. C. Miller, W. G. Harvison, F. A. Baylies, Andrew Nelson, H. M. Whinery. Among the new purchasers is Hugh S. Thompson, of Earlham, who has been assistant cashier and in charge of the business for several years. The transfer involves in the neighborhood of $100,000. The bank is prosperous and was relinquished by the Des Moines capitalists because of the stress of other business.

Preparing for Yearly Meetings

All the banks of Des Moines are preparing for their yearly meetings this month, as indeed are most of the banks throughout the state. Outside of the changes outlined above, few reorganizations are expected in Des Moines. A feeling that the banking outlook for the coming year is one of the best for years is general among bankers who anticipate a splendid business in all lines in 1909. Thus far the Marquardt Savings is the only Des Moines bank to hold its annual meeting. The usual 8 per cent dividend was declared. A 2 per cent addition to the surplus was made. There was no change in officers or directors.

Bank Owner Honored

A. C. Savage, practically the owner of the Farmer's Bank at Adair, was signally honored last week when the entire town turned out at a reception given by the citizens in honor of his election as state senator. Congressman and Mrs. Walter I. Smith were present and the entire affair was most pleasant. Senator Savage expects to reach Des Moines to-day to remain during the session of the legislature. He is a successful banker and a bright future is predicted for him. The writer, who attended the reception, later visited the three banks of which Adair boasts. All report a successful year, with money plentiful and the demand good at good rates.

In Quest for Local Depository

The postmaster at Carroll has been having a strenuous time since the closing of the First National in a quest for a local depository for the postoffice receipts. On account of the other banks at Carroll being neither national nor state the postal laws would not permit the deposit of the funds there although the other institutions are as perfectly sound. After several shifts which the department would not approve, the postmaster finally obtained permission to deposit in the United States National at Omaha and the money is now sent there by registered mail twice each day. It is checked out twice a month to pay off the postal employees at Carroll.

Congressman Hull's Views

Congressman J. A. T. Hull, who has been spending the holidays at his home here, doesn't believe that the postal savings bank bill will be passed at the present session of the congress. He thinks that the Aldrich currency commission will present some important amendments but will not be able to present the complete financial scheme for the devise-ment of which it was created. "Unless the terms of the postal savings bank bill are most carefully guarded it will be the means of draining into the huge depositories of Wall Street the savings of many of the people of the western country. We have all of that sort of thing now that we should have. I shall certainly oppose the bill unless this feature be guarded most closely," he said.

Checkbooks

Reports from the rural districts indicate that checkbooks are taking the place of promissory note pads at the public sales which are a feature of country life. The farmers have the cash in the banks to pay for all they buy. A public sale at Hampton is reported at which

Assumes Duties

George L. Dobson, formerly secretary of state, assumed his duties as treasurer of Polk county the first of the year. Mr. Dobson was elected on a platform which provides for placing all county funds at interest. Before he could take his place he was forced to file bonds of $250,000 with real estate holdings of twice that value as security. Twenty-one residents, mostly bankers, went on the bond, which was headed by R. A. Crawford, of the Valley National, who qualified for $100,000.

New Bank for Marshalltown

The First Trust & Savings has filed articles of incorporation at Marshalltown, with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are the officers of the First National, of which the new bank is to be a part: President, D. T. Denmead; vice-president, James L. Denmead; cashier, C. C. St. Clair; directors, D. T. Denmead, Charles Eckles, A. M. Friend, Warren Nichols, C. H. Smith, C. C. St. Clair and James L. Denmead.

The Cedar Falls National

While in Cedar Falls last week I was privileged to visit the newly occupied building of the Cedar Falls National. It would be difficult to imagine a more complete and beautiful bank building than this particularly in a city the size of Cedar Falls. The new building of the Security National, across the street, is also a structure of which Cedar Falls is justly proud.

Banking Notes

Mrs. Homer A. Miller, wife of President Miller, of the Iowa National, has been quite ill of pneumonia, from which, however, she is recovering. Mrs. Miller is a social favorite in Des Moines.

J. C. O'Donnell, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Club, calls a meeting for early this month. The club consists of bankers who favor some sort of guaranteed deposits. Either Senator Jamieson, of Shenandoah, or Senator Moon, of Ottumwa, will present a bill for state guaranty at the coming session of the legislature.

W. F. Dobbin, a leading banker at Bertrand, Neb., has been visiting friends in Des Moines and Iowa during the holiday season. He was formerly a well known Iowan.

Word has been received here of the selection of W. F. Callender to the presidency of the Bank of Los Angeles, at Los Angeles. Callender is well known in Iowa, where he formerly lived. He is a twin brother of John Callender, of Des Moines.

T. W. Brown has been elected assistant cashier of the Citizens Savings, at Iowa Falls, succeeding C. C. Harvey, who has been advanced to cashiership. Mr. Brown was formerly county treasurer of Cass county.

I. M. Lyon, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, at Sioux City, has been appointed deputy revenue collector for Sioux City, succeeding Frank L. Wirick, resigned. Mr. Lyon formerly served two and a half years under J. U. Sammis, but was deposed to make way for Mr. Wirick when Archie Smith was appointed collector.

The Milford National has been authorized to begin business at Milford. The capital stock is $25,000. The president is Milton S. Dewey; vice-president, H. H. Overocker; cashier, H. S. Abbott; assistant cashier, F. A. Heldridge.

W. D. McEwen, president of the State Savings, at Rolfe, is dead. Mr. McEwen was one of the first settlers, invested his earnings and became wealthy through the growth of the country. He was prominent in business and political circles.

The City National at Council Bluffs has been authorized to commence business. The capital stock is $120,000. The officers are: President, T. G. Turner; vice-presidents, Oscar Keline and J. G. Wadsworth; cashier, Charles R. Hannan, Jr.

F. H. Simpson, receiving teller for the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines, has resigned to accept a position with the N. M. Stark Bridge Company.

The Valley National of Des Moines has been made reserve agent for the Union Stock Yards Bank of South Omaha; also, along with the Merchants National of Cedar Rapids for the First National of Seymour; the Citizens National of Des Moines for the First National of Valley Junction; the Minnesota National, Minneapolis, for the Live Stock National of Sioux City.

Des Moines bank clearings for the week ending January 2d were $2,665,820.33.

The Security Mortgage and Loan, capital stock $10,000, has been incorporated in Des Moines.

The Comptroller has authorized the National Bank of Bloomfield to begin business. Capital stock is $55,000. Henry C. Taylor is president; S. S. Standley, vice-president; S. F. McConnell, cashier; S. E. Howe, assistant cashier.

Nationals May Come In

Sec. XXXVI. The State Banking Board may admit any national bank, transacting a banking business in this state, to the privileges and duties of the "Depositors' Protective Fund" whenever such national bank shall qualify in every way with the requirements set forth in Section XXXV of this act, and in addition shall agree to furnish to the said board copies of all reports which it may thereafter make to the Comptroller of the Currency, and copies of all letters from the Comptroller's office relative to examinations made by national bank examiners of such bank and their replies thereto. They shall also agree to permit any examiner or special officer detailed by the state banking board to make a special examination of such national bank, whenever the said board may deem such special inspection necessary.

Sec. XXXVI. Whenever in the judgment of the State Banking Board, sufficient opportunity has been given all banks in this state to qualify themselves for the benefits and to assume the responsibilities of the "Depositors' Protective Fund," they shall thereupon make proclamation of this finding, and thereafter it shall be unlawful for the treasurer of this state, or of any county, city, township, village, or school district to deposit, or permit to be deposited any public funds belonging to said state, county, city, township, village or school district, or any public funds of any kind or description in any bank except those banks which subscribe to the "Depositors' Protective Fund" in this act provided, and for such public funds so deposited no special bonds or other security shall be required. #### Banks Can Withdraw

Sec. XXXVII. The membership of any bank in the "Depositors' Protective Fund" and the enjoyment of its benefits may be terminated by order of the State Banking Board, whenever it shall appear to the said board that such bank is conducting its business in an unlawful or hazardous manner, or is disregarding the instructions or requirements of said board, or fails for more than thirty days after notice to correct irregularities, or persists in carrying an insufficient reserve. In such event, and after due hearing, the board shall make its decision, and if the vote is to suspend such bank from the privileges of the "Depositors' Protective Fund," notice thereof shall be published by the secretary of said board in a newspaper of general circulation published in the vicinity of the suspended bank, and no deposits received thereafter shall be entitled to any of the benefits of the fund herein provided.

Sec. XXXVIII. Any bank, which may have participated in the privileges and duties of the "Depositors' Protective Fund" in this act provided may withdraw from such participation whenever it may be so decided by its board of directors. Whenever such action is taken, the said bank shall notify the State Banking Board, and the Secretary of such board shall publish a notice that the "Depositors' Protective Fund" is no longer responsible for the payment of deposits in such bank, such notice to be printed in a newspaper of general circulation in the county of the withdrawing bank, and in the immediate village or town in which such bank is located if there be one there published. And thereafter, such bank shall bear no responsibility for losses incurred in other banks after the date of its own withdrawal, but it shall be held responsible for all deposit liability of protected banks then existing. And after a reasonable time, the State Banking Board may, in their discretion, repay to such bank such portion as may remain of its initial and other assessments, provided for elsewhere in this act.

To Pay Depositors in 30 Days

Sec. XXXIX. The intention of this act, is to provide for sufficient assessments against all the banks participating in, and enjoying the benefits of the "Depositors' Protective Fund" to completely pay within 30 days all the creditors of failed banks for their bona fide deposits in such failed banks subscribing to such fund, and this without limitation as to the number of assessments which may be made in any one year. No other indebtedness of any kind may claim the benefit of the "Depositors' Protective Fund," but the State Banking Board may, in their discretion, use the funds in their control, in such protective fund, to pay off notes for borrowed money, where it may appear that collaterals will be released, and the general good conserved.

Sec. XL. Whenever, in the course of deposit redemption, the balance in the "Depositors' Protective Fund" shall fall materially below one per cent of the amount at risk, the State Banking Board shall make such levy as will replenish such fund, the intention of this act being to maintain a reserve of one per cent of deposits, for the uses herein set forth.

The sections not printed above conform very closely to the present act or to existing laws elsewhere and provide in detail for the operation of the banking department and the conduct of the examiners. The Volpp bill is said to have been promised strong support.

The Pitfalls of Speculation

By THOMAS GIBSON

This book deals exclusively with marginal speculation and analyzes in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies. While 80 per cent. of the public speculators fail in their ventures, the writer contends that the errors may be corrected and the pitfalls avoided by careful study and clear understanding of the machinery of the exchanges.

In the introduction the writer says:

"I do not pretend that any prescription can be written to insure success nor that a majority of the public traders will ever succeed, but I do maintain that many individuals capable of clear reasoning and the directed exercise of such reasoning, are simply moving in the dark thru a lack of understanding as to what makes and breaks prices. More fallacies, superstitions and distorted logic are connected with speculation than with any other business on earth."

Until the late Charles H. Dow, the founder of "The Wall Street Journal," began to write of such matters there was no literature extant on the art of speculation with especial reference to the position of the speculator of moderate means. Mr. Dow's efforts were newspaper articles, not intended for book publication. Since Mr. Dow, no writer has appeared to treat of these matters with anything approaching the knowledge of the subject, the breadth of view and the common-sense treatment that Mr. Gibson devotes to it.

Advantages of Modern Banking Facilities

By Frank Collins, Assistant to the President, National Produce Bank, Chicago

It would be difficult for me to enumerate clearly, on paper, all the benefits accruing from a banking connection to the man engaged in business, but I gladly submit the following as good reasons why every business man should have a bank account:

The bank account provides you with the most convenient means of handling your funds and collecting checks and drafts. It is the only way known to the business world by which you can establish a credit which will enable you to borrow funds when such a course becomes necessary or advantageous.

Your cancelled checks returned to you, after having been paid by the bank, save disputes and litigation. You may lose your receipted bill, but if you have your cancelled check, you won't have to pay the bill twice. The check is proof positive that you paid the money.

Your money in bank keeps the mills running, employs labor and makes good and prosperous times for all. Your bank account, however small, will be a start of a reserve fund, which will mean peace, plenty and contentment in old age.

A bank account makes you able to run your business instead of your business running you. History repeats itself, and all the great fortunes of to-day had their beginning in a small savings account.

The only way to foil the pickpockets is to carry a checkbook instead of a pocketbook. Your money in bank is money in circulation—it plants the fields and moves the crops to market.

Your money in bank contributes to the general prosperity of the community by lowering the interest rates and making better times. The more you have the more you want. This is human nature. It may be hard to save the first $100.00, but it will be easier to make it $1,000.00. Every little bit added to what you have makes just a little bit more.

It is simpler, easier, safer and cheaper to send remittances to distant or near-by places through the bank than in any other way. Every endorser through whose hands a check passes is a witness that the payee received the amount the check calls for. If a check is lost your money is still safe in bank.

If a check is stolen and collected by some one else by means of a forged endorsement you do not lose anything, for the various endorsers of the bank must make good the amount. Nine-tenths of the business of the world is carried on by means of checks, drafts, bills of exchange, etc.

Systematic and persistent depositing in a bank is the best means yet devised for the accumulation of money, and the interests, whether large or small, of men, women and children, are alike carefully attended to by the bank.

For sanitary reasons it is better to issue checks than to handle, more frequently than necessary, foul, germ-carrying, poison-laden currency. This particularly applies to those engaged in the handling of foodstuffs.

A word from your banker at the right time may enable you to make more money than all the letters of recommendation you can carry.

The proper handling of a bank account gives you a practical business education. No man is likely to be given a position of trust or honor unless he is favorably known at the bank.

An active bank account is one of the best means of establishing credit with your business associates. A man with a bank account and a checkbook in his pocket has all the money he needs right with him and the correct change, too.

The mere fact of a person's having a bank account, although small, creates within him a spirit of independence and moral strength obtainable in no other way. The private office of the bank is at the disposal of its depositors, and there is no other place as suitable for the transaction of business of a financial nature.

Make your banker familiar with your circumstances and show him, by your actions, you are determined to save money, and you have established a basis for any reasonable accommodation.

The banker is familiar with commercial law and all matters pertaining to good business practice, and is always ready to advise and inform his customers. Many fat attorney fees are thus saved by bank depositors.

No thief has ever been known to torture a miser recluse to make him divulge the hiding place of his bank book.

The National Shawmut Bank

Col. Wm. A. Gaston, president of the National Shawmut Bank, Boston, says: "I am more optimistic concerning the business situation than are some others because I see an increasing demand for money. We are receiving inquiries for accommodation by mercantile interests that have not been in the market for six and eight months. This can only mean that money is being used."

New Banks Organized

The People's National of Boydton, Va., capital $25,000; the Kahala National, Kahala, Hawaii, $25,000; the Home National, Lexington, S. C., $25,000, have been granted certificates to begin business. The Morgan County Bank, Madison, Ga., capital $40,000, has been converted into the Morgan County National of Madison. The First National of Nanticoke, Penn., has been extended.

The Bank of Odenville

The new Bank of Odenville (Ala.) reports capital of $15,000, with the following officers: W. T. Brown as president, J. L. Maddox, vice-president, and McLane Tilton, Jr., cashier.

"A Damaged Reputation"

The latest from the press of R. F. Fenno & Company, of New York, is "A Damaged Reputation," by Harold Bindloss. He is the author of "Alton of Somasco," a book which has been widely read.

"A Damaged Reputation" is a story of Canadian adventure.

The hero, Brooke, quarreling with his aristocratic father, crossed the sea, and at Vancouver buys a ranch in British Columbia. The ranch turns out to be a forsaken tract, and just as he was at the point of sinking into sordid indifference the heroine, Barbara Heathcote turns up. Those who are interested in the story will have to read for themselves how the hero nobly retrieved his damaged reputation. The price of the book is $1.00 net.

To Have a New Home

The school board of North Yakima, Wash., is arranging with a bank at Tacoma to honor warrants for $28,000 to complete the new high school building. These warrants were once refused by Yakima banks. H. J. Snively, attorney for the board, declares the warrants were legally drawn.

The Twenty Dollar Gold Piece

The Saint Gauden twenty dollar gold pieces, which sold one year ago for $40, can now be bought at from $28 to $32.

The State Bank of Nanson

Jos. B. Johnson, cashier of the State Bank of Nanson, N. D., has resigned.

Expert Condemns New Coins as Ugly and Clumsy

EDITOR CHICAGO BANKER: It seems to me that some adverse criticism should be expressed in regard to the hideous new half and quarter eagles. I inclose you a copy of a letter I sent to President Roosevelt ten days ago, which you may publish if you see fit.

I think it is our duty not to let such a thing as this be issued without some one showing that it is not considered the highest possible expression of America's artistic ability.

I should like to have added to the letter to the President: "The opportunity to design the new coinage should have been thrown open to public competition, and then the design submitted to connoisseurs, like members of the numismatic societies, when we would have obtained a coinage that would have redounded to the artistic credit of our country."

S. Hudson Chapman.

Member of the American Numismatic Society of New York Archeological Institute, the American Numismatic Association, vice-president of the Geographical Society, etc.

"To Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States: It was the hope of every one that when our new coinage appeared we would have one of great beauty and artistic merit. But the new $5 and $2½ gold pieces just issued totally lack these qualities, and not only those of beauty, but actually miss the practicability to which every effect of beauty in relief has been sacrificed.

"The idea of Dr. William S. Bigelow, of Boston, to sink the whole relief below the flat surface of the coin causes it to appear like a design merely incised in the blank, and precludes entirely the effect of a miniature bas-relief.

"The head of the Indian is without artistic merit, and portrays an Indian who is emaciated, totally unlike the big, strong Indian chiefs as seen in real life. The treatment of the head is crude and hard, with sharp, abrupt outlines, as if carved by a mere metal chaser; and on the reverse is a reproduction of the St. Gaudens' eagle, which represents not our national bird (the white-headed eagle—commonly but erroneously called the bald-headed eagle—which has no feathers on its feet), but resembles more closely the golden eagle, which is also indigenous to Europe.

"The placing of the design below the surface of the flange, with deeply incised outlines, gives the effect of having been engraved into the metal, and can, therefore, be closely imitated by any metal chaser with the graver, without dies or moulds. And I am certain that if this had been suggested to the secret service officials it would never have been issued by the Treasury Department, and the issuance ought to be immediately stopped and the coins recalled, for every one will be in danger of the imitations.

"The sunken design, especially the deeply sunken portion of the neck of the Indian, will be a great receptacle for dirt and conveyor of disease, and the coin will be the most unhygienic ever issued.

"The principal claim put out for this coin and which, according to the claim, would appear to be the most important any design can have, is that it will stack. But, alas! even this is not obtained by this means, for I have before me a stack of twenty pieces—$100—the stack used by cashiers, and it is the most tottering stack of modern coins, rocking to a great degree, and when the table is jarred about four times the upper coins slide off.

"They will fall when carried on a bank tray. It is well known that you cannot strike a lot of flat backs and get them perfectly true. As a connoisseur remarked to me: 'Coins should be like a table, which we do not make with a flat bottom, but with feet to stand upon, and this result in coins can and always has been obtained by a flat rim.'

"And then the new coins, being thinner, as the metal is taken up by the full field, they do not make stacks equal in height to the old, and when mixed with the other issue cause the piles to be of unequal height, and the cashier cannot use the height of a stack as a test of count, but must sort this issue out.

"The criticism from the bankers that the first model of the $20 and $10 pieces did not stack firmly should not cause the mint officials to throw all other considerations to the winds, for the firmness in stacking a coin, as stated above, could be obtained by the use of a sufficiently wide and high rim.

"These coins will be a disgrace to our country as a monument of our present ideas of art as applied to coinage.

"As compared with those of recent issues of European countries, not to mention the beautiful works of the ancient Greek coin engravers, it is an utterly miserable, hideous production, and let us hope that its issue will not be continued and that it will be recalled and remelted.

"I would summarize the above objections as follows:

"First—Lack of beauty. The coinage of our country should be an example of beauty and art to all its citizens. Second—Ease with which it may be counterfeited. Third—Unhygienic. Its filth-bearing capacities. Fourth—Not forming stacks of equal height.

"I would suggest as a means of obtaining a competent committee to pass upon designs for coinage, that in future all designs for coinage be submitted to the American numismatic societies. For instance: The American Numismatic Society of New York, president, Archer D. Huntington, and the American Numismatic Association, president, Farran Zerbe.

"The matter would then be weighed by men who have devoted their lives or leisure to the study of the art of coinage from the earliest period to the present time, and thus, having a complete purview of the subject, they would be able to judge of the merits of designs offered, and if such course were adopted we would be saved the mortification of seeing generally the worst designs accepted and the taste of our people degraded, instead of elevated, by the coinage passing through their hands.

Samuel Hudson Chapman.

The Merits of the New Law

The provision of the new trust company law of Massachusetts requiring trust companies which have a savings department to conduct that department under the savings bank investment laws has, incidentally, established an institution for savings which in some respects, surpasses the savings banks themselves, both in security to depositor and in aggregate interest return it allows on deposits.

Since 1893 trust companies have been permitted to receive savings deposits. The new law provided that trust companies should invest their savings deposits in the same manner as savings banks. Depositors in savings trust companies are thus given the same security as are depositors in savings banks. Besides, they have an additional element of security through being an integral part of a trust company, namely, the "double liability of stockholders." Although savings banks in this state give practically absolute security to depositors, the additional security provided by savings trust companies would prove a very real asset in case of emergency.

As to the question of interest return, it has always been a point in favor of trust companies that they allow interest on deposits from the day the deposit is made.

Canadian Bond Issues

Municipalities of Canada are among the most active in financing their needs. Throughout the Dominion numerous elections are being held for contemplated improvements involving bond issues. Vancouver, B. C., is soon to vote on an issue of $200,000 for school buildings and improvement. Peterborough, Ont., will vote next month on the proposal to raise $30,000 for park purchase. Macleod, Alta., has already approved of sewerage bonds of $35,000, as well as $55,000 for electric light and water systems.

The provinces of Saskatchewan recently issued a $410,000 sterling 4 per cent loan at 99½ in London. Canadian issues have generally been received with prompt favor by the British investor, although in this case 75 per cent of the loan at the end of the term for bidding was still on the underwriters' hands. Six different towns are about to award an aggregate of $300,000 bonds, ranging from 4 per cent by Winnipeg, to an 8 per cent rate for a small issue by the town of Melford, Sask. Most of these bonds are for school and for waterworks purchases.

Illinois State Banks

An increase of $2,089,186 in the state bank deposits of Illinois in two months is shown in reports submitted to State Auditor McCullough in response to a call for a statement of the condition of the banks on November 28th. The increase is evidence of the return of prosperity in 425 banks of Illinois, as compared with the 421 banks that were doing business when the statement was issued on September 2, 1908. The total capital, surplus and undivided profits of $91,664,535 is an increase of $626,632 over the next preceding statement. The statement shows the per cent of reserve on deposits to be 35.84.

Total of loans and discounts is $316,004,159, an increase of $4,165,971. The total resources are $572,823,812, an increase of $7,739,556. A total decrease of $1,671,334.05 is shown in the amount due from national banks, and there is also a decrease of $1,633,200 in the gold certificates.

Savings time deposits aggregate $183,122,774, which is an increase of $3,420,534 over the amount two months previous. A decrease of $234,722 is shown in certificate time deposits, now aggregating $42,560,614. Individual demand deposits now amount to $185,826,226, totaling an increase of $1,700,583, as against one of $1,198,898 in the next preceding statement. A decrease of $2,614,077 is shown in certificate demand deposits, which now aggregate $18,796,943. Cashiers' checks aggregating $2,626,089 amount to $765,110 less than in the preceding report.

Chicago Bank Elections

All the national banks of Chicago and the majority of the state banks held their annual meetings Tuesday. There were a number of changes among directors and minor officials, but as a rule the stockholders appeared to be satisfied with the manner in which their principal officers had carried the banks through a year of dull business, cheap money, and liquidation of bad loans. Most of the banks elected officers, but some deferred that action until a later date.

The year closed with the banks in good condition, for the examinations made under the direction of the Clearing House Association itself have resulted in the charging off of bad accounts.

Bank stock values have in some instances passed former levels, and the community at large has shown its confidence by not only buying the stocks, but causing the banks to make new high records in volume of deposits. The savings depositors, who were the last to return to the banks after October, 1907, are now freely redepositing funds which they withdrew twelve and eighteen months ago.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THIS department has become very popular in the short time it has been in existence and no less than four imitations have been attempted in contemporaries. "Banks and bankers" occupy most of the space, but once in a while we unconsciously hit upon a near-banker. This seems like a case in point. In a recent issue we printed the following intended to be complimentary: "The Fidelity Trust Company, Tacoma, is issuing an embossed calendar, 'The Three Guardsmen,' the best bank calendar seen this year. A request to Arthur G. Prichard, cashier, will let you see it."

THIS was a mistake all round. What we meant for a compliment for Mr. Prichard, the bank and the calendar was repaid by a letter of which the following extract is fit to print and gives a fair idea of the balance of the lengthy communication.

THIS is quoting from the Prichard letter of January 2d: "To say the least, I am exceedingly surprised to think that such a statement as that should be entered in your publication. The fact that we favored you with one of these was no reason why you should take upon yourselves the impertinence to inform the public throughout the country that we were ready to distribute these broadcast all over the United States, where to send them a calendar would do us no more good than to tack one up in the dense forest. A calendar such as that, which costs in the neighborhood of 26c apiece, is certainly not one which we care to send to parties who, the chances are, more likely want them merely because they cost them nothing."

THE last paragraph gives Mr. Prichard's conception of the character of bankers other than himself. Here also is how that grouchy gentleman limits the future initiative of the publisher of this journal: "In the future," writes Mr. P., "kindly confine yourselves to an acknowledgment of it (his calendar) and a statement as to its merits would be in place, but unless you wish to foot the bill yourself do not inform the public that they have merely to ask for it in order to get one."

HEREWITH our apologies for introducing a near-banker to the select circle who read this little corner of the BANKER. He doesn't belong among you.

LATHAM T. SOUTHER, cashier of the Sangamon Loan & Trust Company, at Springfield, has been giving his services to the Lincoln Centennial Association, which proposes to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's birthday in a big banquet on February 12th, at which at least four notable speakers will be present and deliver addresses, either during the day or in the evening, to wit: The Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States; the Hon. J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States; Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan, and the Hon. Jonathan P. Dolliver, United States Senator from Iowa.

APPROPRIATE annual exercises will be a part of the plans of the big Lincoln Association, to be organized with 1,000 members.

ALFRED A. SPEER, the newly elected republican speaker of the Missouri legislature, is a banker at Chamois, Mo. The little city has less than 1,000 population and but one bank, the one of which Speaker Speer is president. He also owns the store and is the champion croquet player in Chamois.

THE oldest bank in Joliet has the very newest building and President George Woodruff is being congratulated upon its classic beauty and substantial, monumental, granite construction. It is rated one of the best of the many new bank buildings in Illinois.

ABOUT all that Chairman Harry M. Rubey of the Missouri Democratic State Central Committee got out of the election salvage appears to be the naming of the chaplain of the senate. This went to Harry's pastor in Macon. The republicans got the rest.

THE Nebraskans are worried over the circulation, in a small way, of forged certificates of deposit. The latest notice by Secretary Hughes referred to those forged on the Union State Bank of Strang.

THE Farmers National of Yorke, Neb., is the real live wire bank of its section. One of its novelties is a check drawn upon "The Bank that Always Treats You Right," with notice to mail or present it at the Farmers National, at Yorke. Cashier A. B. Christian believes in advertising and says so, quoting results to show its effect in his own case. From an interesting letter we quote the next paragraph:

"THERE are no class of business men waking up to a realization that 'it pays to advertise' more than bankers, and the great interest they are taking in all news matter pertaining to better advertising shows that they believe in it. When we started the fourth bank in Yorke forty months ago, and were told by our friends that it looked as if there was no room here for the fourth bank, it did not look as bright as we had wished and did not have that rosy appearance to make us believe there was 'millions in it' to compete with three good, established banks, which had been accommodating and had ample means. When we started we commenced a campaign of good, persistent advertising, keeping everlastingly at it. For about six months, not one of our competitors used advertising space for other than publication of statement, but they reluctantly commenced to use more and more space and to-day they are using more advertising space than we are. We can truthfully say that we have the best looking and the finest and the most successful conservative bankers in Yorke, Nebraska, that can be found anywhere. We are not modest when we talk about our good friends—our competitors. It was due to 'good advertising' that within thirty months we had as much business as the average bank of the same capital had secured in thirty years. When it is considered that within six months our $100 shares of stock were worth $150 and that we do not enjoy the deposits of outside banks and all our business is purely local, having never invested a dollar in commercial paper, we believe that it was due to advertising mainly."

MR. CHRISTIAN'S letterheads, like his checks, are unlike any other. He's a genius, but any country bank can do something like as well. He closes all of his business letters with "Uncle Sam deposits with the Farmers National, why don't you?"

ST. ELMO LEWIS is a six cylinder cyclone in his business. He's written a big book upon advertising while at the same time conducting the world wide publicity bureau of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company. Now he's going to print in book form for free distribution by the Burroughs people, "The Mechanisms of Banking," a series of articles written for THE CHICAGO BANKER by Mr. Berg, then of the First National staff of this city. The articles are splendid, and Mr. Berg with elaboration might produce a book which would sell.

THE Bennett Bank—Bennett Loan & Trust Company—of Sioux City, Iowa, is sending out a handsome calendar. CASHIER.

The Jersey State Bank

The Jersey State Bank, of Jerseyville, Ill., has elected the following directors: Judge A. M. Slaten, T. S. Chapman, George H. Dougherty, William D. Landon, M. C. Steele, and Harry L. Chapman. The capital stock of the institution was increased from $25,000 to $50,000. T. S. Chapman was chosen president; A. M. Slaten, vice-president, and C. G. Raddish, secretary.

New National Bank for Turkey

Consul General Ernest L. Harris writes from Smyrna that it is reported that a new national bank for Turkey is about to be established, with head offices in Constantinople, where a large building is to be erected for the purpose, the program being as follows:

The chief plan of the bank will be the Credit Foncier system; that is, an establishment which advances money on land, taking mortgages as security, thus enabling the borrower to repay after a certain period of years in the shape of annuities so calculated that at the end of the appointed time the amount of the capital loaned is returned with interest. Of the 300,000 shares proposed only Ottoman subjects can own as many as 30,000. Every Ottoman subject purchasing 30 shares at $50 each will be considered as a founder.

The initial capital of the bank is to be $15,000,000, with the right to increase the amount to $50,000,000. The capital of the Credit Foncier, which is also $15,000,000, may be increased to $100,000,000. The duration of the concession is ninety-nine years. The interest on the money loaned to farmers and landowners will be well below the legal rate in Turkey, which is 9 per cent. The sums loaned are repayable at the maximum in fifty years. The national bank will not infringe on the privileges of the Ottoman Bank. Branches will probably be established in all the large cities of the empire.

The Bank of Johnston

The Bank of Johnston (S. C.) reports capital of $75,000; surplus $7,500, and deposits of $165,000. J. D. Eidson is president; G. M. Smith, vice-president; S. J. Watson, cashier, and H. G. Eidson, assistant cashier.

False Credit Statements Under the Ban

One of the many advantages of having a trained expert and a qualified attorney actively engaged upon the permanent staff of the American Bankers Association is the careful watching of legislative tendencies. In many cases the initiative may be taken with advantage to all concerned in the way of correcting or warding off of abuses by legislative provisions. General Counsel Thomas B. Paton has drafted a law to punish the making of false statements in writing of financial conditions to obtain credit either from banks or mercantile houses. Losses from this source are of frequent occurrence and it is claimed that the existing criminal laws are inadequate to punish the offenders.

The bill will be introduced in the New York legislature in the near future. In brief, the law provides for the punishment of any person or officer or employee of corporation who individually or in a representative capacity makes a false statement in writing to obtain a loan or credit in any form or an extension of credit, either for his own use or for the use of the firm or corporation which he represents. If successful in New York it will be put upon passage in all other states as early as possible.

The law further provides a penalty where on a previous statement of financial condition has been made a loan or credit is afterwards procured on faith of such statement when it is known that the previous statement is false with respect to present financial condition. The proposed law likewise covers the putting of false statements in the hands of note brokers for the purpose of influencing the marketing of the firm's or corporation's paper. The following is a draft of the act:

"Any person who, either individually or in a representative capacity

"(1) Shall knowingly make a false statement in writing to any person, firm or corporation engaged in banking or other business respecting his own financial condition or the financial condition of any firm or corporation with which he is connected as member, director, officer, employee or agent, for the purpose of procuring a loan, or credit in any form or an extension of credit from the person, firm or corporation to which such false statement is made, either for his own use or for the use of the firm or corporation with which he is connected as aforesaid, or

"(2) Having previously made, or having knowledge that another has previously made, a statement in writing to any person, firm or corporation engaged in banking or other business respecting his own financial condition or the financial condition of any firm or corporation with which he is connected as aforesaid, shall afterwards procure on faith of such statement from the person, firm or corporation to whom such previous statement has been made, either for his own use or for the use of the firm or corporation with which he is so connected, a loan or credit in any form, or an extension of credit, knowing at the time of such procuring, that such previously made statement is in any material particular false, with respect to the present financial condition of himself or of the firm or corporation with which he is so connected, or

"(3) Shall deliver to any notebroker or other agent for the sale or negotiation of commercial paper any statement in writing, knowing the same to be false, respecting his own financial condition or the financial condition of any firm or corporation with which he is connected as aforesaid, for the purpose of having such statement used in furtherance of the sale, pledge or negotiation of any note, bill or other instrument for the payment of money made, or indorsed or accepted, or owned in whole or in part by him individually or by the firm or corporation with which he is so connected, or

The American Bankers Association will ask the states to pass a law, of which a draft has been prepared, to punish those who obtain bank or mercantile credits on false statements—also an act to punish those who circulate malicious reports

"(4) Having previously delivered, or having knowledge that another has previously delivered to any notebroker or other agent for the sale or negotiation of commercial paper, a statement in writing respecting his own financial condition, or the financial condition of any firm or corporation with which he is connected as aforesaid, shall afterwards deliver to such notebroker or other agent for the purpose of sale, pledge or negotiation on faith of such statement, any note, bill or other instrument for the payment of money made, or indorsed, or accepted, or owned in whole or in part, by himself individually or by the firm or corporation with which he is so connected, knowing at the time that such previously delivered statement is in any material particular false, as to the present financial condition of himself or of such firm or corporation, shall be guilty of (felony or misdemeanor) and punishable by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both."

Commenting on this Mr. Paton said:

"The above act has been drafted pursuant to request of the standing law committee, following recommendation contained in the report of committee on credit information that there be secured 'the enactment of a statute providing for the severe punishment of any officer of a corporation convicted of obtaining money for such corporation by means of a false statement signed by him.'

"The draft has been broadened in scope to punish the officer, agent or individual who either for himself or for the firm or corporation he represents knowingly (1) makes a false statement to a bank or other person to procure a loan or credit in any form, (2) obtains a loan or credit upon a previously made statement which is false at the time the loan is procured, (3) delivers a false statement to a notebroker or other agent to influence the marketing of his or his firm's or corporation's paper, or (4) puts paper in a notebroker's hands for marketing on faith of a previously delivered statement, which is false as to present financial condition.

"The proposed act (subdivisions 1 and 2) is drawn to punish false statements of financial condition to 'any person, firm or corporation engaged in banking or other business,' rather than, more specifically, to 'any bank or trust company,' etc. It has been intentionally so worded, that it may cover mercantile, as well as bank, credits. It is desirable, in the banking interest, that mercantile credits be protected."

A further law drafted by Mr. Paton is designed to punish any person who wilfully or maliciously makes or circulates derogatory statements affecting the solvency or financial standing of any bank. The malicious spreading of false rumors concerning banking institutions is a case of peculiar nature and one which causes great damage not only to banks affected, but the general public, needlessly creating distrust. Here is a summary of the act:

"(1) Any person who shall wilfully and maliciously make, circulate or transmit to another or others any statement, rumor or suggestion, written, printed or by word of mouth, which is directly or by inference derogatory to the financial condition or affects the solvency or financial standing of any bank, savings bank, banking institution or trust company doing business in this state, or who shall counsel, aid, procure or induce another to start, transmit or circulate any such statement or rumor, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for a term of not more than five years, or both."

A similar law has been introduced in Congress by the Hon. John Dalzell, of Pennsylvania.

These bills are regarded of great importance by the banking and mercantile world.

Mr. Paton formerly was editor of the Banking Law Journal, but has sold his interest and retired absolutely from service with it, to give his entire time to A. B. A. interests.

Ohio Banking News

The Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, has appointed Edwin F. Rorebeck, of Marietta, a national bank examiner at large.

It is his purpose, Comptroller Murray says, to make a special examination of every national bank found to be in an unsatisfactory condition and to require its affairs to be immediately placed in satisfactory shape. The appointment of examiners, especially qualified for work of this character, is in line with recommendations made to the Comptroller at the recent conference of the district chairmen held at the Comptroller's office last October.

Resources of Ohio Banks

The new department of bank inspection has issued its first report, a compilation of the statements of state banks, trust companies and private banks of this state under the call of November 27th. The first table shows the aggregate resources and liabilities of all the banks, as almost half a billion dollars.

The State Banking Laws

With the meeting of the general assembly banking interests all over the state are beginning to become interested in possible amendments to the state banking laws. While it is probable that there will be a number of bills offered to amend the Thomas law, nothing has yet been proposed by the Ohio Bankers Association looking toward changes in the act. Liberal appropriations will be asked in order to get the examination feature of the law well under way, but unless some changes are favored which will place more power in the hands of the state superintendent of banks in the case of insolvent institutions, there will be nothing introduced in the way of amendments. There is much sentiment among bankers over the state for an amendment placing the affairs of insolvent institutions wholly in the hands of the banking department, similar to the laws regulating the closing up or reorganization of national banks, but as yet there has been no meeting of the new legislative committee of the state association and it is not known just what will be favored by it.

The Cincinnati Stock Exchange

The governors of the Cincinnati Stock Exchange have received a letter from the Fifth-Third National, of Cincinnati, requesting the adoption of the 360 days' interest basis in computing the sale of bonds, the same as is practiced by the New York Stock Exchange and other prominent exchanges. The governors will take action on the matter at the next meeting.

The governors of the Cincinnati Stock Exchange, this week adopted the 360 day in the year bond sale basis, as practiced by the New York Stock Exchange, and is being adopted by the leading stock exchanges throughout the country. It is a simple plan by which interest is computed at the rate of 30 days to the month in bond transactions.

The Bank of Glandorf

Two men attempted to rob the Bank of Glandorf at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, but on being discovered made their escape with a team of horses and buggy stolen from August Fisher, living near the bank.

The Western-German Bank

It is expected that Fred Muthhauser will be elected a director of the Western-German Bank of Cincinnati, to succeed Edwin Marmet, who has resigned. Other changes in the official family of the institution are denied by the officers and directors.

Indianapolis and Indiana Banking News

By CHARLES REMINGTON

The Citizens National, one of Tipton's excellent institutions, the growth of which has been almost phenomenal, celebrated the tenth anniversary of its establishment January 1st. Possibly there is not another mercantile or banking firm in the state of Indiana that can show a similar growth.

The assurance that the bank is to be continued along the same line this year will be sufficient to merit an increase of patronage, and the splendid showing made at the conclusion of the first ten years of service to the people is an incentive to entrust this excellent institution with your business.

F. E. Davis is cashier of the Citizens National. The bank now has $450,000 of deposits.

Indiana Law Construed by Court

The Supreme Court has handed down an important ruling construing the taxation laws governing railroad corporations in Indiana. It sustained the injunction against the auditors and treasurers of Marion and Vigo Counties forbidding them to collect taxes on large sums of money on deposit in Indianapolis and Terre Haute banks by the Vandalia Railroad Company.

Over $2,000,000 in cash was held in Indianapolis and Terre Haute banks for the railroad, and the auditors and treasurers insisted that it should be listed for taxation. The company obtained an injunction, and Judge J. V. Hadley, of the Supreme Court, who wrote the opinion, says that he does not think an error was made.

After reciting the statutes the opinion continues: "The procedure in the assessment of railroad property for taxation, as provided by later statutes and supplemented by assessing officers, is full and complete, yet in all the taxing systems that have been evolved by the general assembly * * * the listing or assessment of money or cash, as a separate and distinct item of taxable value, so far as the books show, has not even been suggested. It could not have been an oversight.

"Money is like rolling stock. It comes and goes every day at every important station along the line. The principal sum may, on a taxing day, be found on deposit in a single county, where the rate is lowest, and that county reap the full benefit of the taxes, to the exclusion of the other counties that assisted in sowing it. * * *

"Therefore, to avoid unfairness and to prevent the escape of taxable property, the present method of requiring the state board, in the assessment of railroad property, to take into consideration the value of the company's capital stock was adopted."

Discusses Insurance

At a special meeting of the Richmond Commercial Club, Monday night, E. E. Perry, of Indianapolis, addressed the club on the subject of mutual fire insurance. Because of the advance in the local rates within the last year, merchants and manufacturers have been endeavoring to find relief, and the Commercial Club has been investigating the question.

Depositories for Public Funds

The Marion County board of finance has selected the following depositories for public funds:

Central Trust Company, $50,000; Union National, $50,000; People's State Bank, $15,000; Farmers Trust Company, $50,000; Indiana National, $500,000; Columbia National, $300,000; Capital National, $300,000; German American Trust Company, $100,000; Fletcher National, $500,000; Merchants National, $500,000; Indiana Trust Company, $500,000; American National, $500,000; Marion Trust Company, $300,000; Security Trust Company, $100,000; Meyer & Kiser Bank, $30,000.

The Indiana Federal Court Bill

The Indiana federal court bill was killed in the house. Only fifty-four members were present when the court bill came to a vote. Twenty-one members voted for it and thirty-three against it. The bill was then laid on the table, which kills it for all time. The bill contemplated the dividing Indiana into federal court districts.

Returns Insurance Money

W. K. Bellis, president of the Reserve Loan Life Insurance Company, of Indianapolis, is "all flustered up." Wednesday he received a check from Mrs. Bertha S. Agar, of Princeton, Ind., for $5,000 paid to her on June 9th under the policy held by her husband, Henry E. Agar, who was supposedly drowned two years ago in the lower Wabash river. The action of Mrs. Agar is without precedent in the Reserve Loan Life Company's business and is rare with any company. It will be recalled that Agar was found in Texas recently, alive and well.

The Michigan City Trust and Savings Company

The stockholders of the Michigan City Trust & Savings Company held their annual meeting Monday and elected their board of directors. The meeting was the fifth annual one for this company and the reports of the officers in charge of the business showed to the stockholders another satisfactory, successful and prosperous year. The business shows a handsome increase over the previous year's business and the stockholders are congratulating the officers and themselves upon the splendid showing made. The following board of directors were chosen:

Walter Vail, R. P. Zorn, A. J. Henry, Charles Wolff, John Finske, Herman Pries, A. S. Nichols, A. C. Heitschmidt, J. F. Gallaher. The board is the same that served last year. The directors will meet later and will probably re-elect the same officers for the ensuing year.

Increased Bond Offerings

Offerings of railway bonds representing ten or twelve different companies, ranging in amounts from $100,000 to $250,000 each, are a feature of the present bond market, in which some of the largest and best known houses are participating. In one case a total valued at $2,200,000 is offered in which the railroad bonds yielded from 3.90 per cent up to 4.80 per cent and the industrial bonds for 5 per cents yielded from as high as 5.35 per cent. Another house offers a variety totaling $3,500,000. The size of these offerings indicates a very strong belief in the purchasing strength of the market. Certainly the amount of bonds now put upon the market from all sources has greatly increased over that of a month or even a fortnight ago. The particular issues offered indicate that the variety has been greatly extended.

$225,500,000 Gold Moved

Secretary Cortelyou announces that "owing to the fact that all the principal vaults of the San Francisco mint had become filled with gold coin and the basement and other less secure vaults of the mint had to be used to store an additional accumulation of $225,500,000 of gold, it was deemed desirable to move this amount to the new modern vaults of the Denver mint, which are the largest and most secure of any in the United States. Secretary Cortelyou therefore ordered its transfer. The transfer was made under the supervision of the director of the mint without accident or loss of a dollar. The movement of the coin was begun August 15th and was completed December 19th. This is by far the largest transfer of money ever made by the Treasury Department."

The State Bank of Edgewood, Ia., was damaged by fire recently. Loss $2,500.

James Harragan Dead

Dubuque, Iowa, Jan. 6.—James Harragan, cashier of the Dubuque National and ex-county treasurer, died Monday night at 11 o'clock at the family residence, 436 Bluff Street. Typhoid fever, with which the deceased was stricken three weeks ago, ended the career of the esteemed citizen. From the first Mr. Harragan's illness assumed alarming proportions and in a week's time had gained the mastery, and the patient lapsed into unconsciousness from which he never rallied. Monday he showed signs of returning to consciousness and the watchers at his bedside clung to the last ray of hope, until a few hours before he passed into eternity. Mr. Harragan's death, like his life had been, was calm and peaceful, and he sank to rest without a struggle.

James Harragan was born January 5, 1840, at Clonmel, County Tipperary, Ireland. When a youth of fourteen years he came to America settling in Boston, coming to Dubuque two years later, and settling here, where he had resided continuously to the time of his death. In 1879 he was elected to the office of county treasurer, and upon the expiration of his term in office he became associated with the Dubuque National, being one of the organizers, and its first cashier, a position he held at the time of his demise. He was also one of the organizers of the Dubuque Building and Loan Association.

In the commercial world Mr. Harragan was accounted the soul of business honesty and integrity, and a man whose every aspiration was to leave a record that was clean and unblemished. Endowed with a splendid mental equipment, he illumined and elevated every subject he touched. His keen mind delved beneath the rubbish of the superficial, down to the fountain source of truth, and his opinion and words possessed more than the glare of rhetoric—they possessed the weight which springs from thought and study, from noble purposes and strong convictions. Expediency was to him the hostile ensign; right the standard of the march. Mr. Harragan was a life long member of the Catholic Church and its sacraments were his consolation in death as well as in life.

The funeral will be held Thursday morning at 9 o'clock from his residence to St. Raphael's Cathedral, and the interment will be made at Mt. Olivet.

Philadelphia Banking News

By J. IRVING COOPER

Nearly 350,000 depositors in Philadelphia savings fund institutions will gain through an increase in the interest rate from  $3\frac{1}{2}$  to 3.65 per cent per annum. The increase will date from the beginning of the year. Just two years ago the rate was increased from 3 to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

Lower prices at which the savings funds were enabled to purchase those classes of investments allowed them and the consequent larger income make the conditions upon which the higher interest becomes possible.

Explaining the action taken, a statement was issued for the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society and the Western Savings Fund Society, which, between them, have 300,000 depositors. In part it says:

"In Pennsylvania savings banks are subject to a tax on net earnings and their investments to the 4 mills state tax which is assessed against individuals. This twofold taxation weighs on the wage-earner and necessarily affects the income applicable to interest to depositors. Should savings banks' investments be exempted from the 4 mills state tax the possibility of maintaining the present advance in rate to depositors, due in a large part to the more profitable income return from the investments of the last two years, would be largely increased."

At a meeting of the board of the Beneficial Savings Fund Society, which has 12,000 depositors, held recently, this company increased its interest rate, and similar action is expected by the Savings Fund Society of Germantown and its vicinity, which concern has 23,500 depositors, at the annual meeting.

This increase in the interest allowed to savings fund depositors means an additional distribution of about \$225,000 per annum. It is not expected that the trust companies will advance their interest allowance on time deposits, as they did when the savings funds raised their rate from 3 to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

The Philadelphia Clearing House

President Francis B. Reeves directing head of the Girard National has for the second year been chosen president of the Philadelphia Clearing House Association. The following committee was also elected: Richard H. Rush-ton, Fourth Street National; Howard W. Lewis, Farmers and Mechanics National; J. Tatnall Lea, First National; Samuel S. Sharp, Pennsylvania; Levi L. Rue, Philadelphia, and Joseph Moore, Jr., Northern Liberties; committee on arbitration, William H. Heisler, John B. Harper, Benjamin Githen, Charles Porter, E. A. Landell and William H. Carpenter.

The Fairmount Savings Trust Company

One of the most enterprising and aggressive of the new trust companies in Philadelphia is the Fairmount Savings Trust Company, which is located in its handsome new building, at Fifteenth and Race streets.

Both the company's deposits and general business have been growing at a rapid rate, and it is fast outdistancing many rival institutions organized about the same time.

An innovation which has brought the company considerable business is the national recording safe, which is in every respect a home bank, contributing greatly to the saving habit. The company has been putting these out for some time, and is very well satisfied with the results so far obtained.

The company pays  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent interest on deposits.

Officers of the company are: John Gribble, president; Charles Edgerton, first vice-president; Rufus W. Miller, second vice-president; Isaac Roberts, secretary and treasurer; Franklin S. Edwards, solicitor; Isaac Forsythe, trust officer.

The Peoples Trust Building

The proposed building for the Peoples Trust Company of Philadelphia, which has been designed by Architects Sauer & Hahn, on the site of the carriage factory at the northeast corner Twelfth and Arch streets, will be a decided acquisition to the architectural attractiveness of that locality, where a number of other fine structures have been erected during the past few years.

The new building, which measures 45 by 134 feet, will be an innovation in construction, as the architects have developed a style which will give the maximum pier construction.

Increase Surplus Amounts

The Northern Trust Company of Philadelphia, added $100,000 to the surplus, making that fund $1,150,000, and leaving $45,358 undivided profits. The Columbia Avenue Trust Company added $25,000 to the surplus, making the total $325,000, and the Industrial Trust, Title and Savings Company took similar action, bringing its surplus up to $700,000. The First National added $100,000 to the surplus, that amount now being $900,000.

The Eighth National

The Eighth National of Philadelphia have declared the regular semiannual dividend of 6 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent. The bank also added $50,000 to surplus, making that fund $800,000. Extra dividends of 2 per cent were paid by the bank in July last and in January a year ago.

The West Philadelphia Title and Trust Company

The West Philadelphia Title and Trust Company, of which Augustus I. Wood is president, reports total assets of $3,574,711 in the statement of condition on January 1st. Deposits now amount to $2,714,029, and the surplus and undivided profits aggregate $360,681.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Governor John A. Johnson dwelt at length in his long annual message on the resolution passed last summer at Duluth by the Minnesota Bankers Association asking for a separate state department for the inspection of banks; a sufficient appropriation to procure adequate and competent examiners for semiannual examinations; and the obligatory examination to establish the competency to perform duties of bank examiner. The governor says that the matter is of enough importance to merit consideration. A bill has been introduced to take the appointment of public examiner, who is now general examiner for the state, away from the chief executive.

F. A. Gross, president of the German American, says: "This is a good thing. The superintendent should be a practical banker and his salary should be large. It would be impossible to get a capable man to accept such a position at a small salary with the possibility of being thrown out at the end of his term, and it would be ridiculous for a man getting a $4,500 salary to try to superintend men who get a good deal more than that."

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, said: "The banking fraternity approves of Governor Johnson's suggestion. It is a move for the protection of depositors. That's all there is to it. Members of the state association who know the conditions, made the suggestion that the banks are not examined enough and cannot be, under the present system. They want the Minnesota banking department put on the same basis as that of New York and of Wisconsin. The plan will have the support of all the bankers of the state."

"The resolutions passed at the state convention at Duluth show where the bankers do not believe in unjust or unscientific method of guaranty of state deposits, but they want everything done to that end so far as possible in a legitimate way. If such is not done the burden must be passed on to the legislature for poor banking and not on to the bankers."

George F. Orde, cashier of the Minneapolis First National Bank, said: "I heartily approve the recommendations of Governor Johnson in his message regarding a separate department for state bank examination. If carried out, it will do much to improve banking in this state."

V. H. Van Slyke, president of the Metropolitan State Bank, said: "Governor Johnson's recommendations regarding state bank examination in his message to the legislature meet with my approval, and it is my opinion that all state bankers and the entire banking fraternity feel as I do about the matter."

Recent Bank Elections

Several changes have resulted from the recent bank elections in Minneapolis. The Metropolitan State has voted to nationalize and increase its capital from $100,000 to $200,000. Jacob Stoft was elected director to succeed M. R. Waters, resigned. Surplus and undivided profits of the bank are $20,000. The bank will nationalize on May 20th, its second anniversary.

The Union State voted to increase its capital from $50,000 to $100,000. The bank is three years old and has $271,000 deposits, loans and discounts of $220,000.

The Germania Bank voted to increase its capital from $50,000 to $100,000. It will elect a cashier and will make a change in location at an early date.

The Farmers' and Mechanics' Savings Bank added $100,000 to its surplus, making a total of $550,000. Newton F. Hawley was re-elected treasurer. The bank has 52,481 depositors and $11,552,000 deposits.

The Northwestern National added three names to the directorate: C. G. Goodrich, vice-president of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company; F. W. Lyman, of Lyman Brothers, investors; B. F. Nelson, of the Hennepin Paper Company, and president of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society and the Minneapolis Commercial Club.

The First National elected John Washburn, vice-president of the Washburn-Crosby Company, director to fill a vacancy.

At the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Bank C. L. Strom was advanced to the position of cashier. At the Minneapolis State Bank, Bela W. Smith, president of the City Sash & Door Company, was made president. At the Peoples Bank, C. L. Grandin was elected president to succeed the late H. G. Merritt. Other banks which hold elections in January re-elected directors and officers, all declaring the usual quarterly or semiannual dividend. The Minnesota National added one director and the Swedish-American National, which is liquidating, reduced its board of directors to the minimum of nine.

In St. Paul the changes were slight. W. A. Miller, cashier of the First National, was made vice-president, and F. A. Nienhauser was elected cashier. O. M. Nelson was advanced to first assistant cashier. Ambrose Guiterman, secretary-treasurer of Guiterman Brothers, wholesale furnishing goods, was added to the directorate of the Merchants' National. The surplus of this bank is $650,000. At the National German-American $100,000 was added to the surplus, which on December 31st was $600,000. The stockholders of the Security Trust Company adjourned one month to permit a change in the articles to elect all directors yearly instead of one-third every year for three-year terms.

St. Paul Bank Dividends

The annual dividends of seven St. Paul banks and two trust companies amount to $384,500. The payments for January are $154,750. Except in the case of the First and Capital Nationals the payments are semiannual. These banks pay quarterly. The distribution and annual rates are as follows:

|                                       |          |
|---------------------------------------|----------|
| First National, 12 per cent.....      | $30,000 |
| Merchants National, 8 per cent.....   | 40,000   |
| National German-American, 8 per cent  | 40,000   |
| Second National, 8 per cent.....      | 16,000   |
| American National, 6 per cent.....    | 6,000    |
| Capital National, 6 per cent.....     | 7,500    |
| Scandinavian-American, 10 per cent..  | 5,000    |
| Security Trust Co., 5 per cent.....   | 6,250    |
| Northwestern Trust Co., 4 per cent... | 4,000    |

The Security Trust Company

The Security Trust Company of St. Paul, with total resources of $825,096, has closed a successful year. Its surplus is $75,000 and undivided profits are $49,597, with book value of stock at 149. The semiannual dividend is $6,250.

Changes in the Board of Directors

One of the changes resulting from the recent absorption of the Swedish-American National is a change of officers and trustees in the Swedish-American Savings Bank, making the board more representative of the Scandinavian race. C. J. Swanson, president of the Northwestern Fire Proofing Company; Aaron Carlson, sash and door manufacturer, and Dr. Knut Hoegh were made trustees to succeed C. M. Amsden, C. S. Hulbert and C. S. Pillsbury, former directors in the Swedish-American National. N. O. Werner is president, J. A. Latta is vice-president, and E. L. Mattson is cashier. # Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., January 14.—Reports just completed by the Spokane Clearing House Association, of which Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National, is head and W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, is secretary, show that Spokane was the only city of its class in the Northwest in which the clearings for 1908 exceeded 1907, the previous record year in the history of this country. However, all the northwestern cities make good showings. Spokane is ahead \$6,172,365, or 2.03 per cent over 1907. Seattle is second with a loss of only  $\frac{1}{4}$  of 1 per cent, while Tacoma is third, with a loss of 3.34 per cent. Portland shows a loss of 11.4 per cent against 1907. The comparative figures follow: Spokane, 1907, \$301,419,017; 1908, \$307,591,482, increase, \$6,172,365; per cent, 2.03. Portland, 1907, \$350,888,630; 1908, \$310,656,513; decrease, \$40,232,117; per cent, 11.40. Seattle, 1907, \$430,000,000; 1908, \$429,000,000, decrease, \$1,000,000; per cent, 0.25. Tacoma, 1907, \$246,090,189; 1908, \$238,113,071; decrease, \$7,977,118; per cent, 3.24. Spokane's clearings January 5th were \$1,931,521, while January 4th they were \$1,811,449. The highest record was made May 7, 1906, when a check of the Spokane & Inland Railway passed through the clearing house, making the record \$3,512,517. Seattle comes the closest to Spokane January 5th with clearings of \$1,648,411, which leads also Portland and Tacoma.

Not Many Changes

With the exception of changes in the boards of directors and the enlargement of the directorates of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company and the Exchange and Old National Banks it is not believed there will be any changes in the officers of the national and state banks in Spokane at their annual elections this month. The banks look forward to the re-election of these officers:

Traders National—A Kuhn, president; D. M. Drumheller, vice-president; Charles S. Eltinge, vice-president; Charles A. McLean, cashier; E. V. Klein, assistant cashier; W. T. Triplett, assistant cashier.

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company—J. P. M. Richards, president; H. M. Richards, vice-president; R. B. Paterson, vice-president; R. Lewis Rutter, secretary; H. Witherspoon, George Pettet, Ernest Wienns, assistant secretaries.

Fidelity National—George S. Brooke, president; A. W. Lindsay, cashier; Ernest R. Anderson, assistant cashier.

Exchange National—Edwin T. Coman, president; Thomas H. Brewer, vice-president; C. E. McBroom, cashier; E. N. Seale, assistant cashier.

Old National—D. W. Twohy, president; T. J. Humbird, vice-president; W. D. Vincent, cashier; W. J. Kommers and J. A. Yeomans, assistant cashiers.

Scandinavian-American Bank—O. A. Johnson, president; L. W. Hutton, first vice-president; L. G. Heiberg, second vice-president; S. A. Anderson, cashier.

The Old National and the Exchange National banks expect to increase their capitals to $1,000,000. The Spokane & Eastern Trust Company and the Union Trust Company will also increase their capitalization.

Supreme Court Decision

Supreme court of the State of Washington has just handed down an opinion that the ownership of a majority of the stock in the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railroad Company by the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern is not in violation of the federal antitrust act or antagonistic to the provisions of the state legislation forbidding combinations of transportation companies in restraint of competitive commerce. The action was instituted by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, the Cascade Railroad Company and the New York Trust Company, owning land over which the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Company has condemned a right of way. The supreme court draws a distinction between this case and that in which the Northern Securities Company was ordered dissolved. While the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern own competing lines in Washington the new company was organized to open unserved territory between Spokane and Portland. The court expresses the view that the creation of a new company, instead of curtailing the transportation facilities, would increase them, and that competition between the holding roads is not impaired.

The Fidelity National

George S. Brooke, president of the Fidelity National, has had plans prepared for remodeling the store building at Riverside Avenue and Wall Street, where it will have an up-to-date banking house in March. The bank will have an attractive front, the interior being finished in Philippine mahogany and marble. The directors' and president's rooms and desks for the cashier and his assistants will occupy one side and the receiving and disbursing cages on the other. The vault and bookkeeping department is located in the rear, the center of the building being devoted to a large spacious foyer. The furnishings of the bank will be second to none in the city. Regarding the future policy, President Brooke said:

"There will be no change in the policy or management, which is justified by 27 years of successful experience and which has enabled it to meet and overcome every storm and stress and which has met with the unqualified approval of the shareholders. Dividends have been regular and satisfactory, and in addition, there is a goodly surplus, ample to cover any losses or depreciations that are likely to occur."

Postal Savings Banks

The question of a postal savings bank bill is before the present session of Congress, and as the majority party have declared in favor of such a law, it is altogether probable that some decisive action will be taken before the adjournment on March 4th.

C. F. McGrew, chairman of the executive council of the Nebraska Bankers Association, was asked for his views for the CHICAGO BANKER in regard to the attitude of the bankers of his state on this question and expressed himself as follows:

"The Carter bill provides for the payment of interest at the rate of 2 per cent, and exempts the deposits from taxation and execution against the depositor. Such a high rate of interest and the exemptions mentioned, would doubtless result in so large an amount of money being withdrawn from national, state and savings banks as to seriously jeopardize the business interests of the country, not alone the bank shareholders, but those who are indebted to the banks for money with which to carry on business.

"The maximum deposit permitted at one time is $200, but by a provision in the bill which permits any depositor to act as trustee or guardian for other persons or minors, it would be very easy for a depositor by using the names of members of his family or immediate friends to deposit almost any sum under this provision, and especially would such action be taken during times of financial disturbance and further embarrass the banks to such an extent as to require them to enforce collections from all their borrowers in order to avert their own ruin, and bring distress and failure upon many of the best citizens of the community.

"The bill also provides that the funds received shall be deposited under the direction of the Postmaster-General in such banks as he may select. This would place it in the power of that officer to intentionally or unintentionally bring ruin upon any bank in any community from which these funds might be withdrawn and by political favoritism build up some at the expense of others.

"If the law-makers think that the people of this country demand the passage of a postal savings bank bill, let it be passed along such lines as will bring the best results to all, and not in the interests of a few. If a bill must be passed I think bankers generally would favor limiting the amount of the deposit in any one calendar month to $10, the total amount in no case to exceed $300; let the deposit be subject to the laws of taxation and exemptions, the same as all other personal property, let the funds so received by the government be deposited equally with all banks in the vicinity where the deposits are made, and not placed in the large banks of the money centers so as to contract the volume of business in the localities where the deposits are from.

"If a postal savings bank law is passed, let it be understood it must only be for the purpose of encouraging thrift among the small depositors, and not for the purpose of finding an investment for those who have already shown their ability to accumulate by speculation and investment. Make the rate of interest not over 1½ per cent. Money drawing 2 per cent interest, deposited with the government, exempt from taxation and execution, would so deplete the deposits in the banks under the present system as to bring ruin not alone to the banks, but to all those who are dependent upon the banks for a large amount of the capital with which they are carrying on their business, whether farmers, merchants or manufacturers."

Vice-President Kent's Job

A census bureau report has just been completed which shows that the express companies of the country in 1907 wrote 14,014,960 express money orders and almost a million travelers' checks. The amount of money conveyed by these instruments is stated at $168,175,188.

The express money order, first introduced by the American Express Company, was a comparatively new extension of the express business in 1890, and so the figures presented in the census report for that year concerned only the number of such orders. At the present census, however, some of the express companies were issuing travelers' checks and letters of credit in addition to money orders, and both the number and value of these three forms of financial paper were reported.

The express money order differs from the travelers' check and the letter of credit in that it is payable only to the person named therein, who may or may not be the purchaser, and is transferable by indorsement. Single orders can not be issued for a sum exceeding $50. A travelers' check is always payable to the purchaser, who, for the purpose of identification, must sign it at the time of purchase as well as when cashing it. The checks are issued in denominations of $10, $20, $50, $100 or $200, and can be cashed at any agency of the issuing company. A letter of credit is issued only to the purchaser, who, upon proper identification, can draw on the issuing company for any amount up to the sum stated in the letter.

This is the magnitude of the business which the A. B. A. has undertaken to reconvert into the proper banking channels. Frederick I. Kent, a sort of human ferret, as well as expert on foreign exchange, was chairman of the committee by which the plan was completed. Hearings were had before the interstate commission and the big A. B. A. itself embarked in the money order business for a second run. The operations are to be made through the Bankers Trust, New York, and Mr. Kent has gone with that bank as vice-president in charge of the work. Most of those who know him expect him to succeed. It is no easy task, all admit. Then the United States post-office department issued 65,709,919 domestic and international money orders, amounting to $563,731,054. The value of express business in this line, including money orders, travelers' checks and letters of credit, therefore, amounted to 29.8 per cent of that done by the federal government. This huge business belongs of right to the banks and they hope, through Mr. Kent, to regain it.

Returned Vouchers must be Examined

A New York court of record has rendered an important decision, based upon a jury finding, in a case involving the responsibility of two defendant banks, for what appeared to be a raised and altered check. It appears that the merchant who suffered the loss had been negligent in that he had failed to promptly examine his returned vouchers by which the loss might have been averted. It is an interesting case involving the relative duties of merchant to banker. The suit was brought by the New York Produce Exchange Bank against Twelfth Ward Bank of the City of New York. It appeared upon the trial in the Supreme Court that a department store at 118th Street and Third Avenue, on November 24, 1906, made a check to the order of E. Jacobs & Co. for $569, and this check was raised by a former employee of theirs to $2,105.90. This check was deposited in the Twelfth Ward Bank and paid by the New York Produce Exchange Bank. The date of the check was altered from November 24th to December 1st.

It was shown that the drawer of the check had been in the habit of having their account balanced in their bank on the first of each month and that the November check to Jacobs was not returned among the November vouchers. It also appeared that Bauman had received a statement on the first of the month from Jacobs showing that the November account intended to be paid by the altered check had not been paid. The altered check was not deposited in the Twelfth Ward Bank until December 3d and was only paid by the new York Produce Exchange Bank on December 4, 1906.

Judge Dayton in charging the jury stated

To Our Stockholders:

During the past year, after paying four quarterly dividends, in all 8 per cent., or $160,000, also charging off $32,000, on Furniture and Fixtures and premium on United States Bonds, and creating a Guarantee Account valued at $35,000, we have increased our Profit and Loss Account by $166,600.

New business has come to us generously, and largely through the efforts of our friends and Directors, 768 new accounts, with initial deposits of $3,800,000, were placed on our books during 1908.

Acting under instructions from the Board, the Examining Committee has caused a most thorough examination to be made of every department in the Bank, as well as of its assets and liabilities, by Messrs. Marwick, Mitchell & Company, Certified Public Accountants, whose report is noted opposite.

We again are glad to report that there are no past due or any known doubtful items included in our statement.

that if the jury found that Bauman could have notified his bank upon the receipt of the statement from Jacobs, and the return of the vouchers with the check missing, then the Produce Exchange Bank was not liable, and if the Produce Exchange Bank was not liable then the Twelfth Ward Bank was not liable. Also, that if the jury found that Bauman signed the check before it was filled in, then there was no alteration of the check even though it was intended for $569 instead of the amount inserted, and neither of the banks was liable, and, therefore, the Produce Exchange Bank could not hold the Twelfth Ward Bank. Both banks were cleared absolutely and merchants and depositors are put upon notice to hereafter make careful examination of all returned vouchers, or, to be considered negligent and the bank not responsible in case of loss. In these days of anti-corporate, anti-bank laws and decisions this is a great and substantial gain for bankers in that their responsibility for the carelessness of the depositor is greatly lessened.

F. A. Vanderlip Elected President

New York, January 12.—The annual stockholders' meetings of national banks to-day confirmed the expectation that Frank A. Vanderlip would be elected as president of the National City Bank, but produced an unexpected development in the retirement of George F. Baker as president of the First National and the election of Vice-President Francis L. Hine as his successor.

While retiring from the presidency, Mr. Baker, like Mr. Stillman, becomes chairman of the board of directors, a new position created in each bank especially for the retiring president.

A Million Dollar Country Bank

President C. J. Weiser, of the Winnesheik County State Bank, at Decorah, Iowa, is receiving congratulations upon his last annual statement, which puts it in the million dollar class. The Republican, an influential local paper, contains the following editorial relating to Mr. Weiser and his January 1st bank statement:

"The first statement of the Winnesheik County State Bank for A. D. 1909 appears in this issue of the Republican. All its financial reports are deserving of study. They will bear investigation. As the eldest representative of the next oldest of the semipublic occupations, we tender our compliments to the able management which has so steadily advanced this bank to the high rank it has reached among its associates in the banking business. It is not long ago that it stepped up into the rank of a million dollar bank. Time has proven that it was steady growth—the effect of splendid management that had secured this position, and time is developing a progress towards the million and a quarter basis. We compliment Mr. Weiser, its president, upon the evidence that the mantle of a grandsire and sire is being worthily worn by one of the third generation in the new century into which we have but lately entered."

This splendid bank carries a cash reserve of $236,370.92, with $60,000 in demand loans and $100,000 in selected, marketable bonds as a secondary reserve. If there is a country bank in any state which can make a better showing it should no longer remain in hiding.

The Bank of Pine Bluff

The Bank of Pine Bluff, Ark., in its statement at the close of business December 31, 1908, showed total resources of $923,308. It has a capital stock of $100,000, and deposits of $722,581. In its comparative statement of deposits for the past ten years it shows a steady and increasing amount each year. W. C. Hudson is the cashier.

R. W. Johnston Dead

Richard W. Johnston, one of the best known young men in Macon, Ga., and vice-president of the American National, died recently at the residence of his mother, Mrs. J. Marshall Johnston, after a lingering illness of more than two years with Bright's disease.

While the death of Mr. Johnston has been expected by his friends for several months, the announcement of his demise was received with great sorrow by his hosts of friends, not only in Macon, but throughout the country.

Mr. Johnston was thirty-six years old. His father was the late J. Marshall Johnston, who lived for many years in Macon. The American National was closed from 12 to 1 o'clock, the hour of the funeral.

Merchants National of Newton

At the annual meeting of the Merchants National, of Newton, N. J., the following were elected directors: Jacob S. Andres, George A. Smith, Dr. Joseph H. Hunt, John Tozer, Ralph D. Howell, Henry Folk, Michael P. Tully, Levi H. Morris, John L. Swayze, Emmet J. Divers, Ephraim Morrison, Robert H. Southard, Daniel Vliet. At a subsequent meeting of the directors these officials were elected: President, John L. Swayze, of Newark; vice-president, E. Morrison; cashier, George A. Smith; teller, Frank B. Boss; bookkeeper, Louis A. Dalrymple; clerk, S. E. Dunlap.

George T. Smith

George T. Smith, general agent of the Pennsylvania, has resigned to accept the presidency of the First National of Jersey City. The position of general agent at New York has been abolished and a division freight agency created, Gilbert H. Cobb, formerly division freight agent at Baltimore, being appointed to take charge of it.

Bank Failures for 1908

Last year was the culmination of ten years of ultra prosperity, during which time many men and interests engaged in the banking business without previous training or experience. Abundantly prosperous times carried them along for a time without much skilled attention to reserves or maturities, the fourth estate of banking, but the troublous times came and the unprepared went down.

In the twelve months from October, 1907, to September, 1908, the total number of bank failures in the United States was 253, according to the figures compiled by Dun's Review, and the total liabilities were $261,924,354. National bank failures numbered thirty-four, and the liabilities aggregated $58,721,146. State bank failures were 103, with liabilities of $64,230,767; trust companies thirty-four, with liabilities of $98,072,411; savings banks nineteen, with liabilities of $8,056,592, and private banks sixty-three, with liabilities of $32,843,439. A very large percentage of these failures followed close on the money panic of last fall, and may be attributed to it. Several of the more important banks that went out of business at that time were really solvent, though unable to meet the cash runs made upon them, and have been re-established since. Incautious banking was the only shortcoming in these cases, and banking as a whole will be better for the house cleaning.

The Functions of a Trust Company

Approximately two thousand trust companies are to-day in active operation in the United States, with gross assets of nearly four billion dollars. Their amazing growth and multiplication has not only very materially strengthened the financial and banking fabric of this country, but it has aroused the live interest of financiers and bankers of every progressive country. Many foreign governments have sent their trained experts to this country to make exhaustive studies of the Trust Company in all its aspects,—a compliment of which we may well feel proud. The result is that our trust companies are among those most advanced in methods, serving the largest number of clients and leading in a movement now world-wide in its scope. In discussing this subject with your readers I shall divide it into three main divisions:—Their History and Growth; Methods used by successful Trust Companies in the conduct of their business; and, What the future is likely to have in store for them.

A study of the modern trust company is remarkable in that it reveals the very short time in which it has taken the movement to reach its present proportions. One hundred years ago there was not a single trust company in the United States; twenty-five years ago there was but thirty. While this development is striking, its cause may be found in the change in the methods of conducting business rather than something inherent in trust companies themselves. An analogy is found in other branches of business, especially the telephone and electricity for light and power, which had first to find its place of usefulness and with its usefulness becoming established it found a field for great growth,—for the sensitiveness of modern business will to-day make any improvement national in a few years, which a century ago it would have taken years to extend beyond its local environment. There are in existence to-day two trust companies, which so far as history reveals, were the first in the United States. The Pennsylvania Company for Insurance of Lives and Granting of Annuities, organized in Philadelphia in 1809, but which was not authorized to do a trust business until some thirty years later, and The Farmers Loan & Trust Company of New York, chartered in 1822.

These companies were organized under special charters, no general laws having yet been enacted, and for some years they did a very limited business. The old maxim of the common law, that a corporation had no soul and therefore could not be held responsible for a criminal act, operated against trust companies serving in a fiduciary capacity. It was contended that such a relation required confidence in and responsibility on the part of some individual. How changed are the conditions to-day! For trusts requiring faithful and perhaps lengthy management a trust company is selected, having a skilled organization and a permanent existence, rather than the individual with his personal shortcomings and uncertain life. While these fiduciary functions give trust companies their name, the word

"Trust" has no analogy, of course, to the same term used in connection with industrial trusts, organized for the benefit of trade. While the growth of trust companies has been large and generally healthy there are, as yet, no federal statutes, except for the District of Columbia, under which they may be organized. All of the states, except perhaps Florida, Nebraska and Wyoming, have passed general laws permitting the organization of trust companies and defining their sphere of action. It would be an endless, not to say fruitless task, to attempt to give the laws of the different states. Suffice it to say that in some states like New York and our own state of Illinois, they are permitted to conduct a general banking business, under restrictions as to loan reserve, etc., much the same as national banks. In no state, however, are they allowed to issue notes. It nevertheless is true that laws and regulations vary as widely as do the states and that greater uniformity of laws already seems so desirable as to attracting considerable attention and may soon result in a federal statute.

A Brief on Illinois Trust Company Laws

"To receive money in trust, to transact a safe deposit business. To accept and execute all such trusts or duties as may be committed to them by any person, corporation or court whatsoever. To act as assignee, receiver, trustee or depository. To receive and hold from any person, corporation or court any real or personal property in trust. To act as agent or as attorney in fact for any person or corporation in the management, use or sale of real estate or personal property or investment money. To act as fiscal agent, transfer agent or registrar. To act as executor, administrator or trustee, or as guardian, or as curators of minors, conservator of persons mentally incompetent, etc. (State of Illinois requires $200,000 deposit with State Auditor in order to qualify for the exercise of trust company powers.) To do a discount business, accept deposits, buy and sell exchange. To do a general banking business except issuing bills to circulate as money. To loan money on personal and real estate security."

As to my second division,—"Methods used by successful Trust Companies in the conduct of their business." The organization of the working forces and the distribution of labor in a modern trust company will naturally vary in accordance with and depend upon the nature and amount of business done. In a comparatively large institution the work of the various departments would be under different officials and be performed by a corps of clerks entirely independent of and separate from the other departments. Let us take as our illustration a trust company organized under the laws of Illinois.

The Banking Department is equipped the same way as any other commercial bank for handling accounts of every character pertaining to the banking business. Not only are they banks of discount and deposit, but they buy and sell exchange, foreign and domestic, and loan money on collateral and real estate, buy commercial paper, act as financial correspondent for individuals, banks and other corporations.

The Savings Department.—One of the most successful features has been the Savings Department. Here banking accommodations are afforded the small depositor and wage earner, who through lack of experience and information can deposit $1.00 and upwards where it will receive interest. These accounts are not subject to check, and interest on depositors' balances is computed and credited to them at least every six months. That these savings accounts are appreciated and used by the patrons of the institution is evidenced by the fact that we find amongst the depositors corporations, societies, labor assemblies, married women, single women, children and frequently men of affairs, who are willing to accept the returns offered, rather than assume the annoyance and risk incident to the investment of their moneys personally.

The Trust Department will frequently be found divided into two subdepartments, each in charge of a manager, one attending to strictly corporation work, and the other looking after the management and closing of estates. The former will have charge of the details of the work where the company acts as registrar and transfer agent, and in the certification of corporation bond issues. It also looks after receiverships and kindred trusts. Executorships, trusteeships and guardianships would come within the scope of the other department, together with the investment of the funds of the different states.

A thorough knowledge of administrative law is essential to the head of each of these departments and is frequently found among the clerks employed. The law requires that the funds of this department and the investments made for the different estates under its control are kept entirely separate and independent from the assets of the company in general, thus insuring their safety in case of possible disaster to the company itself. In the main, the Trust Department executes the trusts of the company of every kind, and has control and management of all securities and property held in any trust, or fiduciary capacity. A religious observance of these safeguards has given the regularly organized trust company the exclusive record of never having failed to pay every dollar of its trust liabilities, which stands out in striking contrast to the court records and other evidences which we have of the dissipations and losses which have resulted from individual administration, as trustee and executor, leaving in its wake much untold want and misery.

The Safe Deposit Department of a modern trust company is equipped with the best protective devices known: modern vaults of armor plate are absolutely fireproof, burglar proof, mob proof and explosive proof. Electrical appliances are installed and have proven effective in giving alarm should a vault be attacked while officers were not on duty. In these vaults are stored the company's money and its own securities, as well as those held in trust, properly labeled, none of which may be withdrawn except by properly authorized officers, and only in a manner set forth by the rules and by-laws of the company. A large portion of such vaults is fitted out with steel chests of different sizes and rented at different prices to the public for the safe-keeping of securities, jewelry and valuable property. The smallest box contains about three hundred cubic inches of space and rents at from $3.00 to $5.00 per annum. This Department is in charge of one or more officers, who devote their whole time to customers, as none are admitted to their safe deposit box without a master key, held by the company, and one of its officers being present. Many vaults require the use of a password and a card index with signatures as a sure means of identification. Convenient private rooms are provided for consultation and for individual use. These facilities are as essential and are as extensively used as any other of those afforded by the modern Trust Company.

The Real Estate Department takes control of all the real estate of its patrons, whether it be a small building lot or large acreage tract, a manufacturing plant or an office sky scraper, a laborer's cottage, or a millionaire's palace, and any interest in real estate, whether vested, contingent or in expectancy, including that held by the company in any trust or fiduciary capacity, and holds the same for sale, care or management, as the owner may direct. Such a department has an expert real estate man at its head, and competent appraisers, examiners and collectors. It collects and remits rents, pays taxes and insurance, and keeps up repairs, etc., for a compensation which would not justify an individual to assume the responsibility. Trust companies have the right to buy and sell real estate in their own right, but seldom exercise this privilege, because they were organized to perform this class of work as an agency, or in a fiduciary capacity for others, to accomplish which no better medium has yet been created, and because real estate is not a desirable asset when funds are quickly needed to meet the company's demands from its depositors.

The Title Insurance Department is a feature of trust company work which is not general. The reason is apparent, when it is understood that the cost of a set of records is very large (over $2,000,000 for Cook County) and that it is better to have the work well done by one or two companies and at a profit than done at a loss and poorly done by many companies. In addition, the business of insuring titles is restricted by the activity of the real estate market and is now done for such a small charge that unless a large business is done it is not especially remunerative. In some states trust companies write fire, life, and fidelity insurance, but not in Illinois. Owing to the unusual hazard incident to this business a special reserve must be maintained to meet losses and the trust companies make no special effort to develop their business in this direction, for the reason that there are other and better means already accomplishing this work, which is not true of most of the other functions which they exercise.

The Bond Department I have left until the last. It is one of the newer departments and one of all the rest I should be best able to discuss with you. The bond officer is, to the extent of the purchase of bonds by the company, or accepting the same as collateral to loans, one of its chief credit men. His duty is to secure for his company complete and accurate information upon the status, legality and security of all bonds, either corporate or municipal, that the company have offered. He is in constant touch with such securities, makes careful investigation through expert appraisers, engineers and legal talent, and recommends to his executive committee, or board of directors, such bonds as he believes are safe; following their approval the securities are purchased frequently in large amounts, thus securing to the trust company the most advantageous price. When purchased these securities are held as a part of the company's assets, until they are either sold or mature, and are paid. There is a large and growing demand for securities of an institution which is known neither to buy or sell a bond which it cannot recommend.

When investors learn how much care is exercised in preliminary investigations by experts and attorneys before a bond officer recommends a security to his own company, little remains for him to do but to review such reports, decide what he prefers to buy, clip the coupons and collect the interest thereafter. In case of a mortgage investor and a great many other forms of investment a great many things must be watched constantly to avoid the impairment of the security. Especially are bonds preferable to real estate in the matter of convertibility. I am going to deviate a little from my general topic and briefly explain to you something about bonds.

A bond is another name for a corporate note and is generally secured by a mortgage on the property of the corporation. It is a written printed, lithographed or engraved promise to pay a stated sum, usually $1,000 or $500, having attached coupons or interest notes, which commonly become due semiannually. As a rule it is payable to bearer and passes by delivery, but sometimes is made payable to a particular person or his order; when this is so, it is called a registered bond and may or may not have coupons attached. When coupons are attached it is said to be registered as to principal, for, while the principal will be paid only to or on the order of the person in whose name it stands, the coupons are payable to bearer. When coupons are not attached it is said to be registered as to both principal and interest and the interest as it becomes due is sent to the individual in whose name the bond is registered on the books of the company, and no transfers can be made except by such person or on his order. The holder of a bond has a lien that can be enforced just like a mortgage on real estate. If the control of a corporation passes from one interest to another it passes subject to the payment of the bonds; the interest on them must be paid before a dividend can be declared on the stock, and in case of liquidation it is the bondholder who must receive repayment first.

Bonds, according to the nature of their lien, are First Mortgage, General Mortgage, Consolidated Mortgage, Refunding, Underlying, Collateral, Convertible, Income, Debenture and Equipment.

First Mortgage—First Mortgage Bonds are what the name indicates; they are a first lien secured by mortgage on the property of the corporation.

General Mortgage and Consolidated Mortgage—General Mortgage and Consolidated Mortgage are different names for the same character of bond and indicate one or more precedent issues, which are generally provided for by reserving an equal amount of the General or Consolidated issue. They frequently are a first lien on some portions of the property and second and even third and fourth liens on others. They might be termed blanket mortgages, covering in general or consolidating all the other mortgages.

Refunding Mortgage—Refunding Mortgage Bonds as a matter of practice are frequently but little different from General or Consolidated Mortgage Bonds and sometimes are exactly of the same character. Strictly speaking they are meant to provide for the payment, that is refunding, of existing bonds at maturity, and are issued when the property has so proved itself that the public in consideration of its trustworthiness is willing to lend money at a less rate of interest.

Underlying—Underlying Bonds, as the name indicates, are fundamental; they lie next the property and other bonds come after them. In other words, they are prior liens to General, Consolidated or Refunding Mortgages, and if such bonds are good, of necessity the Underlying must be better.

Collateral—Collateral Trust Bonds are secured by a lien not directly on the property of the corporation but indirectly through a pledge of stocks, bonds, or both, which are deposited with a trustee. In case of liquidation the holders of this class of bonds would not receive the pledged securities, but would receive a pro rata share of the proceeds of their sale. Collateral Trust Bonds are similar to loans on collateral, which are of such common occurrence in every day banking experience, and their safety, of course, depends upon the value of the stock and bonds by which they are secured.

Convertible—Convertible Bonds may be any one of the kind mentioned, differing, however, in that they contain a provision specifying under certain conditions they may be converted into the stock of the corporation issuing them.

Income—Income Bonds are secured by a lien on the income of the corporation and are but rarely met with. In fact, unless they contain a mortgage clause, they are little different from preferred stock, for the interest is only paid if earned.

Debentures—Debenture Bonds are nothing more than unsecured notes of a corporation, payable at a specified time. In order to render them more acceptable, they generally contain a provision that no mortgage indebtedness prior to them can be incurred.

Equipment—Bonds, more commonly spoken of as equipment notes, are obligations of the purchaser, nominally the lessee, given to the vendor, nominally the lessor, in payment for equipment such as cars, locomotives, boats, etc. They are secured by a lien on the equipment, title to which it is held in a trustee for the protection of the note holders, and does not pass to the purchaser until all the notes are paid in full.

Bonds, the result of modern development, are the most satisfactory form of investment for the hurried man. They are secured, with the exceptions above noted, by a mortgage not only on the real estate, but usually also on the personality of the corporation, and if the person or company offering them is of good repute the investor may rest assured that proper attention has been given to all the necessary conditions for their validity and that the security is as represented. High grade stocks offer an investment with speculative possibility; high grade bonds offer a safe investment with a market that fluctuates only as does the price of money.

Bonds, according to the body politic or corporation issuing them, may be divided into Government, State, County, Municipal, Steam Railroad, Traction, Public Service and Industrial.

Government Bonds—United States Government Bonds are as safe, if not safer, than any investment in the world, but on account of their special uses the income is too small for the ordinary investor. National banks by depositing them with the United States Treasurer are permitted to issue money which they can lend at a good rate of interest; the individual cannot do this, consequently the banks can afford to pay so high a price that the net return is very small.

Municipals—State, County, City and School Bonds may be classified under the general name of Municipals. The investment of a certain character of funds is restricted to them and gives them frequently an abnormal value, materially reducing the average income yield.

Their desirability is dependent upon the following: Legality of issue, real and assessed valuation of taxable property, amount of existing debt, rate of interest, tax levied to pay off bonds, whether taxable or not in the hands of the owner, and whether or not there has ever been default in the payment of the principal or interest of any of the prior issues of bonds.

Steam Railroads—Bonds issued by our great steam railroads secured by mortgage on franchises, real estate, leaseholds, buildings, right-of-way, trackage and rolling stock, have proved themselves to be safe investments. In fact, they are among the most favored securities, as their quasi-public and necessary character gives them permanence and they are so widely known that their market is always active.

Their value is dependent on the road's earning power, its financial position, its main physical characteristics and condition, the territory served and the possibility of developing the territory through which it runs.

Tractions—Street Railway Bonds and those of electric car lines connecting adjacent cities are commonly called Tractions. In fact, they are bonds of little railroads secured by mortgage on franchises, real estate, and in general the same kind of property as secures railroad bonds; their value should be judged by similar standards.

Public Service Corporations—Public Service Corporations, as the name indicates, are companies whose services are necessary to the general public and which come into being through grant of rights (franchises) by the public. Steam Railroads belong to this division and so do Tractions, but each has earned a distinctive classification.

Well known bonds of Public Service Corporations are Gas, Water, Electric Light and Power and Telephone.

Necessity gave birth to these companies and the very life of the community has become dependent upon their continuance. They must be supported and consequently so long as a population exists, the securities issued by them should be reasonably safe.

In judging of the desirability of such bonds, one should know the character and life of the franchise under which the issuing company operates, the number of people dependent on its services, and whether or not the city is enlarging. You should also be satisfied that the management is sufficient.

Industrials—Bonds of corporations engaged in the industries of manufacturing, distributing, etc., are called Industrials. So long as conditions are good they are frequently excellent investments, but, as is natural, they feel the depression in business quicker and to a greater extent than any other security.

Prime Requisites of Investments—The ideal investment would be one that (1) was absolutely safe; that (2) required no watching for possibility of deterioration; that (3) bore a high rate of interest; (4) payable promptly and (5) without trouble to the investor.

This ideal is not to be found, but in examining any bond should be borne in mind. For instance, take the United States Government Bonds and measure them by this standard. They are as secure as our government, they require the slightest degree of watching, the interest is payable promptly and with the smallest amount of trouble to the recipient, but they are lacking in the very necessary element of income. They yield only about  $1\frac{3}{4}$  per cent, and few people can afford to be satisfied with such a small return, even though free from tax.

However, there are many bonds which, while not as safe as our government, still are safe enough to do away with anxiety; they have all the other essentials of an ideal bond and give an income of from 4 per cent to 6 per cent. The ordinary investor should procure bonds of this character.

But how can such bonds be selected? First, by relying upon yourself, examining carefully all details of the investment, using exactly the same facilities that enable you successfully to do your marketing, and, second, being careful to deal with some one in whom you have faith, who, you are sure, has investigated the security thoroughly and will answer truthfully any questions you may ask; some one who cannot afford to present anything in which he has no confidence.

I shall omit discussing with you now the Auditing Department, likewise the Legal Department. They are not departments with which the public come in contact as they do those I have mentioned, yet they can be made and frequently are branches of the "financial department store" which a modern trust company is sometimes called.

In conclusion, let me say that it may be that some individual class or vocation has suffered by the development of the trust company, but we must also conclude that it has and will grow in its usefulness to the public. As our country grows older it grows richer—it also amends old laws and passes new ones, and who better than the trust companies will keep up with the times? Competition, if nothing else, insures this, while the composite and varied character of our business and our people will produce a volume of business which insures a greater success than yet attained by every trust company conscientiously, honestly, and prudently managed.

Chicago Chapter Meeting

A general meeting of the Chicago Chapter was called to order by President Jackson Tuesday evening. The third lecture in the series by Prof. J. Paul Goode, of the department of geography, University of Chicago, on "The Great Seaports of Europe," was delivered. These lectures are a great drawing card for full attendance, and form one of the most attractive and instructive features of this year's chapter work. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views, and was very interesting to those who wish to know of affairs outside of their own routine work. H. L. Wildfang, of the First Trust & Savings Bank, rendered a baritone solo.

The annual chapter banquet (informal) will be held Saturday evening, January 23d, at the Auditorium Banquet Hall. Member's tickets sell at $2.00. The officers of the Chicago Chapter are anxious to make this banquet a very successful affair, and a program of more than usual merit has been arranged.

Kansas City Chapter Meeting

The Kansas City Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its regular semi-monthly meeting in the rooms of the Clearing House Association recently. Seventy-five members attended and listened to a talk by James Bradley, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce. Mr. Bradley spoke on the topic, "The Young Bank Clerk."

Fort Worth Bank Clerks

The bank clerks and Clearing House representatives of Fort Worth, Texas, participated in a banquet recently at the Metropolitan Hotel, which was arranged in the nature of an annual event for the bank officers and employees of the city. Covers were laid for sixty. S. M. Henderson presided as toastmaster.

T. W. Mullaly, manager of the Majestic Theater, responded to the call of "The Difference Between the Banker and the Showman." In the course of his remarks Mr. Mullaly stated that both the banker and the showman depended upon their reputation for probity and intelligence to secure the confidence of the public and that the occasional demand for an extra pass to the show bore the same relation as a request for a little extra cash on the part of the theatrical promoter. Oscar Wells, the retiring cashier of the First National, responded to the toast, "The Future Banker." He showed where the banker was the financial barometer of the community in which he did business and that it well behooved that banker to stand sponsor for his reputation for integrity and courteous discernment.

Norman Nelson, acting manager of the Fort Worth Clearing House Association, spoke on "The Relation of the Bankers to the Clearing House." R. D. Gage, Vice-President of the First National, delivered an address on the bank employees and their relation to the public.

Bank Clerk Receives Reward

Edwin A. Crolius, a clerk in the employ of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, this city, has been awarded a Carnegie hero medal for bravery. Last summer while sailing over Lake Michigan with a party of friends the craft was upset. Seeing that his friends were in temporary safety upon the upturned boat Mr. Crolius swam two miles to shore and got aid and rescued the whole party.

Philadelphia Chapter Meeting

At the meeting of the Philadelphia chapter of the American Institute of Banking, Friday evening, John A. McCarthy, trust officer of the Real Estate Trust Company discussed the "management of a bankrupt estate."

The Farmers Trust Company

The Farmers Trust Co. of Fessenden, (N. D.) reports capital of $100,000 with the following officers: T. L. Beiseker as president; E. F. Volkmann, vice-president; C. C. Bishop, secretary and treasurer, and B. H. Edminster, assistant secretary.

New Bank for Fort Worth

A new bank is to be organized at Fort Worth, Tex. O. S. Houston and W. L. Smallwood are interested.

The Union Savings & Trust Co., of Seattle, will increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $500,000.

The contract for the construction of the First National building at Kennewick, Wash., has been let. Same will cost about $15,000.

The war on national banks in Oklahoma is now for extermination. Since Federal Attorney-General Bonaparte ruled against national banks guaranteeing deposits many national banks became state banks, and those remaining national banks suffered heavy losses in deposits to the guaranty institutions. Now, as a result of numerous petitions from constituents, demanding such a law, Senator Echols, of Elk City, will introduce a measure in the legislature compelling the deposit in state banks under the guaranty law of all public funds, school, municipal, county, as well as state funds. This would entirely eliminate the remaining national banks in this state.

The movement is expected to succeed. Texas' state guaranty bank deposit bill, which is likely to become a law, is backed by Bryan and indicates the movement's growth.

The St. Louis Money Market

Clearings in St. Louis are liberal. The demand for money continues rather slow and all banks are well supplied with funds. Rates remain unchanged between  $4\frac{1}{2}$  and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

The St. Louis Bonding Company

A bonding company, financed by St. Louis capital, was incorporated in St. Louis last week, with $500,000 capital, to do a general bonding business, and especially to write contractors' bonds. The name is the St. Louis Bonding Company of St. Louis. Its backers have not yet been disclosed, the incorporators admitting that the moneyed men of the enterprise are still in the background, although they declare that the capital stock is fully paid and that the intention is to increase its amount to $1,000,000 in the near future.

Banks Double Deposits

Kansas bank deposits have doubled in six years, and at the present time there is $145 for each man, woman and child in Kansas on deposit in Kansas banks. This is shown in the report of W. S. Albright, Kansas bank commissioner. The report includes both the statements of the national and state banks at the close of business November 27th. The total deposits in Kansas banks on this date were $167,202,796.96. Of this amount $81,653,416.35 of individual deposits were in state banks and $62,658,312.41 were in national banks.

The Planters' National

The new national bank to be launched by Harry M. Rubey and others will be known as the Planters' National of St. Louis. The first title decided upon was the Commercial National, but Frank M. Estes, counsel for the new institution, was recently notified by Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of currency, that a protest against the use of that name had been filed by the Commercial Trust Company of St.

Louis, because of the possible confusion that would arise from names so nearly alike.

"One of the most difficult things we had to contend with was the finding of a name," said Judge Estes. "One has to establish a bank to find out how many names are already in use."

The organization meeting of the bank will, it is expected, be held about January 20th, and after that the permanent location will be made public. Real estate men have submitted various propositions. It is believed that the bank will be located in either the old quarters of the Third National, on Olive Street, adjoining the Commonwealth Trust Company's Building, or in the quarters occupied by the old Fourth National, at Fourth and Oliver streets. Judge Estes refused to say anything about the location other than that it will be less than two blocks from Broadway and Olive Street.

The bank is to be capitalized at $1,000,000, with $200,000 surplus. Rubey will be president; W. F. Churchman and H. V. S. Lewis, former cashier of the Union National of Kansas City, vice-presidents. The cashier will be a St. Louis man.

Judge Estes was notified that the name Planters' National has been accepted by Comptroller Murray.

A New Bank Guaranty Scheme

Bailie P. Waggener of Atchison, the man who introduced the bill permitting the organization of insurance guaranty companies to insure bank deposits in Kansas in the special session of the legislature last winter, has a new guaranty plan.

Mr. Waggener says: "The most equitable and the safest bank guaranty measure, in my opinion, would be to amend the constitution to authorize the levy each year, on all taxable property of the state, a tax not exceeding one mill on the dollar, to go to a state guaranty fund until that fund should reach say 5 million dollars.

"The law should provide that the fund thus provided should, from time to time, be loaned to the banks of the state, upon security the same as state funds are now loaned, for not less than 2 per cent per annum—the interest thus derived to go to the guaranty fund as an accretion to that fund—until the fund reached the maximum.

"The banks, state and national, by way of taxation, would pay their proportion. After that, the banks, by way of interest on the fund, would pay the entire accretion, which at 2 per cent would amount annually to $100,000; and until the maximum was reached by taxation, the fund would be augmented each year by the 2 per cent interest paid by the banks."

Kansas City Bank Clearings

A new record in bank clearings was made by the Kansas City Clearing House last week. The exchanges between the banks aggregated $49,066,462, averaging $8,177,743 for each day. This shows an increase of near 47 per cent over the clearings for the corresponding week last year.

St. Louis Merchants Exchange Election

The St. Louis Merchants Exchange at its annual election last week formally elected the ticket selected at the recent nominating caucus. The new officers are: President, Edward E. Scharff; first vice-president, Manning W. Cochrane; second vice-president, Nat L. Moffitt. Directors: Edward Devoy, Robert W. Pommer, J. L. Messmore, W. A. Miller, Henry C. Schultz. Committee of Appeals: Daniel P. Byrne, W. B. Keeble, Ben S. Lang, Louis A. Jasper, O. A. Orvis, Cary H. Bacon, F. W. Hofmann, H. E. Papin, K. B. Hannigan, Fred S. Plant, J. W. Beck, Samuel Plant. Committee of Arbitration: H. F. Ketchum, H. N. Manning, H. J. McGee, H. J. Berry, C. F. Beardsley, Fred C. Orthwein, Fred P. Brockmann, Fred W. Seele, Ray L. Depew, Jas. M. Gettys.

First State Bank of Eldorado

WINTON SIX

Goes the Route Like Coasting Down Hill

Designed with the skill of pioneer and long-continued experience. Embodies the best tested materials. Manufactured with extreme care in a single mammoth plant, equipped with the most improved machinery. Represents all the quality any maker can put into his car, all the special advantages of six-cylinder construction, and these exclusive Winton advantages:

Starts from the seat without cranking. No starting crank in front.

Bearings flooded with oil by the Winton circulating system at no more expense for lubricant than on cars which save oil and waste bearings.

The Winton Six does everything that you looked for in fours—and didn't find.

So quiet that you doubt it's running.

Goes through traffic and up the hills on high, seldom requiring gear changing.

Silent as to exhaust.

Motor vibration eliminated.

Saves gasoline, tires and upkeep. Sworn statements of ten prominent business men in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois prove how ten Winton Sixes ran more than twice the distance around the world (65,687.4 miles) on an average upkeep expense of $1 for each 4343 miles. That ought to interest every man who has ever paid a repair bill. We send the affidavits upon request.

Beautiful body designs. The illustration shows the $3000 roadster. We have touring car, limousine, landaulet and other bodies. The Carriage Monthly says we "are at the top" in body making.

Our 48 horse-power, five-passenger Six sells at $3000, and our 60 horse-power, seven-passenger Six at $4500. If you pay a higher price for equal or less power you pay an unwarranted premium.

Our catalog (48 pages) doesn't mince words. You'll appreciate it, if you like facts. Booklets tell of our $2500 prize plan to benefit owners, and expose the light-weight fallacy.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

In his annual report, filed with the governor last week, State Banking Commissioner Bergh recommends legislation that no one holding less than ten shares of stock shall be eligible to election as director of a bank.

He also recommends that the banking commissioner be empowered to fix the limit of loans by a bank to its officers, that savings deposits be kept separate from other deposits, and that loan and trust companies be placed under the same requirements as banks in so far as the two classes of institutions compete with each other.

During 1908, it is stated, no depositor of a state bank in Wisconsin suffered loss by reason of failure of such bank. The totals of resources and liabilities of 447 state banks are $283,130,688, an increase of $6,411,863 during the year.

Has Two 1884 Trade Dollars

A Wausau man has the good fortune to possess two of the five 1884 trade dollars, said to be in existence at the present time. One of the five sold at public auction in Chicago recently for $280 and the purchaser thought he had a rare bargain at that price. The owner of the coins in Wausau is Emil Grabau, and if he can induce some collector to buy them for the same price paid for the other, he will find considerable profit in saving them. He has had them about a year and did not attach any importance to them until the article telling of their value appeared some time ago. He has quite a collection of old coins. Among the coins is a quarter dollar for the 1853 series, on which the rays of the sun extend in all directions from the back of the eagle.

To Legalize Bond Issue

The first Milwaukee measure to be introduced into the legislature will be a bill drawn by the city attorney at the request of Comptroller A. M. Gavin, correcting a minor flaw in the recent issue of bonds for the garbage crematory. The defect is technical, yet the prospective purchaser of the $200,000 issue wants the issue legalized.

New Bank for Arena

The National Bank of La Crosse

The National Bank of La Crosse is sending out a comparative statement showing the growth of the bank during a period covering the last twelve years. The institution commenced business July 1, 1896, (succeeding the La Crosse National Bank) with a paid in capital of $250,000 and a paid in surplus of $50,000. Particular attention is directed to the increase of the surplus fund from $50,000 to $300,000, it being the belief of the management that no better or sounder guaranty of deposits can be desired than a growing surplus account. This policy will be continued, as it evidently meets with popular favor and appreciation.

The officers are: Geo. W. Burton, president; F. P. Hixon, vice-president; L. C. Colman, vice-president; F. H. Hankerson, cashier; Joseph Boschert, assistant cashier; Alfred Bossard, assistant cashier.

The La Crosse Banks

With bank deposits showing an increase of nearly $650,000 in one year, and in spite of timidity caused by the panic of October, 1907, and the loss of some industries, La Crosse evidently is not going backward. Many are of the opinion that bank deposits form the best barometer of the business situation obtainable. The substantial increase of last year is certainly not discouraging.

Some of the bankers are of the opinion that the result of the election of November 3d had a beneficial effect on business, backing up their belief with figures showing that the greatest increase in deposits has been made since that time. For instance, $40,000, over half of the increase in savings deposits at the First National of La Crosse, has been deposited since November 1st. The people, evidently, are saving their money.

Effects of the panic were felt generally all over the country but some bankers contend that no ill effects have reached La Crosse, unless a few manufacturing concerns depending on trade in sections of the country which were hard hit by the depression experienced a slight setback. Any loss in retail lines here, they contend, is due to the discontinuance of business of a few concerns which employed quite a number of hands.

The excellent location of La Crosse is believed to have a great deal to do with its advance and that upon this depends its future which is pictured generally as bright.

The small savings banks which have been put out by some of the local financial institutions have been an important factor in building up the savings deposits. Children, especially, put away pennies and nickels which otherwise would be spent, perhaps for something that does them harm, and which make up a respectable total when placed in the bank.

Total deposits of La Crosse banks amount to nearly $7,725,000; while a year ago they were $7,075,575. The $8,000,000 mark will probably be reached next year.

New Bank for St. Augustine

Horace Lindsley will be president; B. Genovar, vice-president, and Thomas K. Cureton, cashier, of the new bank being organized at St. Augustine, Fla., with a capital of $30,000.

The Peoples Bank

The directors of the Peoples Bank of Donaldsonville (La.) have declared a dividend of 10 per cent.

In and Around Pittsburgh

By
LATIMER T. LAWTON

As a prosperity barometer the showing made by one downtown bank, in figures collected by its officers, gives encouragement to Pittsburgh.

Treasurer W. J. Jones of the Pittsburgh Bank for Savings found in making his totals of savings accounts that for the first three business days of 1909 the new accounts received at that one institution totaled 140, as compared with 56 for the first three days in July and 85 for the first three days of 1908, an increase of 150 per cent over last July. The accounts closed for the same period were 79 for the present month, 121 for last July and 163 for the three days in January, 1908.

The total withdrawals in cash for the first three business days of this month were 100 per cent less than last July and 85 per cent less than last January. The school savings deposits, which fell off $10,000 last year, have regained more than half the lost ground.

New Depository Bill

Selectman Richard Armstrong of the Fifteenth ward, Northside, has prepared for presentation to Councils next Monday night a third ordinance for the selection of banks as city depositories. The new bill authorizes the Mayor and City Controller to advertise for bids and solicit proposals for interest to be paid to the city on current daily balances, and to contract for the custody of the funds with 12 institutions paying the highest interest.

Councilman Armstrong says his proposition would yield the city more than 3 per cent on its daily cash balances. The two ordinances now pending, each providing for the selection of 12 banks as city depositories, and which are now in the Finance Committee, prescribe that the institutions shall pay the city 2½ per cent.

Armstrong's ordinance provides that within the two weeks before March 1st of each year the Mayor and Controller must advertise by at least three insertions in the official newspapers for proposals.

The ordinance prescribes that the depositories shall render statements on the first day of each month to the City Controller, showing the amount of the city deposit and the amount of interest due the city on daily balances.

Each bank obtaining the custody of the city's funds shall furnish a bond to be approved by the Mayor and Controller of not less than $500,000, with sureties to the amount of $1,000,000.

Preparing a Bill

It is stated that Banking Commissioner Berkley is engaged in preparing a bill for presentation to the legislature which will allow the department to wind up the affairs of the insolvent state banks and trust companies more expeditiously than is possible under the existing law. The department has been severely criticised for the lengthening out of receiverships, and it is the desire of the commissioner to have the cause of adverse comment removed with the least possible delay.

J. B. Cunningham Resigns

The resignation of J. B. Cunningham, National Bank Examiner at Pittsburgh, has been received by the Comptroller of the Currency. Cunningham leaves his position to engage in other business. No successor will be appointed and Bank Examiner Harrison Nesbitt of the Pittsburgh district will take care of all the business formerly handled by Cunningham.

The Business Monthly

The January issue of "The Business Monthly," issued by the First National of Pittsburgh, is out. Its statistical tables of the range of prices for the local securities for the year just closed, are of value to investors, and there is an interesting variety of news pertaining to the Pittsburgh district.

Common Stock Offered Workers

Employees of the United States Steel Corporation, under the profit-sharing plan of 1909, will be allowed to subscribe for the preferred stock at 110 and the common at 50. The preferred closed Saturday on the New York Stock Exchange at 113 and the common at 52.

New Kensington Bank Resumes

As quietly as it was closed just two months ago, when the only evidence that such a course had been taken was a notice on the door, the First National of New Kensington resumed business Thursday morning. The $250,000 in cash placed in the vaults to guard against a possible run was not required. The bank opens in a much stronger condition than formerly. Business at once reflected the reopening of the bank, and merchants report a marked revival in sales.

In appreciation of Receiver George C. Ball's efforts in bringing about an early reopening of the First National of New Kensington the officers and stockholders gave a banquet at the Kensington Friday night in his honor.

F. J. McAllister was toastmaster and responses were made by the president of the bank, Dr. E. E. Patton; the first vice-president, J. T. Boyce; the chairman of the reorganization committee, David Thomas, Burgess Daniel Burns, Councilman James P. Mulvihill of Arnold, Lucian Clawson of Greensburg, W. H. Richards of Canonsburg, C. B. Sibley and E. J. Bartlick, E. J. Baxter, P. J. Jacobus and J. C. Monroe, directors.

The All-Nations Deposit Bank

At the annual meeting of the All-Nations Deposit Bank of Pittsburgh the following directors were elected: Jacob Breiding, P. V. Obiecunas, Joseph S. E. Ruffennach, P. A. Klein, George Range, A. J. Locke, Max Reinhold, John Sobczak, George Freund, Peter Elzer, Adam Appel, Frank Posluszny, Lorenz Sommer. The bank has been prosperous from the time of its incorporation several years ago.

Banking Notes

The directors of the Womelsdorf Union Bank have declared a semiannual dividend of 3 per cent. $5,000 has been added to the surplus fund which amount is now $30,000.

Charles Schmeltz succeeds J. O. Miller as vice-president of the Hays National.

W. A. May has been elected a director of the Third National of Scranton.

Elected to Cashiership

P. F. Ebben has been elected to the cashiership of the Peoples National of Sedan, Kan., to succeed D. J. Moore.

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, January 14. -Banks all over Iowa are holding their meetings this month and numerous changes are reported from different sections of the state. In Des Moines, the only change of interest thus far has been the election of Simon Casaday as president of the Central State Bank and the increase of the capital stock of the institution from $50,000 to $200,000 as predicted in THE BANKER of last week. The bank at its annual meeting, declared a dividend of 120 per cent, creating some little talk in Des Moines as a result. Each of these stockholders who started in with the bank thirteen years ago was repaid the amount of his stock, 20 per cent, besides and permitted to retain his holdings. J. D. Whisenand and H. B. Hedge were chosen vice-presidents and the new board of directors is R. T. Wellslager, J. C. Olmsted, W. H. Langan, Charles R. Chase, H. A. Elliott, J. W. Hill, F. R. Risser, Simon Casaday, H. B. Hedge and J. D. Whisenand.

Other Iowa Changes

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Iowa Trust & Savings resulted in the re-election of the old officers and directors. A dividend of 7 per cent was declared and $5,000 was put in the surplus fund. The State Savings also re-elected its former officers and directors. Among changes over Iowa may be noted these: E. C. Lougee has resigned as vice-president of the Commercial National at Council Bluffs; Frank West succeeds F. J. L. Black as cashier of the Fairfield National at Fairfield; C. H. Harvey is new cashier in the Citizen's Savings at Iowa Falls; T. J. Davis succeeds C. H. Kurtz, the veteran cashier of the First National at Marion; Harry C. Marks succeeds J. R. Howard as cashier of the Providence State at Providence; The Security and the Farmers Savings at Oxford have consolidated and the latter will conduct the business of both.

Legislature in Full Swing

The Iowa legislature organized for business Monday and is now in full swing. Lieutenant Governor Clarke presides over the senate and Guy A. Feely, of Waterloo, was elected speaker of the house. It is expected that considerable legislation of interest to bankers will be enacted along the line of taxation while the inevitable guaranteed bank deposits bill is to be pushed by the democrats. It is expected that a state banking department not connected with the auditor's office will be established. Chief Bank Examiner Roberts has several ideas in view along the line of changes in Iowa banking laws while the disposition among legislators to provide for the taxing of mortgages in counties where the real estate exists indicates that a general revision of the taxation laws along that line is certain. Attorney-General Byers held recently that the Farmers Loan & Trust Company, of Waterloo, could not incorporate to act as administrator or guardian. The company thereupon withdrew that provision from its articles but will ask that the law be amended so that it will be possible for trust companies to act in that capacity.

Appoints Five Examiners

Auditor of State Bleakley has announced the appointment of five bank examiners as follows: H. M. Carmony, of Woodbine; H. M. Sproull, of Washington; Ellis Robb, of Eldora; John Olson, of Forest City, and E. Putnam, of Cedar Rapids. Frederick John Alber, who was named to a place in the banking department, has an interesting career back of him. He was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1860 and came to America when 12 years old to secure a musical education from his uncle, a composer. Since then his career has been varied including everything from working in a candy factory to "punching" cattle on the western plains. He has been employed at the state house, however, for some time.

to increase its currency issue from $260,000 to $460,000. This is the first large shipment of currency to Des Moines since the Aldrich-Vreeland currency law went into effect. At the same time, the bank consigned two tons of currency to the First National at Chicago. This consisted of $25,000 in 50 cent pieces, $25,000 in 25 cent pieces and $4,000 in nickels. Des Moines was also thought to be overstocked with $1 and $2 bills and $25,000 of them were expressed to Chicago.

The Postal Savings Bank Bill

Senator A. B. Cummins is prepared to fight for his proposed amendment to the postal savings bank bill now before Congress. Senator Cummins thinks that postoffice deposits should be placed with state and savings banks as well as nationals, and that the government should not have a first lien upon the deposits in the banks. Senator Cummins received about 100 letters from Iowa bankers and said he found but one in favor of postal savings bank legislation. He has prepared a table showing the deposits in Iowa state and savings banks and their percentage of losses for the past six years as compared with the same facts as to national banks in the state.

Municipal Bonds

Des Moines and Council Bluffs are having difficulties in the issuance and sale of municipal bonds. Judge Smith McPherson in federal court enjoined the city of Council Bluffs from issuing $600,000 in water works bonds because the city has reached the limit of legal bonded indebtedness. Des Moines has $350,000 city hall bonds to issue but is in much the same predicament as is Council Bluffs. City Solictor R. O. Brennan has prepared a bill which provides that any city shall have the right to issue bonds for any lawful indebtedness which added to all other indebtedness shall not exceed 5 per cent of the actual value of the property which will be introduced at the legislative session. In the meantime the city council is trying to dispose of the bonds at the best rate possible.

An Unusual Compact

Joseph Osborne at Iowa City has deposited a dollar with the Citizens Savings & Trust at that place under a contract to be signed, sealed and delivered to the effect that it shall not be removed for ninety-nine years. At the end of that period the sum including interest to be compounded annually, shall be presented to the oldest surviving descendant of the depositor, Joseph Osborne. The unusual compact resulted from the discovery by Osborne that he had a balance of 23 cents in the bank. He added the 77 cents to this and deposited it as above.

Served in Royal Style

Henry Clay, the negro janitor who has been with the Iowa National for twenty-five years, gave the employees of the institution an old fashioned possum supper at his home. Headed by paying teller G. A. Nelson, nine of the bankers went to the janitor's home, where they were met by the negro in white apron and jacket. His wife and six children joined in making the bankers feel at home and shortly afterwards the possum with sweet potatoes, corn fritters and real syrup were served in royal style.

Banking Notes

The Carroll Trust & Savings was organized at Carroll with a capital stock of $25,000 and will commence business as soon as authorized by the auditor of state. The president is C. J. Specht, Jr., formerly a banker at Sunbury. Other officers are J. P. Minchen, vice-president; Julius Ruge, cashier. Directors, J. E. Buemeister, J. P. Minchen, W. E. Sturges, J. B. Hungerford, J. H. Meyhous.

W. R. Fleming, president, and Howard D. Fuller, cashier of the People's State at Mason City, have purchased the interests of William and F. A. Ontjes.

A. D. Odenheimer has been made vice-president and director of the Page County State at Clarinda. He was formerly connected with Homer A. Miller in the banking business at Eagle Grove.

W. K. Gilcrest, head of the state bank at Gilcrest, Colo., has been in Des Moines on business. Mr. Gilcrest reports Colorado banking conditions as first-class.

The Iowa State at Hull, has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $35,000. Incorporators are E. H. Reimann, John B. Mayer, Nannie Reimann and J. H. C. Bauman.

Banks all over the city report an exceptionally heavy day last Saturday. It was the first pay day for miners since Christmas and the cold weather has so increased the earnings of the miners that the banks reported the heaviest demand of the year from the operators.

H. M. Whinery, who resigned from the Century State because of ill health, was tendered a reception by the Friends Church Sunday school before he left for the Pacific coast. Mr. Whinery had been superintendent of the Sunday school for eight years.

Mrs. Homer A. Miller, wife of President Miller, of the Iowa National, is regarded as out of danger from a severe attack of pneumonia.

E. J. Curtin, of Decorah, one of the best known bankers in northeastern Iowa, was in Des Moines attending a meeting of the directors of the state fair of which he is one. Mr. Curtin reports first-class banking conditions at Decorah and thereabouts.

Paul V. Hyland, a Chicago architect, is making plans for the new bank which the Cook-Musser Company, of Muscatine, proposes to erect at a cost of $60,000.

C. O. Dawson, teller of the City National at Marshalltown, has been elected teller for the Exchange National at Spokane, Wash. He is the son of former mayor A. W. Dawson. The bank at Spokane has a capital stock of $1,000,000.

G. D. Ellyson, Lewis Schooler and Dean Schooler have sold their controlling interest in the Farmers Savings at Madrid to the Moore interests at Boone. Frank H. Graves, formerly assistant cashier of the Madrid State, succeeds Dean Schooler as cashier of the Farmers Savings.

J. G. Ralston, an architect at Waterloo, is preparing plans for the seven-story bank and office building which the Black Hawk County National proposes to build this summer.

C. G. McCarthy, formerly state auditor, has gone to Sonora, Mexico, where he will look after mining interests for several months.

The Des Moines clearing house reports all records broken for the week ending January 9th, when the clearings totaled $4,227,507.56. This is an increase over the corresponding week of last year of $1,364,476.45.

Des Moines bankers report only a fair inquiry for loans at this time. The current rates of interest are 7 per cent for small accommodations and 6 per cent for large loans. Farmers are selling corn at 50 to 55 cents a bushel and live stock is bringing good prices so that the city depositories are receiving large amounts from correspondents throughout the state.

Nebraska Bankers Association

Omaha, January 11.—The following is the latest bulletin sent out by Wm. B. Hughes, secretary, to the members of the state bankers association:

Dues for 1909 are payable January 1st. We of course hope you will continue as a member of the association. Please mail a $5 draft to the secretary and a new membership sign will be sent to you. A new form of sign is being prepared to replace the old sign that has been used for a number of years, and it is the intention to use the new sign as a receipt for the dues each year and as a certificate of membership. Please send in your old membership sign with your draft, as the new sign will only be sent where the old ones are returned.

The association is continually growing stronger and the membership is increasing. Last year the total was 745—nearly all the banks in the state. All of the old lines of work are being continued. The time lock arrangement is one of the best, the price of $7.50 per year is lower than any other association has secured for its members, with one exception. The next nearest price is $9, with an extra charge for some of the work that we throw in for nothing.

The recent robberies have kept our protective committee busy. We have in jail two men we are confident of convicting for the DeWeese job. In this case the association offered a reward, hired detectives, paid all telephone and telegraph charges, interested itself in seeing that a proper settlement with the bank was made, and arranged for special counsel to assist the prosecution, the expense of which is divided between the association and the National Surety Company.

On all of the other robberies the association offered rewards except at Heartwell, where the bank was not a member at the time of the robbery. We hired detectives where it seemed wise, and used bloodhounds. We have evidence that makes us think we can get the men who did the work at Keene and Ceresco, and we are letting no stone remain unturned. The protective committee has under consideration certain changes in the reward system, also a plan to employ a man of our own to do regular work for the association and endeavor to prevent robberies, as well as to chase the men after the job. The idea of having an association attorney to give legal advice to members free of charge on points arising in everyday banking is being investigated. These are but a few of the things upon which the energy and resources of the association are turned for the benefit of the banks of the state. Can any bank remain out of an association like this when the annual dues are so small?

International Certificates

As to Mr. Cortelyou's suggestion for an international conference to diminish the necessity for the transfer of what he rather naively calls "physical gold" in times of panic and to substitute therefor some kind of international gold certificate, we can hardly regard it very seriously. No doubt it is desirable that some swifter method of transferring gold credits should be hit upon during a panic than the cumbrous method of actual shipments of the metal. But if you could transfer millions of gold by aeroplane within a couple of hours or so from London to New York the position, though it would certainly be modified, would not be essentially changed.

The situation in the United States in the recent panic was alleviated in a measure, but it was certainly not saved, by the gold imports from Europe. It was only saved by the free use of the domestic credit of the government. And in the long run every country must rely upon its own resources to deal with panics. As for international gold certificates, seeing that "physical gold" is at the basis of credit, they must be represented by the metal somewhere. The question is—where? And a very vital question it is. As a broker put the matter yesterday, if the international storage place for the specie representing these notes is to be London, let us have it by all means! But would other nations agree to this, or would they not rather consider what might happen in the event of war?

Beyond all this there is the difficulty of the radical difference between the banking systems of the United States and of Europe. As another authority remarked, the suggestion for such international credits comes strangely from America, with its defective banking system. If a conference of national financial representatives be really called to consider this question it would no doubt lead to some most interesting expressions of opinion, but that anything practical would emerge from its discussions we respectfully decline to believe.—London Financial Times.

Gold Dug Up in 1907—$90,435,700

The United States produced $90,435,700 worth of gold and $37,299,700 worth of silver in 1907, according to statements obtained from mints, assay offices, smelting establishments and the product of mines. As compared with the previous year, 1907 shows a decrease of $4,000,000 in gold and about $1,000,000 in the silver produced. The rank of principal gold-producing states is as follows: Colorado, Alaska, California, Nevada, Utah, South Dakota, Montana and Arizona.

Vermont appeared as a gold producer for the first time in many years. Twenty-seven states and territories contributed the silver.

The Pitfalls of Speculation

By THOMAS GIBSON

This book deals exclusively with marginal speculation and analyzes in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies. While 80 per cent. of the public speculators fail in their ventures, the writer contends that the errors may be corrected and the pitfalls avoided by careful study and clear understanding of the machinery of the exchanges.

In the introduction the writer says:

"I do not pretend that any prescription can be written to insure success nor that a majority of the public traders will ever succeed, but I do maintain that many individuals capable of clear reasoning and the directed exercise of such reasoning, are simply moving in the dark thru a lack of understanding as to what makes and breaks prices. More fallacies, superstitions and distorted logic are connected with speculation than with any other business on earth."

Until the late Charles H. Dow, the founder of "The Wall Street Journal," began to write of such matters there was no literature extant on the art of speculation with especial reference to the position of the speculator of moderate means. Mr. Dow's efforts were newspaper articles, not intended for book publication. Since Mr. Dow, no writer has appeared to treat of these matters with anything approaching the knowledge of the subject, the breadth of view and the common-sense treatment that Mr. Gibson devotes to it.

THE CHICAGO BANKER

Farmers' Loan and Trust Company

The Farmers' Loan & Trust Company is the latest acquisition to Waterloo's (Ia.) financial institutions. It will be ready for business next Saturday morning in offices in the Irving hotel block on the Bridge Street side. Articles of incorporation were filed for record last week.

The articles of incorporation provide that the capital stock of the company shall be $100,000, stock to be both preferred and common. The preferred stock shall consist of 750 shares at the par value of $100 each and 2,500 shares of common stock at the par value of $10 each. Twenty-five thousand dollars of the preferred stock and an equal amount of the common stock have been subscribed and paid in. The preferred stock will draw a semiannual dividend of 3 per cent, or a cumulative dividend of 6 per cent per annum. The common stock will divide all profits after the dividend for the preferred stock has been provided for out of the net earnings of the company. The holders of the common stock will be responsible for the management of the company. Any part of the profits of the company may be transferred to the surplus account of the company, but if such transfer is made the surplus account shall belong to the holders of the common stock.

The first board of directors is composed of W. W. Marsh, Ira Rodamar, C. E. Pickett, J. O. Trumbauer, C. L. Kingsley and J. E. Sedgwick. The first officers of the institution are J. E. Sedgwick, president; J. O. Trumbauer, vice-president; Fred E. Stewart, secretary, and Ira Rodamar, treasurer.

The Farmers' Loan & Trust Company is authorized by the articles of incorporation to issue and sell savings bonds, receive time deposits and issue certificates of deposit, act as trustee under corporate mortgages or deeds of trust; act as receiver or assignee for insolvents, hold in escrow deeds, mortgages, etc.; act as executor, guardian or trustee or conservator under will; have the care and management of estates and do such business as is generally given to trust companies to perform.

The personnel of the board of directors and the officers will attract attention. The gentlemen named have for a number of years been identified with the financial institutions of the city and the association thus formed is a strong one. Fred E. Stewart, the secretary, who with assistants will be in charge of the offices, is a Waterloo boy and was at one time engaged with his father in the transfer business. Lately he has been engaged in the Leavitt & Johnson National and in all his undertakings he has shown great business ability.

The company will at once take over the real estate business which has for years been handled by the Leavitt & Johnson National.

The Security Trust & Safe Deposit Co.

Extensive improvements to the banking house of the Security Trust & Safe Deposit Company, at Sixth and Market streets, Wilmington, Del., have been practically completed, and shortly the company will tender a reception to its friends in its enlarged quarters.

This company is the leading financial institution in Delaware, having the largest capital and surplus of all the banking institutions in the state. The capital is $600,000, and the surplus and undivided profits $686,000. The institution is twenty-three years old, and was the first trust company to begin business in Delaware.

The company's stock (par $100) last sold at $225 a share, the large premium evidencing the prosperity of the company and the investment value of its shares.

The company recently issued a handsome booklet, explaining in detail its methods of handling the business entrusted to its care. This publication in the character of its subject matter and general attractiveness would do credit to the largest institution in the country.

Officers of the company are Benjamin Niels, president; James B. Clarkson, vice-president; John S. Russell, secretary and trust officer; L. Scott Townsend, treasurer. The directors include the above and William P. Bancroft, Henry F. Dure, Dr. Joseph H. Chandler, Henry C. Jones, James A. Hart, J. Davis Sisler, William J. McClary, Samuel G. Simmons, Charles B. Evans, Dr. Willard Springer, John M. Mendin-hall.

The Security Trust Company

The Security Trust Company, of Detroit, which recently purchased $800,000 of the Eastern Michigan Edison Company's bonds, has issued an attractive booklet with map and data descriptive of the plants owned and operated by the company at Ann Arbor, Geddes, Superior, Trenton and Mt. Clemens. The company is developing the water power of the Huron river and, according to the plans of the engineers, will produce about 25,000 horsepower for a 12-hour run. The power will be developed by a series of 11 dams which will take the place of the 18 available water powers on the river.

The Union Savings Bank of Davenport, Ia., will erect a new building at the corner of Third and Brady streets.

Reserve for Trust Companies

The Boston trust companies have recently been, and now are, preparing for the increased proportion of reserve required this month and the New York trust companies by February 1st will have to provide about $45,000,000 additional cash reserve to complete the final installment of 5 per cent required by law. That is, loans will have to be called and bank balances and securities utilized for that purpose. From December 5th the New York clearing house banks on last Saturday had reduced their loans $70,400,000 or from $1,347,145,300 to $1,276,745,300. The outstanding loans December 5th last year compared with $1,190,455,200 on May 2d, an increase of $156,690,100, and were $199,450,900 larger than on December 5, 1907. Average figures are used in this compilation. The outstanding total of loans on December 5th last year was the largest of the year in the interval mentioned. From September 26th to December 26th the loans of the New York trust companies had risen $103,213,000, or from $860,009,300 to $963,222,300. From December 5th to December 26th trust company loans increased $42,527,000, or from $920,695,300 to $963,222,300.

The cash of the New York clearing house banks on August 29th last year amounted to $414,013,300 and by December 26th had fallen to $347,461,300, a decrease of $66,552,000. From December 5th to December 26th the decrease in cash was $28,743,600.

The inference drawn by some commentators on the money market from the increased reserve requirement of about $45,000,000 by the New York trust companies on February 1st, is that the trust company loans will have to be taken up to a considerable extent by the clearing house banks and that with a prospect of a good demand for funds abroad in the first half of January, money rates are likely to stiffen temporarily unless the stock exchange demand for accommodation is considerably reduced.

New Field for Photography

Eye wonders increase with the new photography of Profs. Cohn and Bagneris. The advantages to be gained from photographing the back of the eye have been evident ever since the invention of the ophthalmoscope furnished a means of examining it. First of the difficulties to be overcome was that of illuminating the eye sufficiently to allow of a photograph being taken, but of so restricting the illumination that the appearance of the retina may not be altered by excess of light.

Some idea of the problem to be solved is gathered from the expedients used. The eye was first benumbed with cocaine and a small saucer of iodine of sodium solution was placed in front of the orbit and held there throughout the operation. The head was fastened to a support, and other contrivances to keep the head and the eye absolutely immovable having been completed, a piece of wax was placed between the teeth. It was exceedingly painful.

The results were perfect. The most striking thing about them, apart from optical difficulties, is that they show traces of disease. One of the photographs is of a normal retina. On another appear symptoms produced by chronic alcoholism; on a third a tuberculous lesion. One oculist declares that the retina of the eye is a mirror of the physical state of the body. And it is thought that similar examinations of the eye by photography would furnish a certain, rapid, and easy means of diagnosing disease.

Commercial Organizations to Consolidate

Announcement is made of the proposed consolidation of the Boston Merchants Association and the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the two leading commercial bodies of New England. This will bring together at the outset nearly 2,000 of the leading individuals, firms and corporations, representing all mercantile, manufacturing and professional interests, and should prove of great importance to all New England.

The new organization will "promote the commerce, industry and public interests of Boston and New England." The new body will be the "Boston Chamber of Commerce." The two organizations have long held a prominent place in the business affairs of the Eastern States, and their influence has been felt in shaping measures of city, state and national interest. The Chamber of Commerce was organized in 1885. It has an individual membership of 1,000, made up of the principal banking and shipping houses. The Merchants Association was founded in 1876, and is a body of over 1,500 individuals, representing all the professional, mercantile and manufacturing interests of Greater Boston, organized for the special purpose of working for business and municipal development. Early last year the movement for more united and effective action received great impetus and a fund of $100,000 was raised to enable it to broaden its work. The association was reorganized, with James J. Storrow, the banker, as its president, and Ryerson Ritchie as executive director. The Associated Board of Trade, an organization made up of twenty or more trade associations, is also included in the merger. It will go out of existence and throw its influence with the new association. Following this, efforts were made to still further concentrate, and with such success that Boston and New England will now have one great central organization, with all of its forces working as a unit. The reorganization plan will be voted on by the two bodies soon and will undoubtedly meet with the heartiest endorsement.

The Silver Situation

There is belief that the turn in the silver market has taken place. India, Mexico and the United States are now buying silver, and Germany and France will soon be compelled to enter the market. The result has already been an advance of several cents per ounce from the low point to 49¾ cents.

One who has the marketing of a vast amount of silver annually, says:

"While it may be true that the recent low prices for the white metal was caused in part by the liquidation by the American Smelting & Refining interests, the facts are that the silver situation is made or unmade in London. There have been two big speculative accounts there, one, the bull account which was credited with holding 15,000,000 ounces of silver; and a bear account, credited with 20,000,000 ounces, the latter representing prominent professional traders in the metal who have been bearish for a year or more. The bull account was forced to liquidate, which was responsible for the big decline."

Canadian Money Gains

Canadians are accumulating money faster than the banks and business men can dispose of it in profitable investments, declares Consul Seyfort, commenting on a remarkable condition in Canada's financial affairs, as reflected in the October bank statement issued from Ottawa. Bank deposits in Canada during October increased to $11,362,879, while the business of the country absorbed in current and call loans only $3,322,014.

The several million dollars in increase in bank deposits is due to the fact that the people of the rural districts have plenty of money. A favorable condition is also the early movement of the crops, for which the farmers were paid promptly.

German Empire in Banking Business

Berlin, January 10.—The German Empire went into the banking business on an enormous scale on the first of the year, when the new postoffice check system came into force. For the present thirteen special check post-offices are established—nine in Prussia, Saxony and Baden, three in Bavaria and one in Wurtemberg. Any one who maintains a minimum balance of $25 can open an account and issue checks similar to ordinary bank checks. The banks do not oppose the government's going into business as a deposit and checking bank, because they think it will help to popularize the use of bank checks on such a scale as exists in other up-to-date countries.

The Mankato Savings Bank

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Mankato Savings Bank of Mankato, Minn., held recently, the following officers were re-elected: L. G. M. Fletcher, president; George E. Brett, vice-president; W. W. Davis, secretary and treasurer.

The following committee was appointed to make the usual annual examination of the bank: Benjamin Taylor, George E. Brett, David E. Evans, Charles A. Chapman. A dividend of 4 per cent per annum was declared to depositors for the past six months.

National Bank of Mexico

Paris, January 11.—An important and interesting case bearing on founders' rights is engaging the attention of the Civil Tribunal of Paris. According to Article 62 of the statutes of the National Bank of Mexico the holders of founders' certificates (parts de fondateur) are entitled to 15 per cent of the net profits after certain payments have been made. In 1905, however, when the capital of the bank was increased from 20,000,000 francs to 26,000,000 francs, it was decided that the 15 per cent should be calculated on such proportion of the profits as is represented by the ratio between the original and the enlarged capital.

It is of this provision that a number of the holders of founders' certificates are complaining. They contend that the resolution of 1905 is incompatible with the resolution of the previous year providing for the calculation of the founders' percentage on all the profits, and they affirm that they purchased their founders' certificates on the strength of that provision and before the meeting of 1905, under the belief that the bank would maintain its methods of distributing its profits in the future. As their holdings have depreciated in consequence of the directors' action they ask that the company be ordered to repurchase their certificates at the price they paid for them.

More Small Bills Needed

At present a national bank is allowed to have but one-third of its circulation in $5 bills. It was suggested that this limit be increased to 50 per cent. That would help some, but not much.

Senator Teller, a member of the commission, was in attendance at the conference, and there was considerable informal talk. Possibly Senator Teller wishes to revive the silver question.

The commission was impressed with the idea that more small bills should be available, because every banker in attendance at the meeting was of the same opinion. The commission may work out some recommendation, but I feel sure no pretentious step such as Senator Teller's letter to Moreton Frewen would indicate has been taken.

Watching Over the Bank of France

The Bank of France, like the Bank of England, is guarded with the greatest care. Watchmen patrol its roof day and night, and at night the guards take it in turn to sleep upon the roof. The roof itself is divided into sections by means of stout iron railings, and each section is separately patrolled. Most of the guardians are ex-firemen.

The Cedar Rapids National

One of the very best years in the history of the Cedar Rapids National of Cedar Rapids, Ia., was reported at the annual meeting. The showing made was one in which the stockholders took much satisfaction. Kent C. Ferman, the cashier, and his associates in the management of the bank are to be sincerely congratulated upon the excellent work they have done during the past year.

The old officers and directors were re-elected and Martin Newcomer was elected to the office of assistant cashier, a promotion of which he was eminently worthy. The officers of the bank are: President, A. T. Averill; vice-president, G. F. Van Vechten; vice-president, Ralph Van Vechten; cashier, Kent C. Ferman; assistant cashier, Louis Visha; assistant cashier, Martin Newcomer; auditor, A. R. Smouse.

There was a general discussion as to the building plans for the future and it was the general opinion that three or four more stories shall be added to the building. This matter will come up later, probably at an early date.

C. H. Ayers

The directors of the Peoples State Bank of Detroit, at a meeting this week appointed Charles H. Ayers assistant cashier, and he will assume the position February 1st. Mr. Ayers was formerly paying teller of the old Preston National before it went into liquidation, and resigned to engage in the commission business with his father, L. H. Ayers. Since April 1, 1906, he has been one of the state bank examiners under Commissioner H. M. Zimmermann, who has commended his work in that department for unusual efficiency. Mr. Ayers is a prominent mason and a past high priest of King Cyrus Chapter.

May Meet at Detroit

The A. B. A. council is taking a vote on the meeting place for the mid-year meeting, with many ballots being cast for Detroit. These meetings formerly lasted about one hour at the Lawyers' Club in New York, but at the Hot Springs and Lakewood meetings several days of actual and profitable work were done. A well known New York banker, familiar with the headquarters of the A. B. A. at Eleven Pine Street, said last week "There easily is fifty times the work done there now than formerly. This is not exaggeration, but actual," he concluded emphatically.

E. M. Lacey

Edward M. Lacey, son of President Lacey of the Bankers National, of this city, has been elected an assistant cashier of that institution. All the old officers have been re-elected.

His judgment of men is not the least of D. R. Forgan's many accomplishments. In starting the successful National City Bank in Chicago, he selected young men, but did not give them high sounding titles until they had won their spurs. At the annual meeting Mr. Otte was elected a vice-president and Mr. Grimme became cashier. Both young men had worked in former positions in the Union National and First National under Mr. Forgan's observation, and his judgment of their abilities has been certified by actual results. They have been active in association and group matters in Illinois, and have attended state and national meetings of bankers.

Chicago Clearing House Election

The Chicago Clearing House Association re-elected the incumbent officers and committee. With rare exceptions the president holds office for two years. Joseph T. Talbert having served one year only was rechosen Tuesday.

The other officers are: vice-president, H. A. Haugan; clearing house committee, J. B. Forgan, chairman; John J. Mitchell, Orson Smith, Ernest Hamill, George M. Reynolds; manager, W. D. C. Street.

Remonstrances against the passage of the bill now pending in Congress for the establishment of a postal savings system was contained in a series of resolutions adopted by the clearing house association of Chicago.

The resolutions urge that no legislation affecting currency be undertaken until after the report of this commission is made.

"It has been a recognized weakness of our financial system," declares the resolutions, "that it is not a consistent whole, but a patchwork of independent pieces of legislation adopted under changing conditions. There seems now an opportunity to secure a comprehensive and harmonious system, and all features of the banking and currency problem should, for the time being, be left with this commission for treatment.

"The savings deposits of the country are a much larger factor in the banking situation than any official statistics indicate, and any displacement of them, involving their withdrawal from present channels of investment, should not be contemplated without due regard to its effect on general business."

American Trust Election

Directors of the American Trust and Savings Bank of this city met Monday and re-elected the following officers: president, E. A. Potter; vice-presidents, T. P. Phillips, J. R. Chapman, John J. Abbott; cashier, Charles S. Castle; assistant cashiers, Oliver C. Decker, Wilson W. Lampert; secretary, Frank H. Jones; assistant secretary, William P. Topf.

Illinois State Resources

The Illinois state auditor's report gives the total resources as $11,114,653, including $3,354,439 in the treasury on October 1st, $1,545,214 received subsequently; taxes for 1908 were $4,980,000; receipts from the Illinois Central to July 1, 1909, $560,000. The probable balance of unappropriated revenue on the latter date will be $4,258,076. The auditor regards $3,000,000 as a reasonable working balance.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

RUDOLPH KLEYBOLTE has been vindicated and again is in charge of the firm of R. Kleybolte and Company, with its many branches. The trustees have returned all properties of the firm to his keeping.

ANDREW RUSSEL, the new state treasurer, is a Scotchman, has no initial "J." in the middle and, but one "I" on the end of his name. Chicago newspapers, which take it for granted that he is anything different, please take notice.

AS state treasurer Mr. Russel will see that the funds draw interest, and that it is credited up to the state. He is a banker of the first order, and a high class man in every respect.

FROM reading the Kansas City daily papers, one can infer that the supply of natural gas to consumers doesn't give any better general satisfaction than did a certain Mr. Ridgely as former head of one of their banks. Maybe they're hard to please?

GUARANTY of bank deposits laws are coming fast in the Kansas legislature. They must be growing on the trees.

THE first to be introduced at this session was presented to the house by E. H. Johnson of Atchison County. This is the Balie Waggener bill and provides for a tax of one-tenth of a mill each year until a fund of two and one-half million dollars is created. This money is paid directly to the state treasurer and is paid out when a bank fails, under the direction of the bank commissioner, attorney-general and state treasurer. When the state pays the depositors of a failed bank it takes over all of the assets and collects these to reimburse the fund.

ISAAC CRUMLEY, representative from Thomas County, will introduce a bill providing for the assessment of the banks for the guaranty fund, but instead of paying this money into the state treasury the money remains with the banks, which pay interest on the deposit. When money is needed to pay depositors of a failed bank the bank commissioner calls on the banks for a certain proportion of the money needed to pay the depositors.

H. P. KREHBILL of Harvey County has a bill providing for the organization of a mutual association of banks to guarantee deposits. This bill provides for double examinations of banks by the Bankers Association and bank examiner, and the guaranty fund is directed by the bankers and the bank commissioner. George E. Rogers of Sedgwick will introduce the Democratic guaranty bill providing for compulsory guaranty by all bankers. It will be similar to the Senator Quincy bill introduced two years ago.

ALTOGETHER the banking situation in Kansas is on top of the heap. Illinois should not be so bashful. While we do not require guaranty laws in this state, the banking law should protect the words "bank" and "trust" and supervise all private as well as chartered state banks.

THE presidents of the Illinois bankers Association, eleven of them, held their first annual dinner at the Union League Club on Thursday evening of last week, and it is likely that the event will become a fixture hereafter. Nelson H. Greene, of Moline, was the proposer and advocate and all present approved of the plan to have the ex-presidents, ex-secretaries and acting officials meet once a year as a dinner club.

J. H. INGWERSEN and C. F. Alden, president and vice-president of the Peoples Trust, Clinton, Iowa, spent two days of last week in Chicago, hunting up high-grade commercial paper. "My, but rates are down," was his only comment, but it was eloquent as to the money situation.

W. T. BRUCKNER, at present an assistant cashier at the Commercial National Bank, Chicago, has been made assistant to the vice-presidents. Mr. Bruckner is of the "live wire" type. He is treasurer of the Hamilton Club, president of the State Bank of Cicero, and a director in the Lake View Trust Company, in Mr. Otte's field. Mr. Bruckner has been convention man for the Commercial National, in which line he was productive.

A NEW automatic shot gun and a three weeks' vacation, coming on the heels of a first-class annual report, ought to make any man feel good. These are the conditions under which R. T. Forbes of the Drovers left to visit his mother, and help celebrate her eightieth birthday, and that in a country where feathered game is thick. President Forbes was "high gun" at the South Shore traps, in the annual handicap, but targets with feathers on them is his specialty.

THE Record Herald and one other Chicago paper gave the street a shock in announcing the Commercial National election, with Ralph Van Vechten as first vice-president and never a mention of Joseph T. Talbert. It wouldn't have been so bad if they had left out the name of the bank, too.

CHARLES B. MILLS has been doing missionary work "up Northwest" so much lately that from force of habit he uses the vernacular of the lumber camps inadvertently. In a letter to a Chicago friend, describing a meeting of the Northern Lumber Company and marked personal, he wrote: "Aby pozbawic zycia przywódców górniczych, spiskowcy nie wahlili sie pogwalcic prawa stanowe i zwiazkowa (federaina) konstytucje do tego stopnia, jak to sie nie spotykalo dotad, nawet w tak zupełnie opanowanym przez kapitalistów kraju, jakim sa Stany Zjednoczone," which would be all right if sent to Orde or Chapman, who speak the language fluently.

IF you will read the Group One, Wisconsin program for the Eau Claire meeting, January 20th, and then hark back to the Bloomington episode, you will have the two extremes of how to and how not to do it. Think it over!

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM RODENBERG of East St. Louis has written to advise Mr. Taft that the West would be well pleased and well served by the appointment of Charles G. Dawes of Chicago to the treasury portfolio. Mr. Taft promptly announced that he will consider Mr. Dawes when the matter comes up later.

IN A. Barton Hepburn, L.L. D., D. C. L., etc., author of "Artificial Waterways and Commercial Development," published by the Macmillan Company, bankers will recognize an old friend. Mr. Hepburn has been a student of commerce and commercial development, so inseparably linked with banking, and his valuable essay should be added to every bank or private library where such subjects are of interest.

GEORGE F. ORDE is having his picture appear in the pink sheets of the Northern Metropolis, owing to his prowess at curling. Orde is a past-master at the sport, and many believe he left Chicago for Minneapolis chiefly to get where the ice season is longer and more certain. He is said to have used up his last three summer vacations practicing on a big Canadian glacier.

YESTERDAY, Friday, John M. Glenn of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, managed a luncheon at the Annex, at which members and guests heard talks on trade possibilities in the South American republics, and on the need of a merchant marine. These meetings are ideal. The members get through at no loss of time and they like the plan.

A newcomer in the "Banker" field is the "Central Banker" at Cincinnati, a very handsome publication in its third issue, the 16th. Ohio now has a complete circuit, there being "Finance" at Cleveland, the "Ohio Banker" at Columbus, and the "Central Banker" at Cincinnati. The prosperity of the Ohio banks and her three banking newspapers is the wish of everyone.

INDIANA will be the first of the nearby states to engage in legislative debate upon a guaranty of deposits' bill. A senator for that state already has set the ball rolling. It looks as if bankers in several other states also will have to divide their time between postal bank legislation at Washington and guaranty threatenings at home.

Counting the National Currency

The sheets of paper on which bills and bonds are printed are delivered daily by the loans and currency division of the secretary's office to the bureau upon requisition. From the time the blank sheets are delivered by careful count until thirty days later, when the printed bills are sent to the treasury to have the seal printed thereon, the bureau must account for every sheet in its hands. It is counted when received, it is counted when wet, when printed on one side, when dried, when wet again, when printed again, when dried a second time, when examined for imperfections, when numbered—in short, counted some fifty times before it finally escapes from the bureau. It has become accustomed to be counted before it starts out into the world as money, and then continues to be counted until returned, ragged, dirty and worn out—counted to death—only to be again counted and destroyed.

The Hackley State Bank

George Phillip, R. L. Tracey, M. L. Johnson, C. M. Bickham, H. D. Bickham, S. S. Thomas, W. H. Thomas, Chas. Thomas, and W. E. Bickham have been elected directors of the Hackley, La., State Bank. W. E. Bickham was chosen president; Chas. Thomas, vice-president; B. O. Bickham, cashier and H. D. Bickham, manager.

The Union and Farmers Bank

W. C. Trest has been elected president; W. E. Ramsey, vice-president, and H. H. Mitchell, cashier of the new Union and Farmers Bank of Sandersville, Miss. The institution will begin business about February 1st.

CHICAGO, JANUARY 23, 1909

Best of All State Banking Laws

At the present time, when new bank legislation is being sought in so many states and the situation in Illinois isn't entirely hopeless, a review of the New York State banking law by Superintendent of Banks Clark Williams, will be of deep interest. In his annual report, filed at Albany last week, Mr. Williams, himself an able banker, says:

The panic of 1907 so emphasized the need of remedial legislation affecting the powers conferred and the restrictions imposed upon institutions under the supervision of the banking department that the Governor appointed a commission of bankers to consider the subject in general and to report its recommendations.

The superintendent of banks participated in the deliberations of this commission. Its recommendations were for the most part the basis of legislation.

Twenty bills which were drawn in the department and introduced as committee measures became law. No less than one hundred and fifty measures affecting banking institutions were scrutinized by the superintendent or his deputies. To the credit of our legislative system it may be noted that of this vast volume of proposed statutes, no measure which might appropriately be termed "panic legislation" received the approval of the banking committees.

Public hearings were held on many of these measures, and intelligent, open-minded consideration always given to all objections made by affected interests to the form and substance of bills.

The remedial legislation was so thorough and far-reaching that, taken with the acts already on our statute books, we have the most perfect body of banking laws of any state in the Union. Although minor faults may become apparent through their continued operation, it would seem wise to test thoroughly their provisions before contemplating radical amendment. I therefore recommend that banking legislation at the present session of your honorable body be held at a minimum. I believe that a strict observance of existing laws, coupled with reasonable business judgment under intelligent and helpful supervision, will absolutely prevent failure, and will render our state institutions generally stronger than those of any other existing system, state or Federal.

There are several subjects, however, to which I should direct your attention.

A knowledge of the general conditions throughout the state compels the conclusion that a great offense to economic principles and sound banking lies in the tendency to pay high interest rates to depositors. Where such rates obtain, the legitimate borrower pays more for his accommodation, and a natural tendency to seek a larger return from less secure investments follows.

This evil is the result of improper competition between the different classes of our financial institutions, and is by no means limited to the smaller banks and trust companies. We find this criticisable practice followed by some of the larger institutions of the state.

It is inexpedient in my judgment to attempt to regulate the rate of interest to be paid on deposits. But this consideration of competition resulting in the payment of high interest rates suggests an additional reason for a statute prohibiting the payment of interest on balances of less than specified amounts fixed according to local requirements, except by the savings banks.

The events of the past year have already demonstrated the importance of association of the banking power of New York City. It is to be regretted that up to the present time nearly one-half of this banking power is still represented by institutions outside the New York Clearing House Association. Whatever be the reason for this condition, it must be admitted that in the past the policy of the Clearing House, though amounting to practical exclusion, was justified. But the legislation enacted last year in reference to state banking institutions, providing for reserves and limitations and restrictions on the character of business permitted, would seem to have removed all reasonable objections to the admission of any worthy state institution within the metropolitan district.

No supervision over banking institutions can be more effective than that exercised by a committee of members of a voluntary association. Therefore, I believe that proper restraint and discipline through such an organization would produce respect for the regulations of the association and an adherence to the principles of sound banking. It should be pointed out that the present system by which one institution clears for another, as its clearing house agent, may at times involve serious dangers for both—dangers which would be eliminated if one association comprised all worthy institutions.

It may be that some members of the New York Clearing House Association regard that membership so jealously as to lead them to exclude others worthy of membership from its prerogatives, even though thereby sacrificing the public good. If this is the fact and is a bar to a representation of the banking power of Greater New York in one association, the formation of another association should receive the earnest consideration of the non-member banks and trust companies.

During the year a large part of the superintendent's time has been devoted to the relief of conditions resulting from the heavy liquidation necessitated in meeting depositors' demands during the fall of 1907. Thorough house-cleaning and at the same time extreme forbearance have been necessary in many cases, of which it would be manifestly improper to make specific mention. The result is that no such institution has been lost to the community it was intended to serve, while a number have been permanently strengthened not only in monetary position, but in character of management.

It has seemed most important that a proper relation should exist between the department and the institutions under its supervision. The banking department should not become a criticising machine. It should be a responsive, helpful agency, co-operating with the institutions under its supervision for their absolute safety and efficiency of service to the public. The superintendent and his deputies have addressed themselves to the establishment and maintenance of this attitude, and in the official correspondence of the department based on examiners' reports, if conditions have justified the expression of commendation it has been given. On the other hand, if conditions have been found to be such as to warrant criticism, it has not been withheld.

A feature of great value to the department and to the banks and trust companies under its supervision has been the establishment of a system of credits. On the occasion of each semiannual examination by this department, it is the duty of the examiner to take off from the books of the bank or trust company a list of all loans in excess of certain amounts. These reports of all borrowings of corporations, firms and individuals are sent to the New York office of the department. There proper entry is made on cards of the names of the borrowers, by which the cards are indexed, and of the names of the institutions making the loans, and of the amounts of indebtedness, and whether secured or unsecured. Excessive borrowing is thus revealed, and an opportunity afforded to the superintendent to be helpful to the lending institutions in preventing loss. Moreover, when a failure occurs the department is enabled at once to know what institutions are affected and to what extent.

It has been the custom of some of our most conservative institutions to conceal a considerable percentage of their assets with the purpose of establishing a fund against which unusual losses might be charged. This could probably be considered conservative practice in the case of the private banker. The statutes, however, clearly contemplate that due publicity shall be given to the true condition of the corporations under state supervision, and an injustice may be done to the public and to the stockholders through a disregard of this requirement. Concealed assets are clearly as inconsistent as concealed liabilities in a statement of true condition, and though the department approves of a conservative valuation of assets, it is insistent that large funds accumulated out of earnings or otherwise be shown as such.

The contribution of the past year to the history of banking in this state may be summarized as follows:

The panic, the suspensions, the remedial legislation, the material increase in reserves, the increasing appreciation of trusteeship, the growing conservatism and the complete return of public confidence. These factors, together with the reorganization of the department, have contributed to place the general banking system of the state of New York upon a basis of which your honorable body may be justly proud.

In the attainment of this result the officers of the institutions under our supervision have largely contributed through their helpful co-operation and I desire to express publicly my sincere appreciation of their efforts and assistance.

I take this opportunity to make public acknowledgment of the loyal support given me by the deputies, and of the hearty interest manifested in the work of the department and the faithful service rendered by each member of the staff.

North West State Bank

The 103 subscribers to the stock of the North West State Bank of this city, which is soon to continue the business of the North West Savings Bank, Milwaukee and North Avenues, have held their organization meeting and elected the following directors: Henry B. Berentson, James Davis, Otto J. Hartwig, Gus G. Martin, Charles H. Menzel, William New, Joseph R. Noel, Peter J. Orbesen, Adolph C. Slevens, Martin Weick, and Charles A. Zahn. The directors elected the following officers: President, Joseph R. Noel; vice-president, Henry B. Berentson; cashier, Albert S. Boos; assistant cashier, Frank W. Hausmann; chairman of the board, Otto J. Hartwig.

S. D. Waite is the new president of the Grant County State Bank of Upland, Ind.

This Bank has been in continuous existence since 1810—nearly one hundred years. It has always given effective service to its clients and has never failed in their protection. Conservatively managed banks and persons having business in Pittsburgh are cordially invited to open accounts.

Has Two Million Dollar Homes

Spokane now has two $1,000,000 banking houses. They are the Exchange National, headed by Edwin T. Coman, and the Old National of which D. W. Twohy is president. The Traders' National, of which Aaron Kuhn is president, also increased its surplus to $250,000, leaving its capital $600,000. This was made by converting $130,000 undivided profits and adding it to the $120,000 surplus on hand. The Exchange National, which had $750,000 capital and $500,000 surplus, converted $250,000 surplus into capital, declaring a stock dividend of 33 1/3 per cent. E. T. Coman was re-elected president and Thomas H. Brewer was chosen first vice-president. William Huntley was elected second vice-president. M. W. Lewer was elected assistant cashier. The board of directors was increased by three: Ex-Governor Miles C. Moore of Walla Walla, Albert Held and F. M. Rothrock. Ex-Governor Moore is president of the Baker-Boyer National of Walla Walla. F. M. Rothrock is one of the owners of the Hercules mine. There are ten millionaires among the 106 stockholders. The Old National increased its capital partly out of its surplus, partly out of other resources and in part by subscription. A good share of this was made by Patrick Welch and Porter Brothers of Porter Brothers & Welch, railroad contractors. J. D. Porter became a member of the directorate to represent the new interest in the bank. No other changes were made in the directors or officials. John Twohy was elected to fill the vacancy left by the death of the late James C. Twohy. The bank also ratified the action of the directors in selling the marble bank building and the adjacent Crescent store property, to the Union Trust Company for $200,000, and the purchase of the Union Trust Company property at Riverside Avenue and Stevens Street for $300,000.

The Hempstead County Bank

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Hempstead County Bank, of Hope, Ark., held in their board room Tuesday, K. G. McRae was elected vice-president. The new office of assistant cashier having been created at a stockholders' meeting of the bank, by amendment to the by-laws, T. B. Roebuck was elected by the board to this office. At the same meeting of the board their usual 5 per cent cash dividend was declared.

The Royal Bank of Canada

The Royal Bank of Canada, for the year ended December 31st, showed net profits of $746,775, or at the rate of 19.12 per cent on the bank's capital of $3,900,000.

Deposits totaled $37,443,441, an increase of over $4,200,000.

The immediately liquid assets stood at $21,944,440, equal to 52.63 per cent of the total liabilities to the public.

First State Bank of Battle Lake

W. L. Winslow has been elected president of the new First State Bank of Battle Lake, Minn.

H. B. Wilcox

Col. Henry B. Wilcox assumed the presidency of the First National of Baltimore, succeeding

HENRY B. WILCOX
Baltimore, Maryland
First National

Major J. D. Ferguson, who resigned on Wednesday.

William S. Hammond, now assistant cashier of the bank, takes Colonel Wilcox's place as cashier, and Samuel W. Tschudi becomes assistant cashier. Joseph R. Foard continues as first vice-president. The position of second vice-president, which Colonel Wilcox also filled in addition to being cashier, will not be supplied. Col. Wilcox, the new president, has spent his whole business life in the local banking field. He said his election to the position is the realization of a youthful ambition. He started as a runner for the First National in 1881, after leaving the Baltimore City College. Two years later he accepted a clerkship in the Farmers and Merchants Bank, offered him by the late James Sloan. He remained with this bank 10 years, and was general bookkeeper when invited to become cashier of the old Equitable National. While in this position he aided materially in the deal by which the Equitable absorbed the First National, and then became cashier and vice-president of the merged institutions.

Unclaimed Savings Deposits

In a decision handed down by the full bench of the Supreme Court, all unclaimed deposits in Massachusetts savings banks for which no pass books have been presented for thirty years and for which no claim has been made by depositors must be turned over to the commonwealth. It is estimated that the state will receive over $1,000,000 of such deposits. The case in question is that of Attorney-General Malone against the Provident Institution for savings of Boston, which institution has over $100,000 of such moneys.

New Members W. B. A.

The following banks have become members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association since the last convention: Farmers & Merchants Bank, Menomonee Falls; Farmers Exchange Bank, Neshkoro; First National, Wautoma; De Soto State Bank, De Soto; German American National, Shawano; State Bank of Centuria, Centuria; Park Falls State Bank, Park Falls; Citizens State Bank, Cadott; Farmers Bank, Browntown; International Bank, Cambridge; Farmers Exchange Bank, Green Bay; Commercial National, Madison; Farmers and Merchants Bank, Chetek.

The Citizens State Bank

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Citizens State Bank, Mabton, Washington, the following directors were elected: C. B. Alexander, A. L. Arneson, James Henderson, J. D. Farmer, and T. S. Phillips. No change was made in the official staff. The capital stock is fifteen thousand dollars, and the deposits, at the end of the first month's business, are eight thousand six hundred.

New Trust Company for New Bedford

The Bank of Joiner

The Bank of Joiner, Ark., has filed articles of organization, with a capital of $10,000. S. Ralph is the president.

A Lincoln Reminder

The Columbian Bank Note Company, 84 Market Street, Chicago, have sent us one of their Lincoln Centennial letter heads, with the head of the Emancipator embossed thereon without color. We understand that this is a replica of the bronze bust by Pickett, copyrighted by L. G. Muller, the Assistant Secretary of the Company. It certainly is a work of art, and we suggest the adoption of this idea by banks and commercial houses for the purpose of increasing the interest of the people in the coming celebration.

W. T. Fenton

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, of this city, sails this week for Europe on a vacation trip of about six weeks.

Idle Gold

With nearly one million dollars in gold idle in vaults in the different Peoria, Illinois, banks, the bankers are worried as to how to get rid of it and obtain paper in its place. The situation has become so serious that a meeting of the Clearing House Association was held several days ago to devise means to get the gold out of the city, but so far it has not been done. At that meeting one bank alone reported to the association that it had more than $200,000 in gold in its vaults.

Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company

In their statement of condition at the opening of business January 1, 1909, the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Moline, Ill., show total resources of $2,429,232. The deposits are $2,125,768. The capital and surplus amount to $285,000.

Chicago Savings Deposits

The savings deposits in Chicago banks have increased $6,000,000 since December 1st, making total deposits of $156,000,000. The highest savings deposits were $162,000,000, August 20, 1907, and the lowest $144,000,000, on May 12th last.

Representative William Rodenberg of East St. Louis, Ill., has written a letter to William H.

WILLIAM T. BRUCKNER
Chicago
Assistant to the Vice-Presidents, Commercial National

Taft, urging him to appoint Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, formerly comptroller, secretary of the treasury in the new cabinet. Mr. Rodenberg told Mr. Taft that Mr. Dawes possessed the ability to fill the office, besides having the confidence of financiers throughout the country and of all factions of republicans in Illinois. He pointed out that Mr. Dawes was a confidant of the late President McKinley and had been prominent in the republican party during the Roosevelt administration. Mr. Taft has replied that he will be glad to consider Mr. Dawes for the place when he comes to fill that post.

John J. Mitchell

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank of this city says: "The money market in the United States is shaping itself for a substantial advance. It must be considered that withdrawals of funds in large amounts, such as the government's call for $25,000,000 deposits held by national banks, and some $50,000,000 the New York trust companies are required to add to their reserves February 1st and the prospects of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 gold being sent abroad, will have a tightening effect upon the money rates. Besides, spring business and financing by the railroads should redound to the strength of the money markets."

The Union National of Cleveland, at its annual meeting last week, elected the following officers: Geo. H. Worthington, president; Lee McBride, vice-president; J. F. Harper, vice-president; E. R. Fancher, vice-president; G. A. Coulton, cashier; W. E. Ward assistant cashier; and W. C. Saunders, auditor.

Few Changes in Banks

There were few changes made in the directorates of Cincinnati national banks or those of the state banks which held their annual meetings last week. In most instances the elections were mere formalities. The principal changes took place when the stockholders of the Western German Bank held their annual election. The directors of that institution elected Fred Hertenstein president, to succeed Leopold Kleybolte; dropped George Optiz, the aged cashier, and appointed in his place Henry Hoppe, the assistant cashier, and also created a new vice-presidency to be called the second vice-presidency, which went to Adolph Dryer an active member of the board.

The Fifth-Third National

The Fifth-Third National of Cincinnati added two directors to represent the recently merged American National, they being R. B. Henley and Wm. Christie Herron. This makes the board at this bank the largest of any in the city, having 22 members. At the Merchants' National Samuel Pogue and Maurice L. Sternberger, of Jackson, Ohio, are new directors, while W. A. Julian went into the directorate of the Citizens' National to take the place of William J. Lippencott, who retired because of illness.

Ohio Treasury Shortage

A shortage of $15,536 in the treasury of Stark county was reported by the state inspectors. The report says that Treasurer C. H. Knoblock at Canton has been asked to resign.

First National of Cincinnati

Theodore Bauer, manager of the Foreign Department of the First National of Cincinnati, has sent invitations to every school principal in the city to have the school children view the eighteen-foot steel model of the White Star liner Adriatic, which is on exhibition in the First National building. The model will be on exhibition for about a month.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank

New Bank for Cincinnati

The Merchants' National

Cashier Sentenced

Va., pleaded guilty in Federal Court to the charge of misappropriating funds and returning a false report to the Comptroller of the Currency. Judge A. G. Dayton sentenced him to five years in the penitentiary. The exact amount of Morgan's defalcations probably will never be made public. Morgan collapsed on hearing his sentence.

Klamath Falls Bank Robbed

The Klamath Falls (Ore.) County Bank was robbed of $3,000 by two masked men, who entered the bank Saturday afternoon with drawn revolvers and compelled the cashier to pay over the counter all money in sight. Several citizens, who were inside the bank, were held at bay while the robbers escaped.

Indianapolis and Indiana Banking News

By CHARLES REMINGTON

The Merchants' National of Indianapolis is sending out a "Year Book," with a full blank page  $4\frac{1}{2} \times 6$  inches for each day of the year. It has calendars, too, and is a "tickler" that really tickles the fellow who gets it. This is the Frenzel bank, now engaged in the erection of a new skyscraper bank building. The only officer who isn't a Frenzel is Fahnley, which is a close call. The Merchants is rated the strongest bank in Indiana.

The Guaranty Bill in Indiana

A bill for a state bank guaranty law has been introduced in the senate. It is said to be backed both by Democrats and Republicans. It provides that the governor, secretary of state and the treasurer of state shall constitute a state banking board, and that this board shall have charge of raising and maintaining bank depositors' guaranty fund. It is provided that a guaranty fund shall be raised by levying an assessment of 1 per cent of the daily deposits for the year preceding the time the law goes into operation, less the deposits of State and United States funds. Each year the guaranty fund would be revised and if there had been a growth in the daily deposits the fund would be increased. This tax would be levied against the capital of all banks and trust companies, except that it would be optional with national banks whether they should operate under the provisions of the law.

The State Bank of Remington

The State Bank of Remington reports capital of $25,000, undivided profits $500 and deposits of $112,000. James H. Gilbert is president; J. H. Biddle, vice-president; S. G. Hand, cashier, and F. L. Longs, assistant cashier.

Indianapolis City Hall Bonds

City Controller George Breunig has sold $600,000 Indianapolis City Hall bonds at a premium of $425. The bonds went to joint bidders, namely: Miller, Adams & Co., 1021 Lemcke building, city; Breed & Harrison, Cincinnati, and E. H. Rollins & Son, Chicago.

While the sale of these bonds attracted considerable attention, there were no bidders aside from those mentioned. It is believed the bonds will find their way to the general market.

The bonds will pay  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent interest, less the amount of the premium, the interest being payable semiannually. They will run thirty years. Under the contract the first allotment of \$100,000 was taken January 15th, and the remainder at the rate of \$100,000 a month until all of the bonds have been taken. The bidders agreed to allow the city for interest on the bonds from January 15th until they are taken up. A certified check of \$15,000 accompanied the bid to bind the contract and to protect the city on interest allowances that will be due it when the last allotment is taken.

Banks will not Consolidate

A deal for the consolidation of the First National and the Corydon National, the two financial institutions of Corydon, which was said to be in process of formation, has fallen through.

Elected Assistant Cashier

Herman Graper, who was the popular and efficient deputy auditor under former Auditor Harry R. Embree, has been elected assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Ft. Branch, and will begin his new duties next week.

Appointed Reserve Agent

The Comptroller of the Currency has designated the Chase National of New York a reserve agent for the First National of Fortville.

The Depositary Law

The depositary law yielded Marion $1,715 interest during the past year.

F. N. Smith Probable Cashier

Fred N. Smith of Indianapolis was in Michigan City Saturday upon matters connected with the organization of the new national bank being organized. Mr. Smith is a banker of many years' experience in the banking business and will become officially identified with the new institution in Michigan City. He is now connected with the Union National of Indianapolis, with which he has been associated for several years in the capacity of cashier. Mr. Smith will in all probability assume the position of cashier of the new Michigan City bank. While he is still holding the position of cashier at the Union National at Indianapolis, he will be in Michigan City occasionally during the organization, and will resign his position at Indianapolis as soon as a successor can be secured for the position he will vacate there.

The total deposits owned by these people amounted to $90,659,562, while the surplus stands at $9,156,211. The number of accounts last year decreased 4,516 although 41,583 new accounts were opened, but the balance due depositors increased $1,063,607.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Germania Bank is setting the pace for bank capital increases in Minneapolis. At the annual election on January 12th an increase from $50,000 to $100,000 was authorized. It is now announced that in the near future another increase from $100,000 to $200,000, or even more, is to be made. The directorate will be enlarged from seven to eleven, or perhaps fifteen members. The stock will be disposed of in such a way that it will attract the Scandinavian as well as the German business element in the city. New stock will be sold at $125 a share. The premium will constitute the surplus. In the first increase a stock dividend of 60 per cent was made. It is possible that the bank may nationalize. A change of location is to be made about May 1st.

Bank Clearings in Minneapolis

Bank clearings in Minneapolis are estimated as reduced from $500,000 to $600,000 a day by the retirement of the two clearing house banks since July 1st. Although the city remains in the billion clearing class it shows smaller clearings for 1908 than for 1907. The record is considered fine, however, as the loss was not so large as the general diminution in business promised.

Group Secretaries' Meeting

Secretaries of the eight bankers group associations of Minnesota have held their first meeting with secretary C. R. Frost of the state association in Minneapolis. The purpose was to line up the programs for the pre-convention meetings in the spring and early summer. This insures better selection of topics for discussion, less conflict of dates and speakers, etc. Joseph Chapman, Jr., president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, addressed the bankers, complimenting them on the individual work of the groups. Those present were: George Pfferkorn, Citizen's State, St. Charles; O. W. Hagen, State of Sleepy Eye; R. W. Putnam, Pierce, Simmons & Company, Red Wing; George F. Orde, First National, Minneapolis; F. W. Sprague, First National, Sauk Center; F. R. Putnam, Morris National; J. H. McGilvera, Milaca State; C. A. Baker, State of Ogema.

Another Chapter Man Promoted

Robert Lyman Grant, formerly of the First National of Minneapolis, and a leading chapter worker, has been elected assistant cashier of the Baker-Boyer National at Walla Walla, Wash.

A Full-fledged American

Harry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants' National of St. Paul, is now a full-fledged American. Not that he has not always been an American, but he has not been a United States citizen. Like his brother, Sir Gilbert Parker, he knew Canada first. Mr. Parker has been granted his citizenship in the federal court by Judge Milton D. Purdy.

New Ruling

Banks that are not members of the Interstate Protective Association and of the Minnesota Bankers Association, in the case they are Minnesota banks, will not have the protection afforded by these organizations. The directors have ruled that the work of the organizations is for the benefit of those who pay for it by contributing annual dues, and not for others. The protective association is anti-yegg.

The First State Bank of Hetland

The First State Bank of Hetland, S. D., has been incorporated by Henry Rauch, Martha Rauch, and E. J. Walby. The capital is $10,000.

To Increase Capital Stock

The Citizens State Bank of Houston, Minn., will increase its capital to $25,000.

Elected Vice-President of the First National

William Frost has been elected vice-president of the First National of Pipestone, Minn. He is succeeded as cashier by A. C. Walker, assistant cashier. W. T. Morgan was elected assistant cashier. President W. C. Briggs was re-elected.

Officers Elected by Swedish American National

Officers have been elected by the Swedish American National, which is in process of liquidation. The board of directors was cut to nine members, the minimum, and is as follows: N. O. Werner, A. V. Ostrom, C. F. Plummer, C. A. Smith, C. J. Johnson, E. L. Mattson, C. S. Hulbert, C. M. Amsden, C. Grimsrud. Some of these are new. N. O. Werner was re-elected president, and E. L. Mattson, cashier. C. S. Hulbert was re-elected vice-president, and A. V. Ostrom, assistant cashier. J. A. Latta retired by request. He is vice-president of the Northwestern National.

Will Follow Advice of Allen

George E. Allen, educational director for the American Institute of Banking, in his address last week to the Minneapolis chapter men gave them a hunch which they will follow. He suggested that they drop the heavy course lecture work for the year. The clerks will follow instructions and have a good time the rest of the year, listening to lectures by leading bankers, instead of studying hard for quizzes. Mr. Allen said the clerks had had such a strenuous time because of the bank consolidations that they should have a less active winter season.

Elected Directors of Capital National

Reuben Warner and James Lynn Mitchell have been elected directors of the Capital National to fill vacancies. D. S. Culver was made vice-president of the National German American. H. Von Der Weyer was elected cashier to succeed Mr. Culver. Gustav C. Zenzius and M. Roy Knauff are the assistant cashiers. Frank March and Charles H. March of Litchfield, Minn., were added to the directory of the American National. Hayden S. Cole was elected director at the First National, St. Paul. W. A. Miller, new vice-president of the First National, was assistant cashier for fifteen years and cashier for thirteen.

Five Past Presidents Speak

At his meeting with the St. Paul bank clerks last week George E. Allen, the institute educational director, illustrated the difficulty of providing an educational course that would fit all members alike, by saying that there are 9,600 members all with different ideas. He discouraged the postal savings and deposit guaranty schemes. Five past presidents of the chapter made addresses: O. M. Nelson, assistant cashier First National; G. M. P. Pridham, Second National; G. W. Ekstrand, Merchants National; W. H. Schulze, First National; E. W. Finck, now in business.

E. A. Potter

Augusta, Ga., January 18.—A new possibility for the secretaryship of the treasury loomed up to-day in the name of Edwin A. Potter, president of the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

Many influential Republicans of that city are urging his qualifications for that departmental post, though Mr. Potter personally has taken no action, and despite the fact that surface indications continue to point to Myron T. Herrick, formerly Governor of Ohio, as the probable ultimate choice.

Reports as to the activity of Mr. Potter's friends assumed importance to-day through the extended conference which John C. Shaffer of Chicago had with Mr. Taft. The latter stated this evening that he asked Mr. Shaffer here in order to talk over with him the qualifications of a number of men of Illinois, Indiana and adjacent states.

Michigan Banking News

The National Bank of Commerce of Detroit has issued a statement to stockholders showing in figures what the bank has accomplished during the 19 months of its existence ending January 1st. The statement says in part:

"The year 1908, following the acute money panic of the preceding year, has, with few exceptions, been a period of depression in almost every line of business. A low rate of interest for loans has been the rule, on account of lack of demand for money in the business world—consequently the year has been a comparatively lean one for banks, due to the large accumulation of surplus reserves in their vaults, which they could not loan.

"The National Bank of Commerce has earned for the year over $70,000 net, and after paying for its stockholders the city, state and county taxes, charging off $1,487 on its furniture and fixture account (nearly 50 per cent of the cost), also $3,032 on account of premiums on government bonds, and all bad and doubtful paper, is able to show at the present time net undivided profits of $52,298.72. The outlook for 1909 is exceedingly bright for the bank and the directors and officers anticipate that within a short time dividends will be paid to the stockholders."

The Greenland Bank

Ernest K. Matlock has resigned as cashier of the Greenland Bank to accept a position with the State Savings Bank of Lansing.

Annual Meetings

State and national banks at Detroit held their annual stockholders' meetings Tuesday, in conformity with the statutes, and a canvass of the banks indicates that there were very few changes in boards of directors.

The Detroit Board of Commerce

The Detroit Board of Commerce has issued a bulletin containing a compilation of the monthly statements of exports from the Detroit district, as forwarded to Washington by Collector John B. Whelan. The aggregate for the year is $34,172,161, the falling off being relatively lower than any other large port on the great lakes. Although during nine of the twelve months the exports were less than in 1907, the tide seems to have turned, as the figures for December were 28 per cent higher than in the same month in the previous year.

Burletson Arraigned on New Charge

W. H. Burletson, former cashier of the Parma Bank, who is in jail at Jackson, was arraigned on a new complaint before Justice Russell and on his demand for an examination the hearing was set for Tuesday. The bail was fixed at $8,000, the same as on the former charge.

The new complaint filed by Bank Commissioner Zimmerman, contains ten counts, five alleging false reports to the state banking department and five alleging false entries in the books of the bank. The complaint covers 22 pages of typewritten paper.

Appropriate Resolutions Passed

The life insurance policies of the late Henry C. Potter, Jr., vice-president of the Peoples State Bank of Detroit, continue to grow, as the search of his papers and effects progresses. Monday, the day he took his own life, it was estimated that he carried $50,000 worth. Now the total has reached nearly $150,000, and one of his close friends declares that the total will run up to nearly $300,000, which has caused considerable surprise to his business associates. It is also said that they were all taken out long enough ago so that every dollar's worth is operative. With this large sum of life insurance, the value of the estate is raised to about $600,000. Between $50,000 and $90,000 go to the wife and children and the remainder to the estate.

The executive committee of the Board of Commerce and the Wholesalers' Association each passed appropriate resolutions on Mr. Potter's untimely death, commending him as an exemplary citizen, and as an able banker.

Shortage to be Made Good

Col. Mayo, of Chicago, attorney and personal representative of Judge Bryan, of Los Angeles, the millionaire uncle of Henry Foselsang, cashier of the Springport Bank, and who is charged with a big shortage, is in the city for the purpose of making an investigation of the affairs of Foselsang and the bank. The colonel has assured the people of Springport that if he finds that Foselsang's acts as cashier were inspired by good intentions, Judge Bryan will make good the shortage.

Michigan National Banks

Since the foundation of the federal banking system, 201 national banks have been chartered to do business in Michigan. Of these 14 have become insolvent and 91 are in liquidation, either voluntarily or through failure.

The Bank of Stephenson

R. A. Packard, of Powers, has been elected cashier of the Bank of Stephenson, to succeed W. J. Duncan.

Branch Banks

A Detroit banker says: "There should be some law regulating the establishment of branch banks in different parts of the city, for the craze to start them is being greatly overdone. Fifteen years ago branch banks were practically unknown in Detroit, but now there are too many. One bank opens a branch, say on the east or west side and soon after another bank, seeing that it is a fairly good thing, will start one in the same neighborhood and the result is that the business of both is destroyed. It is being done for competition, not in the interests of the public. The banking commissioner should have power to regulate this practice according to the needs of the community which is to be invaded."

Bank to be Reorganized

It is reported that the Kalkaska City Bank will be reorganized and will be known as the Peoples State Bank.

Elected President of American Exchange National

James N. Wright has been elected president of the American Exchange National, Detroit.

Banks in Normal Condition

Banking Commissioner H. M. Zimmermann's annual report says:

"Generally speaking, the financial institutions over which this department has supervision are in a healthy and prosperous condition. The effect of the panic has been overcome, and normal conditions again prevail."

The American Trust & Savings Bank, of Cedar Rapids, has increased its capital from $80,000 to $100,000.

Legislative Opportunity in Illinois

That Illinois is behind her sister states of Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Missouri in having no standard state banking department with supervisor over all forms of banking, not national, is conceded. That the recent presidential campaign has drawn the lime-light upon all banking projects cannot be denied. With the postal bank bill bounding along in the senate, the banks that have kept in business without more than "responsibility" of the supposed proprietors behind the deposits are close to the edge. Indiana was the last of the states named above to put private banks under state supervision (they were not abolished), and even the opposing banks now see the benefits of stated capital, stated partners, sworn reports, and examinations. Most of the chief opponents of the new bill went broke, committed suicide or was sent to the penitentiary. They had been insolvent for years, and strictly "private" banking was their only hope to continue in business and to live off of the depositors' money. Reform had to come and many believe it to be on its way in Illinois. In the present legislature there are eleven bankers, and the one who will be large enough to put in a good banking bill, not too drastic, will get it passed and will add immeasurably to the safety and security of the banking business in Illinois.

Just now you can start a "trust company" on wind, and open a "bank" in a junk shop. As a matter of fact, half the pawn shops in Chicago call themselves banks. A mining enterprise always is a "trust company." But our hopes are centered in the following bankers, who are members of the present general assembly:

Thos. B. Stewart, president First National, Aurora.

Edward C. Curtis, president Grant Park Trust & Savings Bank, Grant Park.

Geo. W. Myers, banker, Paris.

Homer E. Shaw, cashier H. L. Timmons & Co., Bement.

Jno. A. Montelius, president First National, Piper City.

Jno. Huston, president Huston Banking Co., Blandinsville.

Chas. E. Bolin, cashier Exchange Bank, Milton.

Henry A. Shepard, cashier State Bank, Jerseyville.

Dell D. Brownback, vice-president Bank of Cowden, Cowden.

D. W. Holstlaw, president Holstlaw Bank, Iuka.

Wm. Stevenson, president Bank of Tilden, Tilden.

Another of the banking fraternity who will shortly be installed as state treasurer is Andrew Russel, of the firm of Dunlap, Russel & Company, Jacksonville. Mr. Russel and most of the others named are private bankers, but the situation is made better thereby. The private bankers for years have maintained a special committee to "protect" their interests and prevent adverse legislation. They have controlled the Illinois Bankers Association in their own interests and have so managed it that during the years that the Illinois legislature is in session (every alternate year) that the president and chairman of executive council are both private bankers, and in a position to "kill bills." It is so this year; was so two years ago; was so four years ago, and straight back to the time when the abuse began. This only shows why things are as they are. It is no reason why the great state of Illinois should be held back in the future. On the contrary, it all is the best of argument that changes are necessary. The adoption of the group system in Illinois was fiercely contested by these same elements, but it won and set the rainbow in the clouds.

Another propitious element is the activity of Latham T. Souther, vice-president of the Trust Company section of the American Bankers Association for Illinois. Mr. Souther has been corresponding with a number of the bankers of Illinois, regarding an attempt to secure the passage of a law prohibiting any corporation or company from using the word "trust" in their title, unless they are organized to do a banking or trust business. Also the securing of a law giving the auditor discretion to withhold the issuing of a certificate authorizing a corporation to do a trust business when he is not satisfied as to the personal character and standing of the officers or directors elected, or when he has reason to believe that the company is organized for any but legitimate business. The replies which he has had to his letters have all been in favor of such revised laws.

On this subject, Mr. Souther says: "This special matter has been brought to my attention, and sometime ago I received from the secretary of the Trust Company section a letter regarding a certain Chicago company which has been recently incorporated under the general (not banking) incorporation laws, called the Trust Company. He had reason to believe that this company purposed to do a promotion business, and was not organized to do the business which its name indicated. In making inquiries from the secretary of state and from the auditor, I discovered that this company had incorporated and that its articles of incorporation gave it a very large range of power. I also discovered that the auditor would have no authority to withhold a certificate authorizing it to do a trust business, if it should apply to his office and make the required deposit of securities."

Banks and trust companies should be legitimate or be kept out of business. It is not intended that incorporated banks shall be arrayed against the private banks of the almost equally private trust companies. They all are customers of real banks and trust companies, hence the new bill at Springfield can consistently come from other than a state or national banker with good grace. If taken in time, a reasonable bill can be passed. If delayed too long, it likely will be quite drastic.

The Banks of Cincinnati

The truth about the banks of Cincinnati might be repeated almost verbatim of the banks of other cities, for banking in the American centers is upon a high plane. While this is true, the newspapers of all cities do not commend the good so often nor so emphatically as they rave about the shortcomings in banking as in morals, business and politics. In the case in point the great Cincinnati Enquirer, news Bible of the Ohio Valley, printed the following editorial review of banking in its city:

"All the national banks of this city and all the state banks and trust companies, whose elections occur at about the same time, have chosen their directors and organized for another year. In all of the nine national banks there has not been a change of officials, and the only change in directorates are those made necessary by deaths and voluntary resignation. The same conditions mark the organization of the state banks, with one exception.

"That the management of the financial institutions of Cincinnati are to remain in the same hands that so ably piloted them through the panicky times when similar institutions in other cities trembled and many fell is assurance that the conservatism and superior financiering which have been the dominant features of banking in this city are to continue for another year as safeguards around the millions of money intrusted to their care by hundreds of thousands of depositors.

"No greater tribute to the faithfulness of these officials, no stronger expression of confidence in their integrity and ability, could be given by the tens of thousands of stockholders who have thus indorsed their administration by unanimously voting to continue them in the trusts which they have so well defended.

"No large city of the country has stronger banks than those which control the financial interests of Cincinnati, and in a great measure contribute to the strong standing of the commercial and industrial interests of the city. The conservatism referred to as a dominant feature of their management is reflected throughout the business community, and to that more than to any other one influence perhaps is due the stability of business which enabled Cincinnati to pass through all the troubles of the recent financial panic and attendant business depression without a serious failure."

Why isn't this oftener done? It soon would become as popular to praise bankers for the good that most of them do as it now is to abuse the whole for the shortcomings of the few.

Hepburn on Inland Waterways

Illinois has taken advanced grounds upon the conservation and improvement of her inland waterways. At the fall election a $20,000,000 bond issue was voted, and the present legislature is entrusted with the inauguration of the work. At present, there is a deadlock on over an attempt of the governor to control the organization of the house. In the meantime every member of the Illinois legislature should possess himself of a copy of A. Barton Hepburn's new book on "Artificial Waterways and Commercial Development." Mr. Hepburn easily is one of America's foremost bankers and economists. He was chosen to head the currency commission of the American Bankers Association, when ability and not political power dictated the position.

"People have come to realize," writes Mr. Hepburn, "that the function of artificial water navigation is to supplement and complement, and not to rival, the railways. The great development and successful rivalry of the Canadian canals have attracted wide attention and done much to bring our people to a proper appreciation of the great service which canals and canalized rivers may render."

Mr. Hepburn's book shows how New York City has lost commerce which would have been hers, because she failed to maintain her canal system. The book places before the public in concise form "the salient facts as to artificial waterways and their relation to commercial development." The book is a valuable addition to the forces at work to conserve and improve our inland waterways, building canals where necessary.

Group One, W. B. A., Meeting

Group One, Wisconsin Bankers Association, held a very interesting and instructive meeting at Eau Claire Wednesday. Nearly every county in the group was represented. The morning session was called to order by President W. C. Ribenack at 10 o'clock and the bankers were welcomed to the city by Mayor W. H. Frawley. Geo. D. Bartlett, the secretary-treasurer, read the minutes of the 1908 meeting, which showed the group to be in a flourishing condition. The following papers were read and discussed: "Town and School District Orders as Bills Receivable"—By Attorney J. A. Anderson, Chippewa Falls. General discussion of this and other legal questions upon which information was desired, including the following: "May the drawer of a check stop its payment, after it is in the hands of an innocent holder?" "Does Illinois or Wisconsin law govern where a check on an Illinois bank is drawn and delivered in Wisconsin—payment being stopped in Illinois?" "Is a bank obliged to charge to account of maker on date due an endorsed note owned by the bank?" "Country Clearing Houses for Rural Districts"—By W. D. Willard, cashier First National, Mankato, Minn. "Postal Savings Bank Legislation"—By Lucius Teter, of Chicago, President Savings Bank Section, American Bankers Association. General discussion of "Postal Savings Banks." Discussion of subject: "Needed Legislation in Wisconsin," regarding "Taxation of Bank Stock"; "Amendments to State Banking Laws," etc.

A banquet and smoker was extended to the visiting bankers by the Eau Claire bankers at the Eau Claire Club.

Gemmell, J. A. Newbauer, W. H. Campbell, and W. A. Curry.

Despite the financial stringency of the past months the Blackford County Bank declared unusually large dividends the past year.

Eversz & Co. on Bond Market

Eversz & Co., of this city, have the following to say regarding the present condition and outlook of the bond market: "We are having an excellent demand for high grade bonds at present, both from private investors and country banks. The scarcity of good commercial paper, and the small returns obtainable from this class of security have resulted in a great many out-of-town banks investing their funds in high-class bonds. Most bankers are agreed that money will be cheap for the next six months, and bond prices considerably higher. There will be no appreciable expansion of business or manufacture so long as the question of the tariff is before Congress, and, while there may be some revival of business after the new schedule has been adopted, it is undoubtedly a fact that if the tariff is reduced to any extent interest rates will continue as low, or even lower than at present, for the balance of the year."

Chicago and Northwestern Bonds

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have purchased $16,250,000 bonds from the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company. Of these $10,000,000 are general mortgage 3½ per cent gold bonds of the Northwestern, $3,750,000 are first mortgage 3½ per cent gold bonds of the Manitowoc, Green Bay and Northwestern Railway, and $2,500,000 are first mortgage 3½ per cent gold bonds of the Milwaukee State Line Railway. The two last named issues are unconditionally guaranteed by the Northwestern and mature January 1, 1941.

The Boston Money Market

Money is accumulating so fast in Boston that rates are steadily declining. The greatest hope on the part of the lenders is the gathering probabilities of gold exports. Money on call is almost a drug. The larger amount a borrower will take, the cheaper he can obtain it. Quick money is offered in large blocks at 3 per cent, and even moderate amounts have been offered at that figure. Rates range from 3 to 4 per cent, mostly 3 to 3½ per cent. Time money is not active.

The Barton State Bank

It is stated that the Barton (N. D.) State Bank has been closed and a receiver appointed, because of a run that had started as a result of the appointment of a receiver for the Rugby National. Mayor A. H. Jones, of Rugby, is cashier of the Rugby bank and president of the Barton bank, and it is said that he has been missing for more than a week.

Calls Meeting of Bankers

Commissioner of Insurance Love has issued a call to representatives of all state banks and trust companies in Texas to meet at Austin for a general conference on necessary banking legislation.

The New Netherlands Bank of New York

William P. Chapman, Jr., was added to the board of directors of the New Netherlands Bank.

W. G. McCandless Dead

One of Pittsburgh's most representative business men, a financier, devotee of sports, clubman, churchman, and war veteran, Major William Graham McCandless, died this week after a protracted illness at his home, 854 Ridge Avenue, Northside.

Major McCandless at the time of his death was a director of the Commercial National, of the Commonwealth Trust Company and the Union Storage Company, and one of the two original surviving members of the Dollar Savings Bank.

Second National of New York

Spokane, Wash., January 20.—Two hundred and five state banks, with total deposits of $69,592,430.36, savings deposits of $19,681,370.27 and assets of $92,992,412.21; 56 national banks, with total deposits of $66,588,037, total due state banks, $10,128,286, capital stock paid in, $7,740,000, and four trust companies were in business in Washington at the close of 1908, according to the second annual report by State Bank Examiner Engle. Twenty-eight state banks, two bonding and surety companies and one trust company were authorized to begin business, and 20 state banks, of which five were nationalized, five consolidated with other institutions and two become insolvent, left the jurisdiction of the department. Five banking corporations are awaiting authority to begin business.

Recommendations Made to the Legislature

Chief among the recommendations made to the legislature, now in session at Olympia, for the enactment of amendments to the state banking laws are the following:

To provide for payment of capital stock of banking institutions issued to trust companies organized prior to the date on which the 1907 act went into effect.

To provide a limitation of loans to 25 per cent of the unimpaired capital and surplus.

That accrued and uncollected interest on bank's assets be not entered on its accounts or distributed as part of the profit.

Limiting aggregate loans to any trustee or director to 10 per cent of the bank capital or surplus.

Prohibiting loans to officers and employees of the bank.

Prescribing character of savings deposits.

To prohibit ownership by a bank or trust company of the capital stock of other banks or trust companies.

To give the state bank examiner exclusive co-ordinate jurisdiction with courts appointing the receiver.

To add one deputy bank examiner to the staff and to appropriate $17,500 for the bank examiner's department for the biennial term.

State Banks Organized

Mr. Engle reports that the following state banks, with a total capitalization of $559,500, were authorized to begin business during the year: Scandinavian-American State Bank of Spokane, $100,000; Colfax State Bank, $60,000; The Traders' Bank, Toppenish, $25,000; Willapa Harbor State Bank of Raymond, $50,000; Security State Bank of Newport, $25,000; First National of Kennewick, $25,000; Malden State Bank, $20,000; Kitsap County State Bank, Port Orchard, $20,000; Citizens' State Bank of Mabton, $15,000; First State Bank of Wilkeson, $15,000; The Bank of Renton, $15,000; State Bank of Edison, $12,000; State Bank of Bothell, $12,500; Pioneer State Bank of Almira, $10,000; Camas State Bank, $10,000; Farmers' State Bank of Uniontown, $10,000; Lamont State Bank, $10,000; Roy State Bank, $10,000; Commercial State Bank of Molson, $10,000; Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Springdale, $10,000; Bank of Pasco, $10,000; Big Bend State Bank, Warrenton, $10,000; Warrenton State Bank, $10,000; Othello State Bank, $10,000; Farmers' Bank of Hatton, $10,000; State Bank of Govan, $10,000; Farmers' State of Johnson, $10,000; Home State Bank of Blaine, $5,000, Title Insurance Trust & Loan Company of Vancouver, capital $25,000. Washington Bonding & Surety Company and the North American Surety & Indemnity Company, both of Seattle, with $250,000 capital each, were also authorized.

Bank Consolidations

The consolidations were: The State Bank of Krupp, by the Farmers' Bank of Krupp; Bank of Quincy and German-American Bank, by The First State National Bank of Quincy; Big Bend State Bank, by the Warrenton State Bank; Scandinavian Commercial State Bank of Tacoma, by the Scandinavian-American State Bank of Tacoma; Spokane County Savings Bank, by the Scandinavian-American Savings Bank of Spokane, and First State Bank of Newport, by the Surety State Bank of Newport.

Banks Which Failed

The Inland Bank of Spokane, with liabilities of $32,000, nominal assets of $24,000 and paid up capital of $15,000, small percentage returned to depositors; and the First Scandia Bank of Everett, with liabilities of $164,000, with nominal assets of $199,000 and paid up capital of $36,000, loss to depositors not yet ascertained, became insolvent and closed their doors. The first named appealed directly to the courts for a receiver and the affairs of the concern have been closed. The report says that the affairs of the Everett bank were conducted in a most unconservative manner the last six months of its career and adds that the cashier is now under charge of appropriating the bank's funds for his own use.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

British Chapter Matters Reviewed

London, January 14.—Mr. B. Campion, barrister at law, has been delivering to the members of the Institute of Bankers a series of lectures on "The Law of Bankers' Guarantees." The first lecture, which was more or less of an introductory character, was delivered on November 11th at the London Institution.

At the outset of his lecture, Mr. Campion pointed out the importance of guarantees in banking practice, in view of the great number of advances made in this way. A guarantee was an easily enforceable security, the possible loopholes open to a guarantor being usually provided against by the forms in use among banks. A guarantee involves necessarily a primary liability on the part of one person—the debtor; and a secondary liability on the part of another person—the guarantor. It is this which distinguishes a guarantee from an indemnity, where a person becomes originally liable on his own promise to pay in any event. For instance, if a man goes into a shop with a friend and says to the shopkeeper, "Supply my friend with goods and I will see you paid," he assumes a direct liability and his promise constitutes an indemnity. If he had said, "Supply my friend with goods, and, if he does not pay you, I will," his promise is a guarantee. The difference is important when we come to consider the conditions under which a guarantee can be enforced. Many transactions which take place in banking operations, where the customer is well known to the bank, could, no doubt, be treated and enforced, either as guarantees or as indemnities. The great difference between the two securities is that a guarantee must be in writing, whereas an indemnity can be given verbally.

There are many forms in which one person may become a surety for another. Where the principal debtor pledges property by a mortgage deed, a surety may be made a party to it, covenanting to carry out the undertakings included in the deed. In the provinces particularly, advances are made on the security of the joint and several promissory notes of principal debtors and their friends. Here the bank gets a promissory note, and there have been cases in which the question has arisen as to how far it was possible to vary by word of mouth the contract as it appeared on the note. There was a case in which a bill had been endorsed by a woman and, on the face of it, she was not liable to a subsequent endorser, because the same endorser was also an endorser prior to herself. It was sought to prove that she was, in fact, a surety and intended to be such, so that, although on the note she appeared to be liable no longer, evidence was admitted to show that she was a guarantor. It was once the practice to take guarantees by way of bond, but this method has been given up by some banks in favor of an agreement under hand. Little, if any, advantage is gained by having the guarantee under seal.

The banker must see that the guarantee contains in express terms the exact liability which the guarantor is to undertake, and, particularly, that it includes express waivers of all the benefits which the law would otherwise give the guarantor, so as to leave him no loophole for escape.

The statute of frauds requires that a guarantee must be in writing. Hence we have to find out how much is necessary to satisfy the statute. The section of the statute enacts that no action shall be brought whereby "... to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another person ... unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized." It is, therefore, necessary to have the names of the parties mentioned; the subject-matter of the contract must be fully expressed and any restrictions upon the rights of the guarantor expressly stated. There must be consideration for the guarantee: this is usually that the bank is advancing money. Strictly speaking, the consideration need not be stated in writing, this being made unnecessary by the Mercantile Law Amendment Act of 1857. But it must exist nevertheless. The clause should be as full as possible, including every way in which the advance may be made. The guarantee has to be signed by the person to be charged or by someone duly authorized by him. There need be no witness to his signature. Further, it is quite in order if the signature appears anywhere on the document, provided it is clear that it is intended to cover the whole document. A guarantee may also be gathered from correspondence, say between the customer's friend and the bank. The friend may, after several letters have passed between himself and the bank, state in a general way that he will stand surety for the customer. There will be a firm contract from the whole correspondence. Of course, the banker would later on get an ordinary form signed, but pro tem. he is secured, subject, of course, to the general law of the land. A man's agent, properly authorized, can bind him. The agent who signs may, however, find himself liable, unless he makes it clear that he is acting solely on behalf of his principal. Suppose a man signed "J. Jones, Agent," and an action were subsequently brought, he could not object to being made liable, as he has not made it clear that he is binding his principal only. If the principal is worth suing, evidence can be called to charge him, though his name is not on the document, provided the agent has signed as agent. As regards the power of a partner to bind his firm, this extends to all purposes of the business of the firm, unless he has in fact no authority and the creditor knows that he has none.

As regards companies, most banks have a special form for such cases, and, of course, the form contemplates a contract under seal. The bank is affected with notice of what is contained in the memorandum and articles of association, and must see that any execution of a guarantee is made in the form which accords with the requirements of the articles of association. The power of a limited company to become a guarantor is a matter of the memorandum. It is desirable for the memorandum to expressly provide for the company to have power to guarantee the overdraft of third parties. If this is not included, it is doubtful whether the banker is protected in such cases. It might be held that the giving of a guarantee for a third party's debt was outside the scope of a company's business. Of course, in particular cases it might be admitted, because the doing so was necessary for the preservation of the company itself. Unincorporated companies are bound by their rules, which must be strictly observed.

In connection with the primary liability of the debtor and the secondary liability of the surety, the lecturer pointed out that directly the liability of the principal debtor fails, that of the surety fails as well. He mentioned the case of the Commercial Bank of Tasmania v. Jones. Here the bank released the principal debtor and accepted another person in his place. The surety for the original debtor agreed to give a guarantee for the new debt, but unfortunately died before doing so. The bank sued his executors on the original guarantee, and it was held that, as the original debt had been wiped out, the liability of the surety in respect thereof was gone as well.

In connection with guarantees given by married women for their husbands' liabilities, it is desirable to take precautions so as to be able to prove that they understood what they were doing when signing the guarantees. One banker, for instance, always had the signature of the woman witnessed, the form carefully read over and explained to her, and, as a further safeguard, asked for a statutory declaration before a commissioner that no undue pressure had been exercised in order to induce her to sign the guarantee. Apart from these precautions, the banker should find out what property the woman has, particularly as to whether it is subject to any restraint. Any judgment against a married woman will bind only her separate estate. Sometimes a bank has to draw up a special form, the transaction being of an unusual character. In such cases, the bank should be careful to see that the consideration for the guarantee is not varied in any way.

The Bank Clerks' Orphanage

There has been sent from the Bank Clerks' Orphanage a circular drawing attention to the needs of the Orphanage, and making an appeal for funds. The object of the Bank Clerks' Orphanage is the maintenance and education of children of bank officials deprived of a father's care and protection. Such children are ordinarily eligible for admission between the ages of six and eleven, and remain until the age of fifteen, during which period the entire cost of their clothing, maintenance, education, medical attendance, and all incidental expenses, is borne by the Orphanage. By virtue of the special resolution passed at an extraordinary general meeting of the members of the institution, held on 24th May, 1905, the General Committee have discretionary power to declare any candidate to be eligible before the age of six or after the age of eleven, and to allow any child to remain in the Orphanage after the age of fifteen, which power they have already exercised. Since the foundation of the Orphanage, in 1883, two hundred children have been admitted to its benefits, and seventy-two are now under its care.

The Orphanage has no buildings and no uniform dress, many of the founders and subscribers disliking the idea of a badge of charity for the children of old friends and colleagues. The children are, therefore, placed in carefully selected private boarding schools. The Council of the Institute of Bankers give the Orphanage the free use of its library for business meetings.

Educational Features Commended

Sir. J. Fortescue Flannery, Bart., at the recent meeting of the members, praised the educational work which is being done by the Institute of Bankers. In the course of his remarks he stated that it was impossible for any younger member of the profession to acquire even a few of the qualities which Sir Felix Schuster, in his presidential address, had mentioned as requisite in a banker, without calling the attention of his superiors to the possession thereof, and rising accordingly. He mentioned that in his own bank—the London and South Western Bank—they had the custom of giving a prize and publishing the names of the young men who succeeded in the examinations of the Institute. He believed that all the large banks did the same, and hoped that any bank which did not would take warning and pass a resolution forthwith, that if one of the members of their staff should qualify and publish his qualifications and knowledge by passing the examinations connected with the Institute, he should receive a money recognition, and be marked for promotion in the near future and at the earliest opportunity. He considered that an educated man was as certain to get on in the banking community as anywhere else. Such inspiring words as these should stimulate every ambitious young man to equip himself with those qualifications which will enable him to fill the higher posts in his profession when, in due course, they come within his reach.

Junior Bankers to Dine

Chicago Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has scheduled its eighth annual banquet for this evening, January 23d, at the Auditorium hotel. Prof. J. C. Monaghan of St. John's College, Brooklyn, and Principal of the Stuyvesant Evening Trade School, New York City, will be the principal speaker, responding to the toast, "America a Land of Opportunity." George A. Jackson, president of the Chapter, will be toastmaster, and Prof. David Kinley, Ph. D., L.L. D., Director of the University of Illinois at Champaign, will also speak.

The Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, minister of the Church of the Redeemer, will give the invocation and respond to the toast, "Saving the Waste." Other speakers and their toasts are: D. A. Moulton, vice-president Corn Exchange National, "Observations"; Franklin L. Johnson of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Banking, "The Institute"; Alexander Wall of Milwaukee, "Productive Education and the Institute Degree"; and H. R. Ross of the First National of this city, "Human Nature a Study."

The American Institute of Banking was founded by the American Bankers Association as an educational movement for the benefit of the junior bankers in 1900, and the success of the experiment is attested by chapters in forty cities and a large membership outside the cities, in all over 8,000. At the recent Convention of the American Bankers Association, held at Denver, the Institute was made a section of the organization. The next annual convention of the Institute will occur at the Seattle exposition, probably in June.

A Minneapolis Visitor

George E. Allen, educational director for the American Institute of Banking, spent two days last week with the Twin City chapters. He addressed the Minneapolis clerks on Tuesday evening and the St. Paul clerks on Wednesday. The Minneapolis clerks gave a musical and smoker Tuesday evening.

Full-fledged Bank Director

Lyman E. Wakefield, former president of the Minneapolis chapter and manager of the transit department for the Northwestern National, has become a full-fledged bank director. He was an incorporator and is a director of the First State of Biscay, Minn., a new institution with $10,000 capital. John Kennedy, a Biscay farmer, is president; S. G. Anderson of Hutchinson is vice-president, and C. F. Firman, assistant cashier of the Citizen's State of Hutchinson, is to be cashier. The other directors are W. G. Schulz, Frank Keller, Jr., and Henry Ulrich.

Philadelphia Chapter News

By ARTHUR E. ELMER.

At the meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter on January 8th, the slightly diminished attendance indicated the business of the season. But those present were amply repaid by a meeting of great interest.

The Chapter was so fortunate as to secure Thomas J. McCarthy, the trust officer of the Real Estate Trust Company, as a speaker. He gave a discourse upon bankruptcy, very instructive and clear. The substance was enhanced by a delivery, calm and deliberate, that enabled the audience to grasp readily what was said.

The first part of the lecture was historical in character, explaining how Congress was able to pass a measure regarding this subject in which it had taken action so seldom.

The legal career of Alexander Hamilton opened with a difficult case that involved a constitutional question, before the framing of that document by the United States. It was a case that decided the matter that the authority of the nation was greater than that of any state which composed it, in matters where Congress had a recognized jurisdiction. This is reasonable. It neutralizes authority; and the principle was embodied in our Constitution. In framing this measure, Hamilton insisted that any central government should have complete control over certain functions of national interest, as of tariff, revenues, postoffices, war and peace. There were other interests that should be so undertaken, but that might in the absence of such regulation, be administered by the several states, but at the same time, the General Government should reserve to itself the right to enact laws upon these matters, when it saw fit.

One of these matters is bankruptcy. The Federal Constitution in Section 8, declares: "The Congress shall have power to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States."

To Hamilton's labor largely was due the principle that in all cases in which a state should be a party, the United States Supreme Court should be vested with original jurisdiction.

Our country was early engaged in just such a controversy over an act passed during the Revolutionary War in Virginia regarding the sequestration of debts due British creditors. In this, a Federal treaty was upheld. And in the Dartmouth College case, decided in 1819, the U. S. Supreme Court held through Chief Justice John Marshall, that no state should pass any law impairing the obligation of existing contracts. Thus, the inviolability of private trusts is secured and state sovereignty is limited.

It may be seen that while Congress had used the power sparingly, leaving to the individual states the liberty of dealing with bankruptcy, yet for the purpose of making a uniform statute it resumed its privilege of passing, in 1898, the General Bankruptcy Act.

The speaker then brought out the changes in the laws as they brought more benefit to the creditor and ameliorated the physical penalty of the debtor.

In feudal times, one unable to pay his debts lost all his possessions, and was then forced to enter slavery. Under Henry VIII and Elizabeth, statutes were passed, appearing to still regard the debtor with suspicion and harsh judgment, yet more lenient toward him. The horrors of the Debtor's Prison in England are revealed in Dickens' works. In Pennsylvania, there was such an institution until 1836. In the panic of 1837, prominent persons, through unforeseen difficulties, were forced into debt, consequently by a law of 1841, imprisonment for debt itself was for all time abolished.

At the present time the debtor who has undergone due process of the law is granted a discharge.

Mr. McCarthy drew the distinction between insolvency and bankruptcy. The former is a condition of debt in which the assets do not enable one to meet liabilities as they fall due. It does not release the debtor. Bankruptcy occurs when the total of all the property taken together is not enough to pay the debts. These two are subject to different sets of laws. It was upon the latter subject that he desired to speak.

Bankruptcy may be either voluntary or involuntary, according as proceedings are instituted by the debtor or creditors. And it is a matter of note that in Pennsylvania, a national or state bank or trust company is subject to only the former.

The last part of Mr. McCarthy's address, related in an instructive way, to the duties of creditors and how best returns to them could be best secured.

Creditors are of two kinds, secured and unsecured. After the petition is filed, the creditors of the latter class elect the trustee. Also a share in the general distribution of the assets is granted to the secured creditors, only after their collateral has been exhausted.

The first duty of the trustee is to ascertain the condition of the debtor, to have an inventory and appraisal made, to find the debts, and their proportion. Sometimes a receiver is first appointed. But Mr. McCarthy said that oftentimes that did not pay the creditors.

The statute of 1898 declares that the trustee's relation shall date back four months before the filing of the petition. This is of service to him in learning whether the debtor may have made a preference to some creditor or attempted to defraud them in some way. The enactment renders such an effort on the debtor's part null and void. The creditors then establish their claims, the trustee collects the assets, turns them into cash and pays dividends to such an extent as the property allows, after allowing the debtor whatever is exempt.

In closing, Mr. McCarthy said that he knew of no case in which larger dividends would not have been received by the creditors, if they had arrived at an amicable understanding after the petition, and saved much of the expenses of the court.

He was followed by Prof. F. H. Green of the State Normal School of West Chester, Pa.

Prof. Green had been one of the speakers at the Pennsylvania Bankers Convention last year. And upon the occasion of our meeting, he gave a talk that united a degree of humor with sage advice, that was very entertaining and beneficial.

He gave as his subject, "Books, Bank Books and Other Books." He said that while the deposit pass-book with a good balance on the right side would appeal most heartily to many, yet there were many books worth far more than such terms might express. He had no patience with the man who had no time to read, and declared that no one could afford not to take time to read. One-half an hour a day passed in reading good literature would give one more culture. And it is characteristic of our people, as shown in various ways, that we do read.

He spoke of the sensations that came to a person standing amid the miles and miles of book-stacks in a large library, as in our Congressional Library. It made a lifetime seem such a brief period to peruse them. And annually, thousands more are being added.

It was better to select a few and to know them thoroughly. While it is desirable to read the newspapers and to look over the current magazines somewhat, yet far more good could be obtained through a few books. It is important to select the best. Lists such as Sir John Lubbock's had been prepared, to serve as a guide. But one's own taste might easily suggest others. He declared, however, that the Biblical analogy of the sheep and the goats was true of books. That as it was the office of most of them to enter and enlighten our mind, yet there were some fit only to be cast into everlasting fire, and he added that the best light they could throw upon the earth would be from the bonfire of their burning.

To vary one's reading is important. He said it would give one a broader view of life. And such branches as history, biography, travels, fiction could not fail to be interesting. He said that though it might sound womanish, yet it was his belief that persons would profit by reading poetry more. He called attention to a certain paper the day after the death of Whittier. A prize fight had occurred the same date, to which sixteen columns were devoted, while the account of the poet's life and works received but a single one. He inquired whether this assumed a ratio of silver that made such a difference.

Our reading should be of cheerful books. The work in banks is so exacting, and our customers are so apt to judge the character of the institution through the disposition of the employees, that it was important to cultivate a happy nature. And books were a valuable help toward this.

Lastly, he stated the importance of mastering the book. As an author writes with a purpose, so we should endeavor to see what the meaning is and try to adopt it to our needs.

The meeting was then adjourned. It was a profitable evening.

George E. Allen

George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, spent a few days at La Crosse and Milwaukee, and addressed the La Crosse and Milwaukee chapters. Mr. Allen is kept busy attending the forty chapters belonging to the institute and forming new ones.

Pittsburgh Chapter Meeting

"Bankers and all business men should mingle more of the immortal works of the great poets, dramatists and producers of all great action with what they are wont to call their more practical affairs," was the keynote of an address made by Colonel Samuel Harden Church at a meeting of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held last week in its rooms in the Wabash Building.

"It is not to be doubted that some of our great business captains were led to their success largely by the broadening of their minds in all directions by a cultivation of the aesthetic faculty and the fine imagination which led always to a reaching out for greater things," was another sentiment of Colonel Church, and again, that "the Morgans of banking are the Shakespeares and Tennysons of finance."

Colonel Church was introduced by Fred T. Loeffler, president of the chapter. Piano solos were given by Paul Moore of the Wilkesburg Bank, and R. M. Sherrard of the Diamond National. A. G. Boal of the First National of West Elizabeth, chairman of the educational committee, announced prizes aggregating $350, offered by the American Institute of Banking for the best essays on the subject of "American Currency Problems."

The January Bulletin

The Bulletin, for January, published by the American Institute of Banking, is out in a new cover shade—the London fog gray. Its appearance on the inside also looks a little changed—the articles now having attractive 36-point heads.

E. B. Vreeland contributes an article on "Monetary Commission Work"; S. J. Henry one on "Comptroller Murray as a Man," and many other instructive items and articles appear in this issue. The "Chaptergrams Department" is as usual up to its high mark.

San Francisco Chapter

The seventh annual adding machine contest took place recently in the rooms of the San Francisco Chapter. The clerks of the Bank of California won three out of four events. The annual vaudeville show of the chapter was given January 19th in Golden Gate Hall.

New York Banking and News Letter

By J. R. MORGAN

The Consolidated National of New York, will increase its capital to $1,200,000 and change its name to the National Reserve Bank of the City of New York. The bank will also purchase a portion of the Oriental Bank assets.

A circular has been issued by the directors bearing on the plan which points out that shareholders of the Consolidated National are requested to waive the right to subscribe to the 2,000 additional shares, so that stockholders of the Oriental Bank may receive that privilege. This right expires on February 20th.

Savings Bank Investments

Savings banks both in and out of the city are now rounding up the returns of deposits which assume large proportions at the beginning of the calendar year. The amount of deposits secured will determine to some extent how large a demand savings banks may develop for bonds in which they are permitted by law to invest.

Savings bank officials now have the matter before them and early decision is likely to result in purchases to the credit of their bond investments. In this connection it is to be noted that the large variety of municipals which have been floated within recent months has helped to broaden the scope of selection from which the savings banks are entitled to choose. The large income from the latter source helps to offset the lower rate of railroad legals and thus holds out promise of a continuance of 4 per cent on deposits against which the advancing prices of a large number of legals have placed some doubt.

The Bank of Lancaster

John O. Garretsee has been elected president of the Bank of Lancaster to succeed Charles W. Fuller, deceased; John G. Miller has been elected vice-president; T. E. Idsardi, second vice-president, and J. F. Pickard has been appointed cashier, succeeding Mr. Garretsee.

State Banking Report Arouses Interest

The recommendations contained in the annual report of Clark Williams, superintendent of banks, submitted to the state legislature, and which is printed on page five of this week's CHICAGO BANKER, have attracted considerable attention and aroused widespread discussion in bank and trust company circles. This is particularly true of that part of the report in which Superintendent Williams refers to the lack of a representative Clearing House in New York City and urges a closer association among all financial institutions; also his remarks relative to the encroachment on the business of the savings banks of the state by state banks of discount and trust companies, as well as a growing tendency on the part of national banks doing business in this state to operate interest departments in competition with savings banks.

Trust Company Man's View

President Otto Bannard of the New York Trust Company, says: "The recommendation of Superintendent Williams that banks, trust companies and department stores should be restricted from paying interest on daily balances below a certain amount is in my judgment a wise one. This would tend to differentiate their business from that of savings banks."

H. C. Swords' Views

Henry C. Swords, president of the Fulton Trust Company, said:

"In reference to the report of the Banking Department which has just been published, I should say that the first thing to be considered, and upon which we should congratulate ourselves, is having Mr. Clark Williams for superintendent. He has become a valuable asset for the state of New York. Some method we ought to have of collecting checks except by the old-fashioned method of going from office to office by runners. This no doubt will be brought about in time for the mutual convenience of the banks and trust companies."

President Hepburn's Views

A. B. Hepburn, president of the Chase National, said:

"Superintendent Williams has made a report to the legislature of exceptional ability, and I cordially endorse the positions he has taken in his recommendations to the legislature."

Becomes Vice-President of Gallatin National

Adrian Iselin, Jr., has become vice-president of the Gallatin National of New York City.

A Foreign Exchange Expert

State Treasurer Cowgill of Missouri has drafted an amendment to the state depository law, making the registered bonds of any school district in any city of the state containing a population of 5,000 or over, provided the bonds are worth not less than par, security for the state's deposits. Effort will be made to push this measure, principally because in February the governor, attorney-general and treasurer will award the keeping of the state's funds for a period of four years. Under the present law only United States bonds, Missouri state bonds, registered bonds of cities of not less than 100,000 population and registered county bonds, which are worth not less than par, can be accepted as security.

Merchants' National Open

The Merchants' National of Springfield, Mo., successor to the failed National Exchange Bank, opened its doors for business Monday morning. All legal requirements for the transfer of the assets and liabilities of the failed institution to the new organization were disposed of Saturday. The new bank opens with a capital of $200,000, and its affiliated company, the Security Trust Company, with a capital of $100,000.

The National Exchange Bank failed with more than $2,000,000 in deposits. Its depositors will be paid in full by the Merchants' National.

National City Bank Election

Directors were elected at the stockholders' meeting of the National City Bank of Houston, held on Saturday afternoon and the newly elected board of directors elected officers for the bank.

Jesse H. Jones was elected president, J. M. West, vice-president, and N. E. Meadow, vice-president. These three were also elected directors. The other directors are: Carey Shaw, E. W. Taylor, Frank C. Jones, W. V. Angle, E. A. Hudson and R. M. Farrar.

The other officers not directors are: Fred J. Heyne, cashier, and L. B. Mayer, assistant cashier.

Mr. Carey Shaw, who has sold his bank stock to other directors, will remain in the bank as director and for some time will assist the new officers with their duties. Mr. Shaw will not be lost to the bank for a while, although he has retired from an active official connection with the bank other than as director.

Affairs of the bank are most prospering and it has more than half a million dollars of deposits.

The stockholders' meeting held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock was one adjourned from January 12th.

The People's National

A Woman a Bank President

The Commercial State Bank of Rosedale, Kan., held its annual election of officers, and elected Mrs. Linnie Y. Trickey president. She is believed to be the only woman bank president in that part of the country. She is also city treasurer of Rosedale and an owner of considerable property there.

The other officers chosen are: Dr. B. M. Barnett, vice-president; James P. Birney, cashier, and R. H. Sheffield, assistant cashier.

Mrs. Trickey has been city treasurer of Rosedale for the last seven years. She is a daughter of the late D. S. Young, an abstract man of Kansas City, Kan.

"There is nothing strange about a woman being made president of a bank," she said; "women can hold that position just as well as men. A woman can even be more careful with money."

New Bank Law Inoperative

Although the new banking law in Missouri will go in effect next Friday and Governor Hadley has selected John E. Swanger, ex-secretary of state, to be state bank commissioner, it seems that for the time being the law will be inoperative. As no business can be transacted by the legislature pending the contest over lieutenant governor, it will be impossible for the senate to confirm the appointment of Mr. Swanger before the contest is disposed of. That will be ten days at least.

This new law creates the office of state bank commissioner and establishes a new state department. Mr. Swanger is ready to assume his office just as soon as he is confirmed. He appointed Keith McCance, a clerk in the department. Mr. McCance has been employed in this department for the last four years.

New Bank Guaranty Bills

Two bank guaranty bills were introduced in the house this week at Topeka. One of these was a copy of the Quincy bill in the senate and the other is to be regarded as the minority measure.

It was introduced by T. F. Morrison of Neosho county. The bill is along the lines discussed generally in the last campaign by H. P. Farrelly, Democratic candidate for United States senator, and by John Breidenthal.

The bill requires the banks to keep on deposit with the state treasurer 5 per cent of all deposits. This money is to be deposited with state banks like other state funds. When a bank fails the state officials take charge and pay all of the claims of the depositors at once and take over the assets, which are sold and the funds secured by the sale of the assets are returned to the guaranty reserve fund.

H. P. Krehbill introduced his guaranty bill. It provides for the mutual guaranty of deposits.

St. Louis Money Market

Bankers claim that the amount of commercial business being done by the requirements of the St. Louis trade is exceedingly light. The inclement weather of the past few days has had a natural tendency to restrict business at the banks, so that the rates of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  to  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent for time funds really mean little or nothing.

The Federal Trust Company

The Federal Trust Company of St. Louis is being organized by Joseph McCoy and others for the purpose of conducting a general trust company, fidelity and bonding business, with branches in many counties of the western and southwestern states. The company is incorporated under the laws of the state, with an authorized capital of $500,000.

The Mechanics-American National

Jackson Johnson, president of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Company of St. Louis, one of the most successful shoe houses in the United States, has been elected a vice-president of the Mechanics-American National of St. Louis.

Mercantile National Open

The Mercantile National of St. Louis opened its doors to the public Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. There was a rush of depositors all day, and at the close of business hours the officers expressed themselves as delighted with the showing made. The largest deposits came by mail from banks and individuals. Lorenzo E. Anderson, a director of the Mercantile Trust Company, was the first depositor. The bank notes of the Mercantile are not ready yet, but are expected to be in circulation in a few days.

Another Oklahoma Bank Robbed

Enid, Okla., January 18.—Robbers blew open the safe in the First State Bank of Carrier, thirteen miles northwest of here, at 2 o'clock this morning and escaped with $3,000. Two charges of nitro-glycerin were exploded. The first awoke a dozen families and a number of men started toward the bank, but were driven back by the robbers, who fired at them and then laughed loudly as they gathered up the money. The building and vault were completely wrecked.

C. D. Knight has succeeded J. M. Reeds as cashier of the First National of Coatesville, Ind.

Big London Bank Merger

London, January 8.—One of the most important amalgamations that have taken place in recent years has been effected in the agreement made between the directors of the London Joint Stock Bank, Limited, and the directors of the York City and County Banking Company. A circular announces that on completion of the agreement five of the present directors of the York Bank will join the board of the London Joint Stock Bank, Limited, and they will form, together with the remaining directors of the York Bank, a local advisory board in York, in terms of the agreement.

The York City and County Banking Company, which has assets amounting to over £13,000,000, is one of the largest banks doing business in the provinces without headquarters in London, having 116 branches and 71 sub-branches in the north. The London Joint Stock Bank has 44 branches.

Under the agreement shareholders of the York City and County Banking Company will receive three shares of the London Joint Stock Bank, £15 paid up and £5 in cash for every 10 shares they hold £3 paid up in the York Bank.

The deposit and current accounts of the London Joint Stock Bank amount to £19,211,000, so that the combined institution will represent over £30,000,000. It is understood that on the amalgamation being sanctioned by the proprietors the capital of the London Joint Stock Bank will be increased from £12,000,000 to £20,000,000.

The London Joint Stock Bank, Limited, was established in 1836, and on September 30, 1882, was registered as limited. The subscribed capital is £12,000,000 in shares of £100, of which £1,800,000, or £15 per share, is paid up. One-half of the subscribed capital is reserved liability. The bank does not issue notes. For the half years to June and December 1908, the bank declared dividends of 10 per cent. The report last issued for the half year ended December 31st shows a reserve fund of £1,165,000 and a carry-forward of £26,778. The price of the company's shares is quoted officially at  $31\frac{3}{4}$  and  $32\frac{1}{4}$ .

The York City and County Banking Company, Limited, was established in March, 1830, and was registered as limited on July 2, 1883. The authorized capital is £2,700,000 in shares of £10, of which £2,600,000 has been subscribed and £780,000, or £3 per share, paid up, and of balance £4 per share is reserved liability. In addition to the uncalled capital, shareholders are liable for notes in circulation (amounting on June 30th last to £67,625). The dividend for 1906 and 1907 was £16 13s 4d. On account of 1908 5s per share was paid in July last. The last balance sheet showed a reserve fund of £600,000 and a carry-forward of £13,424, after full provision had been made for writing down the bank's investments. The latest price of the company's shares is about  $10\frac{3}{4}$ .

As the London Joint Stock Bank has up to the present been a purely metropolitan institution (every branch is inside a 20-mile circle which has Charing Cross for the center), this amalgamation represents a bid for the country business, and a new and powerful competitor for institutions like Parr's, the London City and Midland, and Lloyds, which have specialized in amalgamation. Roughly speaking, however, these three banks have pushed their way northward along the "west coast route," tending toward Lancashire and Carlisle. The London Joint Stock now occupies the ground along the "east coast route," from Sheffield to Newcastle, and from Ripon to Whitby. There could hardly be finer fields for banking operations than these.

A Big Casualty Company for Chicago

The removal of the Consolidated Casualty Company from Philadelphia to Chicago is a recognition of this financial center with its many points of advantage. Another company in the same line will shortly make an announcement.

During the past ten years, according to Bradstreet, there have been over one hundred thousand commercial failures, with liabilities of over a billion and a half.

During the same period, there have been ninety-three railroad receiverships, with over six hundred million dollars' worth of stock shown as involved, while, by insurance, it can be said for more than thirty years there has not been one single failure of an old line mutual life or a casualty insurance company, which has been continuously on a legal reserve basis.

The earnings of the casualty companies run from 15 to 64 per cent, which makes such shares attractive to investors.

Among those who will sit upon the official board of the Consolidated Casualty Company are the following well known financiers and business men:

Hon. Robert B. Armstrong, president Consolidated Casualty Co., formerly first assistant secretary of the U. S. treasury; Hon. James H. Peabody, ex-governor state of Colorado, president Canon City & Royal Gorge Electric R. R. Co.; Hon. Ernest E. Hart, president First National, Council Bluffs, Iowa; Hon. David C. Owen, postmaster, Milwaukee, Wis.; Hon. M. J. Wade, ex-judge eighth judicial district, ex-member of congress, Iowa City, Iowa; H. W. Huttig, president H. W. Huttig Trust Co., Huttig Manufacturing Co., Muscatine, Iowa; Scott C. Bone, publisher Washington Herald, director Union Trust Co., Washington, D. C. Ralph E. Dougherty, merchant, Washington, Iowa; P. T. Walsh, general contractor, Davenport, Iowa; Mitchell D. Follansbee, Follansbee, McConnell & Follansbee, attorneys, Chicago, Ill.; M. H. Boutelle, street railways, Minneapolis, Minn.; A. H. Nevius, Kenmore Pulp & Paper Co., Philadelphia; David Peoples, general contractor, Philadelphia; M. L. Turner, president Western National, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Elwyn G. Preston, treasurer and director R. H. White Co., director Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., trustee Woburn Five Cent Savings Bank; Frank Knox, president National Bank of the Republic, Salt Lake City.

Chicago has been accused of being rather lukewarm on such subjects and this side of the subject was referred to in an address before the Chicago Commerce Association. Among other things Mr. Armstrong said:

"Chicago, the valve of the heart of America, healthy in every other respect, is diseased when it comes to insurance. There is a leakage of assets here unworthy the second city of the United States and the fourth city of the world. All this great healthy heart—the Middle West that surrounds Chicago on every side—sends over four hundred million dollars each year to the East and foreign countries for insurance. Hardly a drop remains for the sustenance of Chicago.

"Of the total insurance premiums of the United States—almost a billion dollars annually, to be exact, eight hundred and twenty-five millions in 1907—less than one per cent was retained in Chicago, second only to New York in this country in population. For what the American people pay in three years for insurance they could buy the City of Chicago as it stands today—railroads, street cars and all, yet less than the one-hundredth part of this vast total comes to Chicago insurance companies.

"And yet we wonder why New York state has three-fifths of all the actual money in the United States. We wonder why the West must worship in Wall Street for enough money to finance its dreams of growth and greatness.

"The total value of Chicago property in round figures is two and a half billion dollars. The assets of the great life insurance companies alone of this country amount to three billion dollars. Ninety per cent of this is concentrated east of the Alleghany mountains. The other ten per cent is scattered throughout the balance of the country. Chicago's portion is negligible. It has no great investing institutions. Milwaukee has one insurance company the assets of which are more than two hundred million dollars. The biggest one in Chicago has not ten million dollars of assets.

ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG

"Chicago, with all its commercial verility, all its greatness of accomplishment, all its magnificent supporting country, has allowed the millions upon millions of insurance premiums to flow through it toward the East unchecked. It has deplored the necessity and the humiliation of having to go back to those sections of the country and ask for its insurance premiums to finance its railroads and its commerce. There is no reason why Chicago should not become as pre-eminent in insurance as it has in every other line of human endeavor. The time has ceased when Chicago men of affairs are exclusively engaged in building individual monuments to themselves in packing houses, mills, factories, lumber yards and great distributing warehouses of merchandise.

"Chicago's banks and trust companies are without question the peer of any in the world, yet they are essentially commercial current institutions. Investing with them is an incident and not a practice. Behind these banks and trust companies of Chicago lies no secondary line of financial institutions such as life, fire and miscellaneous insurance companies which are found in New York, Hartford, Des Moines, Detroit, and a score of smaller cities. Money is more abundant and more available in such centers. A constant stream of dollars is pouring into every insurance center for permanent investment for developing purposes, for the assistance of banks in time of stress, and is an additional safeguard and entrenchment for the credit of a community.

"I know of my own knowledge several cases where during the panic of last year insurance companies came to the aid of banks and sold them securities acceptable to the United States Government for circulation, taking pay for them in other securities equally satisfactory to the insurance companies but unavailable for circulation purposes at Washington. Without that assistance some of the banks would have gone to the wall, damaging the credit of the community much more than the private fortunes of the men back of the banks.

"Much has been said about Chicago's insurance institutions. There have been failures—but there have been failures in other cities. There have been wildcats, as there have been wildcats in other cities.

"Chicago has been indifferent to the insurance business because it has had so many other projects requiring activity and attention. It is my judgment that the time has now arrived for the encouragement and development of insurance institutions in Chicago to collect, hold, safeguard and invest a large portion of the four hundred millions of dollars each year invested by the Middle West in insurance. One could stand here for a day and recount the greatness of Chicago—its bank clearings, tonnage, pre-eminence of its grain and cattle marts. With those figures you are familiar.

"Chicago has been so used to doing things in a big way—being predominant in every line of endeavor, that it has overlooked a great source of strength, stability and power. In Milwaukee many years ago an insurance company was moved to that city. It was wisely managed and helpfully encouraged and to-day thirty-three millions each year is the revenue that company brings to Milwaukee. I am hopeful that the same thing can be done in Chicago. I am backing my judgment because I am bringing to this community a company capitalized for a million dollars and an equal amount of surplus, to do every form of insurance except fire and life. There is no reason why it should not be of benefit to Chicago in a great degree, and I shall be very much disappointed if in a reasonable time it does not do for Chicago what the company referred to has already done for Milwaukee.

"There has been and still is a large indifference to institutions of this kind in Chicago. Insurance is a technical question. Men who would not consciously do anything to injure a Chicago institution of this character answer any inquiries with the terse but unhappy phrase, "I have no information." This is certainly damning with faint praise to say the least. On the other hand, the individuals referred to cannot be blamed. Their statement is correct. They have no information. They are unwilling to give endorsement to something of which they know nothing. To remedy that difficulty and to encourage insurance enterprises to enter and remain in Chicago I suggest the appointment of an insurance committee of this body. On that committee I would suggest should be representatives of banking, manufacturing, law and transportation. That committee should investigate and pass upon the merits of new enterprises endorsing those that are fit and withholding endorsements from those that are not, and be in position to supply any information desired about insurance companies located in Chicago, and offer all information to companies seeking to locate here.

"Ten years from to-day Chicago should have an annual income from insurance premiums of two hundred million dollars."

Light Weight—the Fallacy of the Automobile Age

“Strength is never present unless there is body, and body means weight. Cut down weight and you cut down body, weaken the strength and sacrifice safety and durability.”

“Don’t be misled either by statements that ‘we use chrome-nickel steel’ or any other fancy sounding material. It isn’t the quality of the material that insures your safety, but the quantity of good material. Steel may show tensile strength of 100,000 pounds to the square inch, but if rolled out to the thinness of tin it would bend in the hands of a child.”

These paragraphs are from the latest book issued by the makers of the self-starting, six-cylinder

WINTON SIX

This booklet handles the subject of weight in a thorough, fearless way. It points out that while every claim put forth on behalf of light-weight and feather-weight cars may be true, there are other considerations more vital to every automobile buyer.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

The Lincoln County Bank of Merrill is sending out a "Lincoln Centennial" calendar, which bears a splendid steel plate engraving of the "Great Emancipator."

La Crosse Banks

The only change in the officers or directors of La Crosse banks at the annual election was: Paying-teller R. C. Whelpley appointed assistant cashier of the National Bank of La Crosse, in place of Alfred Bosshard, resigned on account of ill health.

The Wisconsin Trust Company

At the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Trust Company of Milwaukee, there were two changes made in the list of officers and directors. Gardner P. Stickney was elected vice-president in place of Frederick Kasten, and H. M. Thompson was elected a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Frank L. Vance. Mr. Stickney also retains the office of treasurer, which he formerly held.

The only significance to the resignation of Mr. Kasten and the election of Mr. Stickney to the vice-presidency of the company is that of a well-merited promotion of Mr. Stickney, who has been very close to O. C. Fuller, the president, and his "right-hand man" in the bond business for many years, and at the time the old firm of Oliver C. Fuller & Company was organized into the Wisconsin Trust Company, he became its secretary, later on its treasurer and now, the end of the fifth year, its vice-president.

The officers and directors are as follows: Oliver C. Fuller, president; Gardner P. Stickney, vice-president; Fred. C. Best, secretary; R. L. Smith, assistant secretary.

L. J. Petit, Chairman; Herman W. Falk, Isaac D. Adler, Frederick Kasten, Chas. Schriber, Henry M. Thompson, Gustave Pabst, Patrick Cudahy, R. W. Houghton, Oliver C. Fuller, Gardner P. Stickney.

First National of Grand Rapids

During the last three years the First National of Grand Rapids has more than doubled its business. It has added a large number of ladies to its list of customers and important interests have become connected with it. Besides these the farmers in this vicinity have come to understand that the officers of the First National make it their business to accommodate them and conduct the business in such a way that the farmer can derive almost as much benefit from a bank account as a merchant.

To meet these growing needs several additions are to be made to the interior arrangement. Just off the lobby on the First Street side will be a very attractive and complete ladies' writing room. This room will be furnished with desk, chairs, stationery and everything to make business transactions as easy and pleasant as possible. Adjoining this room will be toilet conveniences for the exclusive use of the ladies.

Ladies will always be made welcome in these rooms and invited to make them their down-town headquarters whether they have any business to transact or not.

The men will be provided with a room on the opposite side of the building.

The counter will also be extended and another wicket added for the use of customers having business with the bookkeeper or collection clerk.

The necessary cabinet and marble work is being prepared and the additions will be made as soon as this work is completed.

N. D. Fratt Retires

Nicholas D. Fratt, the oldest bank director and president in the state of Wisconsin, has tendered his resignation as president of the First National of Racine on account of his ill-health, being obliged to make his home in Richland, Cal. Mr. Fratt is unquestionably the oldest living bank president in the United States. He became a director of the Racine County Bank in 1853, and a few years after was elected its president and served up to 1858, when the bank was reorganized as the First National. He has acted as director and president since that time, making the terms of his directorship fifty-six years, and of his presidency fifty-one years. Frank L. Mitchell has been elected president to fill the vacancy.

Summer Trip being Planned

The summer trip by the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Milwaukee was discussed at a meeting of the committee of jobbers Wednesday afternoon. The route will be either a trip to South Dakota, Montana and part of Minnesota, or along the Michigan shores of Lake Michigan by chartered boat.

Recommendations for the Department of Banking

In his message to the legislature, Governor Davidson says: "Since the reorganization of the Department of Banking in 1903, there has been much improvement in the business of banking, and greater confidence on the part of the public in the stability and safety of state banks. Although, during the past year the country has passed through what threatened to be a panic, involving serious consequences to financial and public interests, yet only three banks in this state were taken in charge by the commissioner of banking, and were soon reopened and are now doing business without loss to depositors. In some states the statute provides that a director must own some substantial amount of the capital stock of the bank before he shall be eligible for that office. An amendment to our statutes in this respect is worthy of careful consideration.

Another matter which would, in a large degree, facilitate the proper and expeditious examination of banks by the department is one of bookkeeping.

Consideration should be given to excessive loans to officers and directors of banks, and to enterprises in which such officers are financially interested. This practice in recent years has caused the wrecking of many banks in this country. How to deal with this matter is not easy of solution. If a definite limit is placed on such loans, it would work injustice, in some cases. A remedy might be afforded by giving the commissioner greater discretionary powers respecting this class of loans when he finds them reaching a dangerous limit.

National banks, and banks in many states having a system of supervision, are examined semi-annually, thereby increasing the safety of deposits. I recommend that the statute be so amended as to require semiannual examinations. This will necessitate an increase in the number of examiners, but the additional security afforded will justify the added expense. Provision should be made by which the Commissioner of Banking may receive the salary due him, and also to reenact the statute in a constitutional manner.

In and Around Pittsburgh

By
 LATIMER T. LAWTON

The directors of the defunct Cosmopolitan National of Pittsburgh will have to make good the $75,000 of the city's money that was in the bank when it failed, some months ago.

The suit of Delinquent Tax Collector L. R. Goshorn against the directors was decided in his favor by Judge Frazer, and the directors are ordered to make good the amount.

When Goshorn deposited the money in the Cosmopolitan the directors agreed to sign a bond, protecting him, stipulating that the bond would not become effective until it bore the signatures of all the directors. The defense was that two members of the board had failed to sign the bond and that, necessarily, the bond was not binding. Judge Frazer refused to take this view of the case.

Sentenced to Fifteen Years

J. B. F. Rinehart, former cashier and vice-president of the Farmers' and Drovers' National of Waynesburg, Pa., which failed over two years ago for $2,000,000, was found guilty of wrecking the bank. He was immediately sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary by United States Judge James S. Young and was taken to the prison in the afternoon.

Immediately after the verdict had been returned a number of the jurors were instructed by the court to confer with United States District Attorney Dunkle and a consultation followed in the latter's office. This conference was for the purpose of procuring additional information concerning the alleged attempt to bribe a member of the jury, for which two men are now in custody and a third arrest is expected momentarily.

Dunkle refuses to make public the name of the third man wanted. He says, however, that the man was shadowed by secret service men and special agents of the department of justice, sent there from Washington. He intimates that the arrest will cause a sensation owing to the prominence of the person.

It takes the place of the Allegheny National, which ceased to be a depository last May. The Farmers' and Mechanics' National of Philadelphia acts in that capacity for the eastern division.

The Freehold Bank

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, January 21.—With the exception of lawyers and farmers, there are more bankers in the Iowa legislature now in session here than members of any other business or profession. And the bankers are among the foremost members of the body both in the senate and house of representatives. Bankers in the senate are: Joseph H. Allen of Pocahontas, John Foley of New Hampton, Edwin H. Hoyt of Lamont, George McCulloch of Humeston, A. C. Savage of Adair, W. B. Seeley of Mount Pleasant, Fred H. Smith of Burlington, W. N. Stuckslager of Lisbon, Lewis L. Taylor of Centerville.

Bankers in the house of representatives are: William Anderson of Jewell, W. H. Arney of Marshalltown, Wellington I. Beans of Oskaloosa, Nathaniel W. Beebe of Hampton, James W. Bowman of Marion, John L. Derrough of Indianola, Willoughby Dye of Macedonia, R. M. Finlayson of Grundy Center, George E. Grier of Deep River, Thor O. Hanson of Bode, Karl F. Johnson of Osage, George A. Kellogg of Missouri Valley, George W. Koontz of Iowa City, Ernest R. Moore of Cedar Rapids, George W. Schee of Primghar.

Opposed to Guaranty Idea

The appointment of Senator Stuckslager of Linn county as chairman of the senate committee on banks and banking is believed to augur badly for the guaranteed deposits bill which is sure to be sprung. Senator Stuckslager is a well known banker and is opposed to the guaranty idea. It is probable that needed bank legislation will receive kindly treatment at the hands of himself and his committee however. The house committee on banks and banking has not as yet been named. E. R. Moore, the Cedar Rapids banker, is chairman of the committee on appropriations, one of the most important in the house. Mr. Moore has introduced a bill to make Lincoln's birthday a legal holiday.

Tax Law Revision

It is apparent that much of the important legislation of the session will pertain to tax law revision. W. L. Harding of Woodbury, has presented a bill looking towards the establishment of a commission of three persons who shall devote their time to an investigation of the tax laws of other states, and devise needed improvement in the Iowa statutes.

The bill provides for the appointment of the commission by the governor. Senator Saunders is fathering a measure for the registering of mortgages, Dr. Jewell of Winneshiek county, has one providing that mortgages be taxed in the county in which the real estate is located, and another bill providing for the taxation of railroad terminals locally instead of by mileage is contemplated.

Bank Changes

The week closing January 16th witnessed numerous bank meetings throughout Iowa, and consequently many changes. In brief, the Des Moines banks which held meetings and the changes, are as follows:

Des Moines Savings, Homer A. Miller chosen president, succeeding Simon Casaday, resigned. E. K. Butler of Chicago, elected director to succeed Simon Casaday.

Marquardt Savings, John H. Hogan advanced from assistant cashier to cashier.

County Funds

County Treasurer Dobson of Polk county has been experiencing rather an exciting time in getting the county funds placed at interest. Mr. Dobson asked each bank in the county how much it would pay for the use of the county funds. For several days none replied and rumors began to spread that the banks would refuse to take the money at all. F. M. Hubbell, a millionaire and the richest man in Iowa, entered the proceedings at this stage and asked to be permitted to take the funds and pay 2 per cent interest. But since then seven of the banks have made a proposition to the county treasurer to pay 2 per cent interest at the end of each month. The seven first considered in the distribution of the county money are the Mechanics Savings, Central State, Valley National, Marquardt Savings, Peoples Savings, Iowa Trust and Savings, Iowa State.

New York Exchange at Chicago

A cashier of one of the Des Moines banks is reported to have cleared up a nice little sum for his institution by watching closely the rate of New York Exchange at Chicago. When the demand becomes pressing, he wires the Chicago correspondent to transfer $10,000 or more to the New York account. On one occasion, New York exchange in Chicago commanded a premium of 25 cents, and at other times the premium has been worthy of transference, so he states.

Banking Notes

John B. McDougall, who for nine years has been teller in the Century Savings, has resigned to become teller in the Central State of Des Moines.

President and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds have gone to the Pacific coast for an extended trip of two months.

Fred Walker, formerly cashier of the Central State, who went to Albany, Oregon, because of his wife's health six months ago, has accepted a position temporarily with the Mechanics Savings, taking the place of F. H. Simpson, resigned. Walker, at the time he was made cashier of the Central State in 1904, was the youngest man in the banking history of Des Moines advanced to so responsible a position.

F. M. Hubbell, the millionaire capitalist, celebrated his 70th birthday Saturday night by entertaining twenty-five of his friends, mostly bankers, at his palatial residence on Grand Avenue, Terrace Hill. Mr. Hubbell's wealth is several millions, but during his entire lifetime he has taken but one vacation, and that a short fishing trip.

The Millersburg Savings of Millersburg has filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State. Capital stock is $10,000. W. E. Lauger of North English, is president; Jacob Bauer of Millersburg, is vice-president, and L. W. Hatter of Marengo, is cashier.

Des Moines bank clearings showed another tremendous gain for the week ending January 16th. The clearings totaled $3,556,284.76, a gain over the corresponding week last year of $860,848.61.

The Peoples Savings at Shellsburg has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $25,000. This was formerly the Harbert bank.

The Milford Savings has closed its doors and gone out of business, and the Milford National has begun business at Milford. The new institution has a capital stock of $25,000.

John Oleson, cashier of the Winnebago bank at Forest City and recently named state bank examiner, was in Des Moines last week calling upon Des Moines bankers and visiting at the state bank department in the state house.

Ed C. Brown, formerly a banker at Sheldon, and a well known Iowa politician, has suffered a stroke of paralysis at Glendive, Montana, resulting in the loss of sight of one eye and the partial use of one side of the body.

The American Trust and Savings at Cedar Rapids has increased its capital stock to $100,000.

A. B. Shriver, a Winterset banker who recently became interested in the Mason Motor Car Company of Des Moines, has established in Des Moines the A. B. Shriver Investment Company.

So far as is known, the only newspaper editor in the state to be bank president is C. A. Smith, of the Farmers State at Dyersville. Mr. Smith publishes the Dyersville Commercial, and he was elected president of the bank at the annual meeting last week. Editor Smith is interested in several Dubuque county banks.

The Breda Savings at Breda has increased its capital stock from $20,000 to $30,000.

The Continental Trust Company

Baltimore, January 20.—The Continental Trust Company, of Baltimore, has declared a semiannual dividend of 6 per cent instead of 5 per cent as was done six months ago, thus placing the stock upon a 12 per cent annual basis. After deducting the dividend, a comfortable sum remains from the earnings in the last 12 months, which was added to the surplus. After the directors' meeting had adjourned, the stockholders met and elected the board of directors to serve during the ensuing year. Frank A. Furst, John M. Dennis, and F. W. Feldner were elected members of the board to fill vacancies.

The Citizens National, of Baker City, Ore., is completing its new building costing $75,000.

John Reynolds Dead

John Reynolds, for thirty years president of the Paterson (N. J.) Savings Institution, and for many years one of the vice-presidents of the First National, died suddenly last week. Mr. Reynolds had been in poor health for several years, but a recent examination of his physical condition resulted in physicians declaring he was in excellent trim.

He never had missed a day at his bank until 1907, when he underwent an operation. He made a perfect recovery, and January of last year was able to resume duties at his desk.

The capital stock of the Citizens Bank of Lake City, Minn., has been increased from $35,000 to $50,000.

New Book by Oppenheim

That versatile English novelist, E. Phillips Oppenheim, who has met world-wide favor with discriminating readers, has turned out his twentieth novel. The title is "The Missioner," published in America by Little, Brown & Co., of Boston. Mr. Oppenheim's plots are the result of a masterful art and cannot be described. Of a truth his readers are entitled to them fresh from his hand. They always are ingenious, woven about attractive characters, with a "mystery" added as seasoning. No writer is so familiar with English high life as it actually is to-day or can use his knowledge so effectively. The new book is no exception to the rule and is of absorbing interest.

Inauguration of a Bank President

Thos. W. Lawson is writing a series of articles in the New England Magazine on "The Future of Our Country," in the usual brilliant Lawsonesque style. In writing of the early days, Mr. Lawson says:

"The only stock market report of the later seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries was the milkman's tabulations on the kitchen door or the farmer's on the hatchways of the corn and mangel silo. Dividend days came only with leap years, and the art of cutting coupons was not even in its kindergarten stage.

"Corporations and trust charters were issued from the general stores after being duly signed and sealed on the heads of mackerel barrels in the presence of the entire community.

"The installation of the bank president meant a holy day for all the country round, and the appointment of the cashier was a religious rite, while no one would dream of depositing a shilling without calling the teller's attention to its 'In God we trust,' which was understood by all to be the real asset behind the promise to pay."

The American Bank and Trust Company

The new American Bank & Trust Co., of Rome, Ga., will open for business this month, with a capital of $500,000, and the following officers: George D. Pollock, as president; T. J. Simpson, vice-president; C. A. Wilkerson, cashier, and A. B. Montgomery, assistant cashier.

The Trust Company of New Jersey

Directors of the Trust Company of New Jersey, of Hoboken, N. J., have declared the regular semiannual dividend of 6 per cent.

General Edward P. Meany has been elected first vice-president, succeeding the late E. F. C. Young, and George A. Berger has been elected second vice-president. George F. Smith was elected a director.

American State Bank

The application of the American State Bank of Caldwell, Idaho, to become a national bank has been approved by the Comptroller, and the bank will be nationalized within the next few weeks, with a capital stock of $50,000, which is an increase of $25,000 over its former capitalization.

British Board of Trade

The British Board of Trade returns show that the imports in 1908 were $2,965,703,615, a decrease of $263,336,095 as compared with 1907. The exports were $1,886,097,895, a decrease of $244,077,570.

Banking Reforms Suggested for Iowa

In writing to the Northwestern Banker upon needed bank law reforms in Iowa, J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust & Savings Bank at Clinton, among other things said:

"The state and savings banks of Iowa handle the bulk of the commercial business of the state. They are the creature of the state and their creator should see to it that all incorporated banks in the state stand on an equal footing. I, therefore, desire to suggest a few changes and additions to the present law, all of which, in my opinion, tend to better banking.

"State and savings banks should be required to publish at least five statements annually on call of the auditor instead of four as has been customary. The auditor should keep in touch with the comptroller of the currency and make his calls for corresponding dates. Such a plan would be invaluable for purposes of comparison. There is nothing in the present law that prohibits more than four calls, but unless the law is made compulsory, it is doubtful if an auditor will ever be elected who will call for five or more statements in any one year.

"State examiners should be required to make at least two annual examinations. This would entail added expense, but it is probably a sufficient answer to any objection on this ground that there is little reason for the existence of a bank in a community if the earnings are insufficient to warrant two annual examinations.

"It should be made unlawful for state and savings banks to count national bank notes as legal reserve. A national bank note is nothing more than a promise to pay, and the bank might just as well put the notes of its customers in the safe and count them as reserve. The principle is wrong, and we will take a long step in the direction of sound finance when our national bank notes are taken out of the realm of basis money, but so long as state and savings banks (and some national banks, too, when the examiner has his back turned) continue to lock them up in the safe and give them the character of specie, so long will our currency system remain unscientific and the real source of each recurring financial panic.

"The banks in which a portion of the reserve may be deposited should be selected subject to the approval of the auditor's office. In fact I would pattern the law pretty closely along the lines of the national banking act. As to whether or not a bank should be permitted to deposit any of its reserves in a national bank, is an open question. The national banking act discriminates against state banks in that particular, but it is doubtful if that requirement of the national banking act is sound, and therefore legislation along that line should be carefully weighed.

J. H. INGWERSEN

"State and savings banks should not be required to publish the names of banks in which their reserve funds are deposited. The requirement serves no useful purpose beyond the annoyance caused by letters from other banks soliciting a larger share of the bank's business, and it does sometimes lead to embarrassing consequences. Suppose, for instance, the city correspondent of a state bank fails at or about the time a statement is called for by the auditor. The balance kept there may be small, but the compulsory publication of the fact is liable to misconstruction, and may have a bad effect on people unfamiliar with banking matters.

"It should not be required of state and savings banks that they publish the amount of the liability to the bank on the part of the directors. All such information ought to be furnished to the auditor, and the law if need be, made even stronger than it is now, but its publication in the newspaper is an unfair discrimination against state and savings banks, as it permits a competitor to criticize a statement for something his statement would show to a greater degree if compelled to make the fact public.

"There is nothing inherently wrong in a loan to a director direct or to a corporation for which a director endorses. Bank directors are usually selected from the leading and most responsible business men, but since experience has demonstrated the fallibility of bankers as well as men engaged in other lines of business, it is in line with good banking to require banks to furnish the state with detailed information as to loans to directors, either directly or indirectly. That, however, is as far as the law should go.

"Personally, I favor one system of banking only. The national banking act should be repealed and a new law adopted providing for the various classes of banks required for the proper conduct of the multifarious business interests of the country.

"A feasible plan can be worked out, although it would be useless to do so in the space at my disposal in your good paper.

"When we have such a system banking can be put on the scientific basis it merits."

The Western Bank of Canada

The stockholders of the Western Bank of Canada have rejected an offer of a syndicate to purchase the stock of the institution, and, as a result, the concern probably will be absorbed by the Standard Bank of Canada. The Western Bank is capitalized at $555,000, and it is said that its shareholders will accept $160 a share from the Standard Bank rather than take $165 a share from the syndicate, whose representative is Aemilius Jarvis, of Toronto. The Standard Bank will have 96 branches if the deal is closed, 26 of which will be added by the absorption of the Western Bank. It is probable that the capital of the Standard Bank will be increased $500,000 to $2,000,000.

The Egg Harbor Commercial Bank

The Egg Harbor, N. J., Commercial Bank reports capital of $25,000, surplus $25,000, undivided profits $8,595, and deposits of $250,000. Robert Oymmeiss is president, Ernest A. Schmidt, vice-president, and Herman Dietz, cashier.

National Banks Organized

During December, 1908, eighteen national banking associations, with total capital of $2,415,000, were authorized to begin business. Of the number chartered, nine, with capital of $225,000, were banks with individual capital of less than $50,000; and nine, with capital of $2,190,000, banks with individual capital of $50,000 or over.

The number of banks chartered since March 14, 1900, is 4,038, with authorized capital of $241,563,300, of which 2,606, with capital of $67,880,500, were incorporated under the act of that date; and 1,432, with capital of $173,682,800 under the act of 1864. From the date last mentioned until December 31st, 529 state banks, with capital of $36,610,800, were converted into national banks, 1,282 state and private banks reorganized as national banks, with capital of $83,362,000; and 2,227 banks, with capital of $121,590,500, organized independently of other banks. As will be seen, the capital of the latter class slightly exceeds the combined capital of the conversions and reorganizations.

The number of national banks organized under various acts is 9,302, as follows: Four hundred and fifty-six, February 25, 1863; 6,230, June 3, 1864; ten, July 12, 1870 (gold banks), and 2,606, March 14, 1900. Two thousand four hundred and thirteen national banks have discontinued business, and there were in existence on December 31st, 6,889 banks with authorized capital $933,020,275, and circulation outstanding secured by bonds $628,786,205. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding is $677,068,165, of which $48,281,960 is covered by lawful money of a like amount, deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which have reduced their circulation.

Of the 6,865 national banks reporting to the Comptroller of the Currency, under the last call, there were:

Bank Regulation in California

Bank regulation in California is the subject of a very comprehensive bill to be introduced by Senator Leavitt. The bill is the result of deliberation on the part of a joint committee appointed at the last special session and on the part of the California Bankers Association. It is not quite as stringent in its provisions as the bill suggested by the governor's message, but it greatly enlarges the scope of bank examination and throws many new safeguards around depositors. The minimum reserve required is not raised above the 15 per cent provided for by the present law, but banks are forbidden to deposit more than 5 per cent of their funds with any one institution. No director is permitted to sell any of his own bank's mortgages without the written consent of the superintendent of banks.

The superintendent of banks is an office to be created by the act and to be held by one appointed by the governor for a 4-year term, at a salary of $10,000 a year, and the incumbent is to have had practical experience as a banker and to give a $50,000 bond. His chief deputy will serve for three years and receive $4,000 a year. The office of the superintendent is to be in San Francisco, although he may keep suitable rooms for the transaction of business in Los Angeles. Should he know of a bank doing business in an unlawful manner or existing in a state of danger and fails to close it, he becomes a felon. The reports he is to receive from the banks are so comprehensive that nothing short of criminality could account for his failure to do his duty. Banks suspected of unsoundness are given ten days in which to show cause why their affairs should not be wound up.

Soliciting Ideas from Employees

The National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis has offered four prizes to its employees for the best ideas concerning the arrangement of its quarters in the new building. The institution has 350 employees, all of whom are eligible to participate in the contest. For the best suggestion $100 will be paid; for the second, $75; for the third, $50; and for the fourth, $25.

The object in offering prizes is not only to interest the employees in the bank's plans, but to obtain practical ideas.

The bank has just completed an addition to its building, and is preparing to construct another. When the building is completed, it will front a whole block on the east side of Broadway, from Olive Street to Pine Street, and the bank will occupy the basement and at least three floors of the sixteen-story edifice. The employees will submit ideas for the best arrangement of the banking rooms and offices, as well as the banking, trust, safety deposit and investment departments, on the various floors.

The National Bank of Commerce is renting offices in its addition. It has rented the whole of the twelfth floor of the new structure to Boyle & Pries, attorneys. The offices and suites are being rented or leased rapidly.

Clark Williams of New York Denies Rumor

Clark Williams, Superintendent of the State Banking Department, on Saturday authorized a denial of the report connecting his name with the presidency of the Guaranty Trust Company. Mr. Williams said he knows nothing about the matter and that he is devoting his entire attention to the work of the department and to the commission appointed by Governor Hughes to probe into the exchanges.

The Wall Street Journal says: "There is no one to whom Wall Street wishes better things than the State Superintendent of Banks, Clark Williams, but it does not wish to see him surrender his present position even to become president of the Guaranty Trust Company. That institution would be lucky to get him, but the financial community does not want to lose the best superintendent of banks the state has ever produced.

"Mr. Williams is one of those men who gets results quietly, removing obstacles as he goes about his work, where other men much more widely advertised seem to do nothing but create them. The ideal reformer is the man who does not call himself anything of the kind, and whether Mr. Williams accepts a well deserved promotion or not he will at least be able to say that he brought about the most important reform in banking in the present generation. Without calling for legislative help or public attention, he supplemented the old exasperating 'average' statement of the Clearing House banks with the fullest weekly bank showing published at any financial center in the world."

Washington's Inheritance Tax

Washington's inheritance tax law is producing an annual income of $55,000, according to the biennial report of the state tax commission now in preparation. This shows that during the first four years the law was in operation, ending June 13, 1905, the total receipts from this tax was $53,175.35. Later this collection was placed with the tax commission and in the two years ending June 30, 1908, the commission turned into the treasury $11,022.81, with 2,274 cases for the collection of the tax pending in the courts. Foreign countries have protested to the national secretary of state that a law passed by the last legislature violates treaty agreements in that it levies a heavier tax on properties passing to non-resident foreign heirs than is levied where the heirs reside in the United States. However, the commission declares the law is a model one and the only amendment suggested is one requiring copies of inventories of all estates to be sent to the commission. The committee will recommend a new law which will cut off the right of inheritance of collateral heirs beyond the third degree of relationship.

New Company Incorporated

By this 1,400 miles of trackage will be under the management of the new corporation. The amalgamation is for convenience of operation. The following officers will manage the new company: H. R. Williams, president; E. D. Sewall of Chicago, vice-president; A. M. Ingersoll of Tacoma, vice-president; E. J. Pearson of Seattle, chief engineer; H. H. Field of Seattle, general counsel; E. W. Cook of Seattle, secretary; F. G. Ranney of Chicago, treasurer; A. H. Barkley of Seattle, assistant treasurer; W. N. D. Winne of Chicago, general auditor, and C. E. Kent of Seattle, accountant.

H. M. Kilborn Receives Loving Cup

James Stillman, of the National City Bank of New York, has presented No. 8 City Bank Club with a check for $10,000.

The club is made up of the employees of the bank, numbering about 370. It was formed four years ago as a social organization. Mr. Stillman then placed $10,000 in its treasury. Monthly lectures on banking topics are given under the direction of the organization, which also encourages indoor and field athletics. The new gift will be used in the same lines of activity.

To Horace M. Kilborn, vice-president of the bank, has been presented a silver loving cup from the officers, in recognition of his services extending over many months in carrying out the details required in supervising the moving from the former quarters to the present banking rooms in the old Custom House.

The Packers National

On September 12, 1908, the Packers National of South Omaha, Nebr., threw open the doors of its new home and extended a glad hand to the public. Between Chicago and San Francisco it is doubtful if any bank is better housed, indeed, it is hard to suggest where betterments could be made. The building is the embodiment of dignified security in structure, design, and finish. From its bomb-proof vaults to the solid bronze of its entrance doors, every bit of its material is just what it should be in each case, and in each case it is just what it pretends to be. In short, it is a fitting home for the institution it houses, and ought to add, if possible, to the satisfied security that this bank's patrons have always enjoyed in the institution they have chosen to safeguard their earnings. In arrangement, plan, etc., the building is strictly a bank building, with not one of the essential points even modified to fit any other purpose. Following the lead of the prominent institutions of our great cities, the Packers National is a bank, and a bank only. A one-story and basement building proportioned to its business, not overlooking the probable growth of another ten years. The style is French Renaissance used rather forcefully than otherwise as becomes the purposes of this building. The walls are of red brick laid in white mortar and lavishly trimmed and embellished with a cool buff limestone, brought all the way from Indiana. Its window and door openings are grilled with solid iron and bronze in a Greek fret pattern. In the basement is located the foundations of the great vault which is itself a basket work of the softest and hardest steels well interwoven and incased in portland cement concrete and lined with laminated chrome steel. Here also are the heating plant and rest rooms, with proper arrangements for a caterer, all so disposed as to leave the vault itself everywhere open to inspection to guard against masked attacks. In the basement also there are lavatories, showers, etc., and a small gymnasium. Concrete, steel, brick, stone, and iron are the structural materials; Grecian marble, solid stationary bronze, and mahogany its finishing dress. The first story is devoted to the bank proper with its public lobby, its cages, and its directors' and conference rooms. At the rear of the lobby comes the great vault with its very impressive bronze doors—bearing a veritable machine shop of gun-metal hinges, levers, wheels, etc., time-lock, and all, not overlooking the gongs in their cages, telling of the presence of the electric watchman who never sleeps. Above the vault is arranged a mezzanine story where much of the bank's work is done out of sight of the public, but commanding a full view of the public lobby through the screened archways that form the east wall of the main banking-room. Behind the cash vault comes the safety deposit vaults, and back of them a passage planned to secure two walls between the vaults and the outside. The vaults are flanked on one side by the bookkeepers and on the other by a locker room, lavatory, stairs, etc. The great banking-room is of quite pretentious proportions, being nearly two full stories in height, and everywhere its architecture and decoration is classic and its arrangement symmetrical. The prevailing tints are sunny green, warm red, ivory, and gold. The beautiful variegated tones of the Verde antique marble and the Patina of corroding bronze make an impressive background of nature's most wonderful greens to set off and give greater value to the mahogany of finish and furniture. A simple mural treatment in ivory and dull gold with a good stained glass ceiling panel completes a room that would be striking anywhere.

THE PACKERS NATIONAL BANK

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

IT develops that the dinner which was held at the Union League Club, by the ex-presidents and the present officers of the Illinois Bankers Association, was arranged in chief to give those gentlemen an opportunity to settle old scores with one Frank P. Judson. He had served ten years as secretary of the association and the silver set which the association members at large had given him did not quite satisfy such men as Catlin, Mitchell, Russel, Durham, Harris, and the rest so they got up the dinner as a surprise and gave Mr. Judson a fine horseshoe pin containing twenty-four diamonds.

JUDSON was completely upset and didn't have much to say, but the less he talked the more the others heaped compliments upon him. The dinner was fine and as intimated, formerly, the event, bar the pin may become an annual affair. Those ten or twelve ex-presidents, to which Blum is the latest addition, could scarcely be matched in any state. Hamilton made the presentation and Rinaman kept the vote, it being unanimous.

JUDSON went on the A. B. A. council, it will be remembered, as a reward of merit, and a less level headed man would lose his equilibrium even under less trying circumstances. But not so Mr. Judson. He "done his duty as he saw it" and the A. B. A. have seen to it that he is made aware of their appreciation of his long service.

W. G. EDENS has been missing from his usual haunts and from his desk at the Central Trust. One of those icy mornings last week he slipped and fell in the street, fracturing both bones in one leg in the fall. His friends kept St. Luke's telephone busy for the rest of the week telling him of other men who had suffered similar injuries "and never recovered." Such is human nature.

"OTTE AND GRIMME" reads like a headline at the vaudeville. They are a team all right, work together and work hard. For young men their records are admirable. One is a vice-president and the other cashier of one of Chicago's growing banks. Promotion has not been a gift from any one, but only is a reward for loyalty, ability, and for work—without which the other two must fail.

DEALERS in rare coins are becoming active. Buying and selling such is a profitable business. Bank tellers often pick up the rarest of specimens and sell them to active dealers to complete rare sets. Divver & Co., Atlanta, Ga., is one of the largest firms and their booklet should be in the inside pocket of every live money counter in every bank. "There's millions in it."

HERE'S a chance for the would-be banker orator. The Funk & Wagnalls Co., 44-60 East 23d Street, has published a book on "How to Develop Power and Personality in Speaking" which is about the last word. Every banker who has an impediment in his oratory, or whose heart thumps when he gets up to "speak a piece," should get a copy.

THOMAS C. KING of the Northern Trust Company Bank, of this city, is sending out a letter calling attention to the "travelers' cheques" and money orders, issued by his bank, and good at the face in any country where they use money. The cheques do not take the place of the regular letters of credit, issued by the bank.

THERE is a chance that the long cherished dream of the Illinois Bankers Association to "take a lake trip" and to hold their annual convention "on board ship," is to come true this year. Michigan and Ohio have tried this plan thoroughly and pronounce it a success. Mr. Judson wanted to adopt the plan years ago, but so many towns had been promised the convention that from year to year it was put off. Everyone seems to favor the outing plan where practicable. Secretary Rinaman will be glad of suggestions.

NEW memberships in the Illinois Association are going rapidly, under the new plan of something-for-your-money. More than thirty banks joined in the first month the "offices" were open at "1030 The Rookery," and five or six insurance policies per day is a low average. Mr. Rinaman feels elated over the progress of the work which is being systematized rapidly.

THE Illinois Association will keep "open house" during the A. B. A. convention in Chicago, and it is planned to present every attendant, member or guest, a handsome pin bearing just the one word "Illinois" in gold on a blue enamel oval, a pin designed and used by Mr. Hamilton. Beautiful young ladies will do the pinning.

T. S. CHAPMAN, president of the Jersey State Bank, at Jerseyville, Ill., with Mrs. Chapman is spending the winter in California. From the latest published reports of his bank, it isn't likely that his trip will reduce the surplus. It has recently doubled its capital and the new shares were paid out of surplus. The bank is but six years old and for five years has paid 10 per cent in dividends besides accumulating the 105 per cent stock dividend, paid January 26th. The deposits are still ten to one of capital. Hard to beat.

BANK directors, their powers, duties, and liabilities, by John J. Crawford, is being circulated by the Drovers Deposit National, of Chicago, as a booklet. It is neatly bound and is a valuable hand-book. Write to George M. Benedict for further "information."

OUR challenge for any state to compete with Mr. Weiser's Winnesheik County State Bank, at Decorah, Iowa, has been accepted by Carpenter's Monticello State Bank, at Monticello, Iowa, which city only claims two-thirds as many inhabitants (2,156) as Decorah. The Monticello bank has, in round numbers, one and one-half millions in deposits. The capital is $100,000, with surplus and profits of twice that amount. Now can any other state match the two Iowa gold mines, as above?

GEORGE WOODRUFF, of Joliet First National, was in the city this week and talked in favor of a bill at Springfield, favoring making the circulation of false rumors, or those intended to injure the credit of banks or financial institutions in the state an offense punishable at law. New York and several other states have given banks the benefit of such a law.

THE attention of Mr. Woodruff and others of the progressive type is called to page 235 of the January Journal of the American Bankers Association. There will be found drafts of many proposed laws, several of which are needed in Illinois quite urgently. The legal department of the A. B. A. is doing fine work and will furnish copies of the proposed bills to any one. Every bank in the United States should join the A. B. A. and read the Journal. To have Farnsworth and Paton and all of these committees working for you is worth one thousand times what it costs.

THE January Journal has an article on clearing house examinations, by Jos. T. Talbert, president of the Chicago Clearing House, which gives in precise English about what can, and some that cannot, be accomplished by them. They "do not cure all ills but they remedy many defects."

IF you didn't attend the Denver convention, but would like one of the association pins, as issued to delegates, all you have to do is to write to Farnsworth at the New York office, 11 Pine Street. They are the handsomest ever issued by the association. Mr. Farnsworth furnished some of these "extras" for the ladies on THE CHICAGO BANKER's Denver special and they were greatly appreciated.

WHO could have "opened" the brand new Nevada Bankers Association convention with a better address than George N. O'Brien of the American National, San Francisco? Nevada is in the infant class among the associations but had a good start. George H. Taylor, Washoe County Bank, at Reno, is the secretary.

A LADY banker writes in to say that the diagram which Robert B. Armstrong is using in his Consolidated Casualty Company advertising isn't "really" a heart but a shamrock leaf.

Must Pay Duty on Coin Currency

Duty was ordered paid on Japanese coin currency by the Board of United States General Appraisers, although the money was declared to be legal tender in Japan and consisted of gold, silver, copper, and cheaper metals. Some of the metal currency includes coins valued at two thousand to the dollar.

Hideshigie Kashiwagi, teller in the New York branch of the Yokohoma Specie Bank, picked out samples of the coins which he said would be accepted by his bank.

"All of them are genuine," he told the appraisers, "but some of them are more than one hundred years old. I am surprised to see some of these old metal coins in circulation. I think they have been hoarded by Japanese farmers; and for some reason or other they have been taking them out of their stockings. Some varieties of the coin are not often seen in commercial and banking circles, but they are current among the farmers in the back-country of Japan."

The importers of the tons of coin, Butler Bros., claim that it should come in free, as gold, silver, and copper coins under paragraph 530 of the tariff, or as manufacture of copper under paragraph 193. General Appraiser Fischer, in his decision, sustaining the collector in assessing duty at 45 per cent, says the coins are currency and cannot be copper manufacture, and the baser metal of some of the coins cannot be apportioned to permit free entry of the gold and silver coin.

State Regulation of Our Public Utilities and the Importance of Uniform Accounting

After long years of discussion, legislation, and litigation, the doctrine may now be considered settled that the state has the power to regulate and control the affairs of all public utilities operating under license grants (usually called "franchises") or which have the power of eminent domain. This power may be exercised directly by the legislature or, when properly delegated, by city councils or by commissioners created by the state.

In the past competition (either actual or potential) has been relied upon to secure good service to the public at reasonable rates. Competition has, however, been accompanied by "watered stock" and not infrequently by failure to respond to legitimate demands for extensions of service; and as an alternative to competition there was for a time a strong demand for public ownership, the echoes of which may still be heard.

The American people have an intuitive distrust of public ownership, arising partly from fear of the creation of a formidable political machine among employees and partly from fear of graft; yet they feel that competition, as a regulating force, has proven futile and they are turning to regulation by public authority. Where the power to regulate rates has been lodged in city councils no particular public benefit is discernible, and the direction of effort now is plainly toward the creation of commissions with great powers of control, not only of rates, but of services, extensions of facilities and general conduct of the business. Massachusetts has for more than twenty years had a commission law under which the affairs of gas and electric companies have been regulated by a board of commissioners. New York has two public service commissions—one for the metropolitan district and one for the rest of the state.

Wisconsin has added to the powers of the state board of railroad commissioners the duty and responsibility of supervising and controlling the affairs of all public utilities operating within the state. Georgia regulates public utilities by a commission, while Iowa, Missouri, and some other states have placed the power to regulate rates in the various city councils. The new state of Oklahoma has taken the longest step of all in the direction of paternalistic control of all public utilities.

Space will not permit a discussion of the relative merits from a public or private standpoint of competition, public ownership or regulation by public authority. The important fact to remember is that all methods voice the public demand for, and public belief that it is practicable to give, better service at lower rates than have prevailed. The commission plan is intended to accomplish these results, and its success or failure in popular opinion will rest upon the accomplishments in this direction.

The method is on trial in widely separated states under most diverse social, political and financial conditions, and the working out of the problem can be watched only with intense interest.

Commissioners are responsible primarily to the political party to which they belong and to the sources of their appointment, but in the end they must give account of their stewardship to the whole body of the people. Fortunately for all, the whole country is growing rapidly in wealth and population with the result that increased facilities for rendering service, as well as better service, are daily demanded. This means the investment of more capital, and if public service commissions reduce rates below a profitable standard, or otherwise impose unreasonable conditions, further capital will not be forthcoming, and in time the obstruction to progress must be removed.

By C. W. Knisely, C. P. A.

Just now radicalism is in control but the forces of conservatism, good sense, and pure patriotism, while (as usual) working quietly, are not dead.

True accountancy is a historical record of all essential details of a business so classified and arranged as to meet and even anticipate every important emergency. Every question raised by the supervision of the affairs of public utilities by commissions appointed in the public interest must be met by the accounts and the accounts must be designed to meet these questions.

Uniform systems of accounting for all public utility propositions have received much attention from those interested during the past decade or longer. The demand for this has been twofold. Proprietors or owners in any line of business are especially interested in knowing whether business is profitable or otherwise. They must learn this from their books of account, and at present public utility accounting has advanced in refinement until the generally accepted modern and adequate methods enable one to know the cost of production, distribution, and administration down to the last half penny in any and all the elements composing the economy of operation; likewise, the construction costs are arranged with due regard to the several classes of physical units. Again, the demand for legislative regulating of public utilities has been growing through a number of years and has for some time been observed and appreciated by private owners who have endeavored to get together on common ground to meet the issue in fairness to all parties in interest.

In reviewing briefly the general plan of accounting for public utility propositions, we will refer, in illustration, to the gas business. Monthly balance sheets, with supporting operating and construction statements, are a fixed rule at the present time in the conduct of business; and these statements, to be of value, must correctly show results from month to month. To do this, the system devised has made for uniformity of statement, that is, the correct amount of revenue earned and the actual expense incurred in producing this revenue must be brought together within the same period, and the net result thereof exhibited.

Accounts separate themselves into two general divisions: operation and construction.

Considering first the operation, the accountant is largely guided in his divisions and classifications by a study of the physical process. Gas is manufactured in a plant consisting of various attached buildings housing the machines and other physical units. In the plant certain materials are used and consumed to make the product. All that is necessary to produce gas is effected within this plant. We have, therefore, in the operation, one of the natural divisions of the economy—manufacturing.

When the gas has gone through all the processes of manufacture, the finished product is stored in a gasometer, or holder-tank. From the holder it is sent through iron pipes to the consumers. It is first let into street mains, consisting of large iron pipes, connected and laid along, and below the surface of the streets. From these mains other iron pipes, called services, are run to dwellings and places of business reaching the consumers' meters, a device that measures the consumption of gas. All expenses from the holder to the consumer are expenses of delivery or distribution, and the natural division of this part of the economy is called distribution.

From the foregoing, we see that a gas plant divides into a manufacturing system and a distributing system, the former taking in all physical units employed in manufacture, and the latter all units used in distributing the gas.

Every establishment of manufacture has what is styled administration, or general expense. The charges here are those of a general character and are applicable to the proposition as a whole.

In addition to the foregoing accounts, there are separate charges usually made of taxes, insurance, and interest; and, in some instances, depreciation is charged separately, but it is more generally considered an operating charge.

It might be well to say here that there is no fixed rule in figuring depreciation. In some instances it is figured on the separate units making up the physical properties, and in other instances figured at a fixed rate against the whole structural cost.

Construction or addition to property accounts represent the plant values, specifically enumerating the various classes of properties.

In every instance the charge leading up to operation or construction is clear, concise and perfect in detail, showing intelligent command of the business. It has been our experience in competitive systems, now at practically one uniform standard, that there has been no effort to cover up the true economy. On the other hand, it has been the single aim to show true results; and, in our judgment, competitive systems have effected this as nearly and perfectly as may be.

Commissions have not been in operation long enough to determine whether they are harmful or beneficial, or even effective. It may be said that whatever has been done by commissions has been criticised on account of its being unnecessarily elaborate and burdensome, and is rarely, if ever, scientific; and as the competitive systems are scientific, they meet commission accounting as a hostile measure. We cannot but think that the commission authorities, in considering their scheme of accounts, should study closely the recognized standard forms of accounts prepared by gas, electric light and other associations and generally adopted throughout the country. These associations refer, in their counsels governing these matters, to the best thought and experience that can be brought to bear upon them; and as much of the work that they are doing is designed to meet legislation fairly, their results can be relied upon as honest and comprehensive statements of public utility economies. We feel that state authorities should concede that the existing system is entitled to the presumption of being correct, and should stand as the commissions' system, unless they can show exact points wherein it is defective.

Public regulation of rates is intended to bring about lower rates and is now in the hands of friends of that effort. Commission accounting is usually designed arbitrarily, and is compulsory; and no system that is compulsory should be subject to the suspicion of concealing true conditions in order to support the claim that selling prices should be reduced.

Summing up on the situation, we think that those in authority should convene representative men of various lines of public utility propositions, and discuss, in the pure spirit of investigation, these matters of such common interest without prejudice, in order to determine the true rights of owners and protect them and their property to that extent.

Since we have had in mind presenting these remarks, we are pleased to learn that, in some instances, the point of calling conventions to consider these matters has been recognized.

The Peoples's Savings Bank of Clio, S. C., has been organized, with a capital of $25,000.

Currency Commission from the Banker's Viewpoint

Colonel Farnsworth, the hard working secretary of the American Bankers Association, spoke in part at the Buffalo meeting of Group One, New York Bankers Association, as follows:

The organization of the American Bankers Association antedates all state organizations. The first general association of bankers, formed in this country, was at Saratoga, New York, in 1875, when the American Bankers Association was launched.

This convention was attended by over three hundred bankers representing thirty-two states and territories.

The association now has a membership of over 10,000 with an annual income of about $160,000. This initial movement was followed by the organization of state associations, commencing with Illinois in 1880. We now have throughout this great union, forty-four state associations, most of them large, live and progressive organizations.

The New York State Bankers Association was organized in 1894, and in accordance with your last annual report, has 533 members. The available records in my possession show that there are 1,519 banks and trust companies in this state. The group system which has been taken up by very many of the states has proved a successful feature of state work. You have in this state, eight groups, all of which seem to be prosperous.

I do not believe it is necessary for me to dwell on the benefits of organization. With the progress of the times in this great country of ours, it became a necessity. We find it in religious denominations, in the arts and sciences, in business and commercial pursuits, the trades, and in the professions, not only for the protection of vast interests, but for the social welfare of mankind. This banding together of men, and of women as well, and brought together as you are here to-day, broadens vision from every view point. It cements friendships that are everlasting; it gives an interchange of thought and experience which cannot but be of benefit to you in your chosen profession. Stand by your groups, your state association and your national body. Assist your officers in building up these organizations, for it takes only a casual observer to realize that the work is being done for the common good of the community at large. The New York State Bankers Association is one of the successful organizations of its kind in the country, as it should be, representing the greatest aggregate of banking capital in any one section of the world.

Now a few words about the American Bankers Association and the scope of its work. This association has 824 members in New York state. This is a liberal proportion of the membership of the country, based on the number of banks in the United States.

There are present here this evening many members of the American Bankers Association, and some who are not members, but I feel that you will be mutually interested in what I wish to say about our work, which of necessity, must be brief. I might occupy the entire evening in enlarging on our various features.

The American Institute of Banking is comprised of 10,000 bank clerks, with some fifty chapters, and is one of the most important features of our various adjuncts. To educate the young bank clerk in the details of the profession by social intercourse, through conventions and chapter meetings; to give him confidence in his ability; to broaden his vision; to give him facilities for debate, thereby requiring study of abstract questions on banking, and to mould him in that most important feature of banking to-day—the affable, agreeable, and practical banker who can demand the respect of his clientele, and make the thorny paths of banking easy to travel when he comes in contact with the customer of the bank.

In addition to the executive body of the association, there are eleven active standing committees, and the older of these committees have been engaged in a work for some time that cannot but be of great benefit to the banking and business world. I refer particularly to the committee on bills of lading. This committee has secured the adoption of a uniform bill of lading and is still at work to complete this important departure.

The committee on express companies and money orders has been engaged in a vigorous fight against the express companies of the country, with a view to placing with the banks the busi-

Exports and Imports in 1908
Statistics now available show that the export trade of the United States for eleven months of 1908 fell $170,000,000 below the figures of the identical period of the year before. The imports were $307,000,000 less than in 1907. The largest proportionate falling off occurred in diamonds and other precious stones to the value of $12,000,000, as against $32,000,000 the year before. Cotton manufactures stood at $50,000,000, against $72,000,000 in 1907, the falling off in importation being specially noticeable in laces and embroideries.

Copper ore imports dropped from $8,000,000 to $6,000,000; copper in pigs from $37,000,000 to $20,000,000; chemicals declined $21,000,000, and raw cotton dropped from $20,000,000 to $12,000,000. Imports of hides and skins amounted to $52,000,000, against $74,000,000 in 1907. In silks, India rubber, and manufactures of wool a general decline is noticeable. Steel imports were $18,000,000 in 1908, and $37,000,000 the year before.

The $170,000,000 loss on the export side is also widely distributed. For the eleven months considered the total exports of finished manufactures amounted to $410,000,000 against $461,000,000 the year before. Foodstuffs show a drop of $32,000,000. A marked decline is noticed in iron and steel where the total exports for the eleven months were $139,000,000 against $182,000,000.

Wheat alone shows an increase amounting to $18,000,000 while corn declined $23,000,000. Breadstuffs as a whole showed a drop, the total export figure standing at $179,000,000 against $187,000,000 in 1907. Of meat and dairy products there were exported $20,000,000 less than the year before.

Frank P. Martin, who was for 21 years cashier of the Citizens Bank of Watseka, Ill., has sold his interest to Williams Brothers and he, with several others are organizing a new bank, which I understand is to have an increased capital and be located further up town.

Affairs of American Guaranty Company

At an informal meeting of the directors of the American Guaranty Company, 171 La Salle Street, this city, on Monday, the stock in the corporation held by the late Charles Latour Furey was offered for sale. Attorney George S. Steers appeared before the directors in behalf of Mrs. Furey, and after stating that his client was desirous of withdrawing from the business of the company gave the directors until February 2d to purchase the stock at a figure which the lawyer would not divulge. Mrs. Furey, the lawyer declared, is anxious to visit Europe and wishes to sell her stock (62 per cent) or liquidate the corporation.

Chicago Money Market

President Potter of the American Trust and Savings Bank of this city, says: "Money is easy and abundant everywhere West, and I see no signs of tightening. The business situation shows some improvement. The bond market is satisfactory. There is good investment in first-class issues, but people are more exacting than formerly regarding the character and yield. There is no unusual drift toward real estate that I can see."

Sidney C. Love & Co. Retire

The brokerage firm of Sidney C. Love & Co., Chicago, New York, St. Louis and Minneapolis, has announced its retirement from business. Lack of profits for a considerable period is given as the reason. An heiress wife (his second) who wishes to travel, figures also as a "tip." Mr. Love was a nephew of the Moores and for a time was their and Mr. Reid's broker in Rock Island and other matters.

Ohio Banking News

The proceedings of the eighteenth annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association, held at Alexandria Bay, Thousand Islands, New York, July 8, 1908, is out in attractive book form. This book of proceedings has several very attractive features. It contains besides the proceedings, constitution, and by-laws, a list of officers, members, etc., a map showing the nine groups of the association, a list of where the Ohio Bankers Association has been holding its conventions since 1891 to the present date, and the presidents of the association since 1892. The group secretaries' reports make some very interesting and instructive reading. This volume also contains some excellent half-tones of the officers and group chairmen of the association. A. E. Rice, of Fremont, is the president of the association for 1908-1909.

Cincinnati Debt Limit

Efforts recently put forth by the various civic bodies to bring about some modification of the Longworth act which governs the issuance of bonds by Ohio municipalities, it is believed will shortly bear fruit. The modifications are sought in order to give the city, which is up to its debt limit, power to issue bonds to provide funds for necessary improvements.

The general bonded indebtedness of Cincinnati is now $49,312,357 on an assessed valuation of property of $247,734,510. Of the total indebtedness $1,628,000 is for street assessment bonds, $6,983,000 sinking fund bonds, $11,395,000 water-works bonds, $2,500,000 Southern Railway Terminal bonds, and $15,958,000 Southern Railway bonds. It is shown by officials that the water-works department and the Southern Railway are more than self-sustaining and by deducting these debts, the net indebtedness of the city is only $10,847,000. The surplus of the Southern Railway rentals is calculated to be sufficient to pay the interest on the entire net debt of the city. Under the present law the city may issue only $148,000 of bonds while improvements which will cost about $4,000,000 are under contemplation.

The First National of Troy

The First National of Troy has completed the erection and equipping of its handsome new building, which is one of the most attractive in the entire state. The building was opened to the public recently and several hundreds of people visited the new quarters of the bank. Every provision is made for the comfort and convenience of the customers of the institution and the bank contains all modern facilities in furniture and fixtures. The First National succeeded, in 1862, to the business of the Miami County branch of the State Bank of Ohio, which was organized in 1847. The original charter number of the First National of Troy was 59. M. W. Allen has been president of the bank since 1865, and Cashier D. W. Smith has been assistant cashier and cashier of the bank since its organization in 1862. This is certainly a wonderful record. It speaks volumes for the excellence of the management of the bank and for the confidence which the community has in its affairs that the same management has prevailed and made the bank a success for so many years.

Home to be Bought by Bankers

Bankers of the state of Ohio will show their appreciation of such an officer as Marshal Clyde Wood, of Greenwich, who frustated an attempt at bank robbery and killed the leader of the gang, the notorious Eddie Quinn. Wood was shot through the lungs, and thought to have been fatally injured. He has recovered and returned to his home, and will again do duty as village marshal. While he was confined in a hospital friends started a movement among bankers, which has thus far resulted in raising $928, to be used toward the purchase of a home for the marshal.

The Peoples Savings Bank

The directors of the Peoples Savings Bank of Akron have elected the following officers: J. A. Kohler, as president; J. T. Diehm, vice-president, and John Gross, treasurer.

The Cincinnati Money Market

The Cincinnati money market continues easy. There is only a moderate demand and supplies of idle funds appear to be increasing. Collateral loans are negotiated at 4 to 4½ per cent on call and 4½ to 5 per cent on time.

The Cleveland Savings and Loan Company

Since opening in its new quarters in the Hollenden Building, the Cleveland Savings and Loan Company has added largely to its business, and particularly in deposits. The bank has occupied its new home for about six weeks and the number of new accounts opened and average deposits have been most gratifying. The management of the institution is more than ever satisfied with the wisdom of its judgment in making the change.

Dayton Bonds

The city auditor of Dayton invites sealed proposals until noon February 25th for $125,000 of 4 per cent public bonds in denominations of $250, dated February 1, 1909, maturing $9,000 annually to 1924. A certified national bank check of 5 per cent is required with proposals, and small bidders are to be given preference.

The Commercial National of Statesville

The new Commercial National of Statesville, N. C., will be started about February 1st. M. K. Steele is president; Eugene Morrison, vice-president; D. M. Ausley, cashier, and G. E. Hughey, assistant cashier. The capital of the institution is $100,000 and surplus $25,000.

First State Bank of Chilton

The First State Bank of Chilton, Tex., has been chartered with a capital of $20,000 by G. W. Riddle, of Dallas, and L. A. Speer, of Chilton, and others.

J. P. Murphy Dead

John P. Murphy, vice-president of the Milwaukee National of Milwaukee, Wis., and for years prominent in the financial and business affairs of the city, died Sunday evening, shortly after 6 o'clock, at his residence, 464 Lafayette place, after an illness extending over a period of about one year. Mr. Murphy was 59 years of age.

While not unexpected, the end came as a shock to his family and immediate friends and associates. During the latter part of the week, Mr. Murphy seemed to be improved slightly. A year ago Mr. Murphy was compelled to relinquish all work at the bank and undergo special treatment for heart and liver troubles, from which he had been suffering slightly for about a year previous. During last summer he so far recovered as to be able to resume partial work and he was at his desk for several hours each day. Following a fishing trip to one of the northern lakes, in June, he experienced a sudden relapse and from that time until his death he was confined a greater part of the succeeding months to his home.

At a special meeting Monday morning of the board of directors of the Milwaukee National, the following action was taken with reference to the death of the vice-president, John P. Murphy:

We have the painful knowledge of the death of our late associate, John P. Murphy, vice-president, a most highly esteemed officer of this bank.

By his death the public lost a citizen possessed of the highest standard of business integrity.

We lose a most genial companion and an officer whose judgment was good and commendable in all matters.

We tender to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, that as a testimony of our high regard for the deceased, we will attend the funeral in a body.

Highly encouraging was the report of the Kensington Trust Company, at 2638 Kensington Avenue, read at the annual meeting. Notwithstanding adverse business conditions last year, the Kensington financial institutions have been holding their own.

According to the report 737 new depositors were added and the deposits increased $112,000. The institution now at the close of its third year, has 2,621 depositors and about $380,000 total deposits. It was also shown that the amount of business done in the issuing of title insurance policies was greater than that of any other financial institution north of Market Street. In two and a half years that department has issued 1,055 such policies. In view of the prosperous condition of the company, it was voted to add $10,000 to the surplus fund.

The Western National

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Western National George E. Shaw was re-elected president and Edward J. Durban and Sidney Labe were elected vice-presidents. Alfred J. McGrath recently resigned as vice-president, and it was decided to have two vice-presidents hereafter.

Both of the new vice-presidents have been members of the board for some time. Mr. Durban is head of the well known firm of Durban & Co., insurance brokers, 403 Walnut Street. Mr. Labe is connected with Benjamin Labe & Sons, wholesale tobacco dealers.

The Trades League of Philadelphia

By the unanimous adoption of a resolution at the annual meeting of the Trades League of Philadelphia in the Bourse Building members of that organization directed their officers to take such steps as may be necessary to change its name to the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce.

The annual election of ten directors of the league was also held, in which the following were chosen: Finley Acker, Howard B. French, Thomas Martindale, Mahlon N. Kline, W. W. Supplee, Francis B. Reeves, Jr., Charles M. Biddle, John B. Croxton, W. W. Foulkrod and Louis A. Amonson. With the exception of Mr. Amonson, the directors chosen were re-elected.

Mahlon N. Kline, president of the body, in his annual report referred to the reasons which had actuated the officers in recommending the change in name. Delegates to national meetings, he said, had frequently been embarrassed and handicapped in their influence because of a misunderstanding of the scope of the work for which the league was organized.

The change is expected, moreover, to pre-empt an enlarging of the scope of activity and usefulness of the organization. In his report Mr. Kline dwelt at length upon this subject.

One of the features of the meeting was the address of Edward H. Ozmun, United States consul at Constantinople, who spoke on the subject, "The Expansion of Our Foreign Trade." He presented figures showing that the exports of this country during 1908 amounted to $1,800,000,000, of which only $37,000,000 was in manufactured goods.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Plans are under way by the Minnesota Bankers Association to get legislation at the present session of legislature for more rigid laws to prevent the attempt to borrow money from banks on misleading financial statements. Donald S. Culver, vice-president of the National German American, is one of the members of the committee to draft the bill.

George C. Power, president of the Second National says:

"While confidence is the basis of all business relations, recent developments in business circles have proved that present laws do not prevent deception on the part of corporations, and the result is that bankers are more cautious in making loans than they ever were before. Under the present law it is practically impossible to secure a conviction for such practices.

"A law such as is proposed will not work a hardship on those corporations which act in good faith, and it will go a long way toward eliminating dishonest practices among those concerns which want to do business with someone else's money."

G. H. Prince's Views

G. H. Prince, vice-president of the Merchants' National, said:

"You would be surprised if I told you the names of some of the firms in this city who were caught in this respect last year. Nothing was said about it at the time because affairs were eventually straightened out, but bankers must be protected in some manner, and I am of the opinion that a more strict law is absolutely essential."

Disapproves of Proposed Bill

State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart, a Slayton banker, disapproves of a proposed bill in the Minnesota legislature compelling the deposit of state, county, and municipal funds in state banks. It is generally understood that the plan is to aid a proposed bank to be established in Minneapolis by state bankers, who want the state to look after them as the government does after national banks in the way of deposits.

Mr. Dinehart says: "I do not believe in the distinction proposed, for the reason it would be impracticable and inconvenient. There are times when we disburse so much as $1,500,000 a day and where is the state bank that could carry such an amount?"

"This money is held right here in St. Paul, and it must be reached quickly. To comply with the proposed law would necessitate its distribution all over Minnesota, for, under our law, the capital stock must be twice the amount of the deposit."

Public Examiner by Vote of People

Proposed election of the public examiner by vote of the people, instead of the present method of appointment by the governor, is agitating the bankers of the state. An objection is made that this would bring the position within political entanglements if the examiner is to be elected biennially by direct vote. C. D. Griffith of Sleepy Eye, twice president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, and the moving spirit for the formation of a bankers' state bank, gives an interview on the subject which is supposed to represent banking sentiment. He writes:

"I notice there has been introduced in the legislature a bill providing for the election of the public examiner by a vote of the people. This is against the best interests of the people of the state of Minnesota.

"We do not want a public examiner, examining our banks and public utility corporations elected once in two years, as it would be very natural for him to use his influence to further his chances for re-election.

"Our public examiner should be kept in office as many years as it is possible without change and as free as possible from political influence, as it is for the best interests of the people that we have as rigid examinations as possible for all our state and financial institutions."

Guaranty of Bank Deposits

Senator Henry McColl of St. Paul is the first to prepare a bill for the guaranty of bank deposits in Minneapolis. The bill will follow the Oklahoma plan as closely as Minnesota constitutional restrictions will allow. The plan is to charge 1 per cent on the deposits in state banks to create the fund. The national banks may come under the plan if they elect. In case of bank failure the deposits will be paid in ninety days. If the assets are exhausted and the guaranty fund, an assessment is to be made on the banks to cover the overdraft. The guaranty is to cover only deposits drawing 4 per cent or less.

Bank Deposits in South Dakota

In ten years the deposits of South Dakota, a rapidly developing state, have grown nearly seven-fold. The figures for 1907 and 1908 show a gain of nearly $11,000,000. The increase amounted to more than the deposits in 1898. In the state there are 515 banks, 426 of which are under state supervision, the rest being national banks. One of the cities of South Dakota, Sioux Falls, has nearly $4,000,000 in its five banks. The table of deposits for the last ten years in state and national banks is as follows:

|                          |                          |
|--------------------------|--------------------------|
| 1898 ... $10,104,185.43 | 1904 ... $28,607,310.62 |
| 1899 ... 12,649,800.54   | 1905 ... 34,759,699.68   |
| 1900 ... 14,732,983.71   | 1906 ... 45,046,204.73   |
| 1901 ... 19,194,491.30   | 1907 ... 57,769,881.02   |
| 1902 ... 29,422,424.96   | 1908 ... 68,832,999.41   |

Three North Dakota Bankers on the Republic

S. S. Titus, cashier of the First National of Grand Forks; Henry Linwell, president of the Aneta National, and W. J. Mooney, president of the Cavalier County National Bank of Langdon, were three North Dakota bankers on the "Republic." Mr. Mooney, who was killed, was the founder of Langdon, which he laid out twenty-five years ago, and was interested in five other banks in his own state and Minnesota.

Will Likely be Paid Secretary

George D. Bartlett, cashier of the Citizens' State at Stanley, Wis., will resign and it is expected that he will serve the Wisconsin Bankers Association as paid secretary. Mr. Bartlett was the father of the insurance department of the association. Since its organization bank burglaries have decreased in the state. Before going to Stanley Mr. Bartlett was cashier of the State Bank of Anoka. He organized the Stanley bank ten years ago.

By WILLIAM J. HOLLISTER

President I. W. Hellman reported that the business of the Wells Fargo Nevada National, of San Francisco, for the past year had been satisfactory, although interest rates had been low for most of the time, which resulted in a reduction of earnings. Total earnings, after providing for all doubtful accounts, $1,020,524.64; total expenses and taxes, $316,091.08; net earnings, $704,433.56; dividends at 8 per cent, $480,000; surplus earnings, $224,433.56. Earnings of over 11½ per cent on the capital stock in a year like 1908 is an excellent showing, especially when the very high cash reserves carried by the Wells Fargo Nevada National are considered.

The Central Bank of Oakland

It is proposed to add a national bank with a paid-up capital of $1,000,000 in Oakland. To the shareholders of the Central Bank will be issued pro rata $500,000 of the stock in the new bank. There will be $500,000 new stock sold to make up the capital of the national, and the shareholders of the old bank will be given the first privilege to purchase same. The directors of the Central Bank have for some time been trying to devise some plan whereby new capital could be added which would be satisfactory to the present stockholders of the Central Bank as well as to the new stockholders, and with a view of increasing the capital, which would enable them to better serve the public.

Clearing House Examinations

The executive committee of the clearing house section of the A. B. A. holds "very pronounced views" upon the necessity for a general adoption of the Chicago plan for clearing house examination for member or clearing banks. At the recent session in New York it was decided to get the views of those clearing houses where the Chicago plan has been adopted. The first invitation to write on the subject came to Joseph T. Talbert, president of the Chicago organization, and his most excellent paper is included in the January A. B. A. Journal. Mr. Talbert is a past-master in the two essential arts; that of correctly examining a bank, and that of correctly telling how it may be done. He defends the examiners and the comptroller's office from many false accusations. He illustrates how a faithful examiner tried to have a bank promptly closed but that red tape delays defeated his greatest efforts for three weeks, or, until the bank actually failed. When this same, competent, faithful examiner was made receiver he was denounced in the press as dishonest and incompetent. Mr. Talbert thinks there are many such cases. Speaking of the limits of even the best of supervision, Mr. Talbert is emphatic in commending the clearing house examiners' powers for good as vastly greater than those of the state or nation. On this he says that therein "lies one advantage of bank examinations conducted by clearing house committees over those made by national or state authorities. These committees, through their own examinations, may discover and punish not only grave offenses, but they possess the ability to restrain, correct, and repair minor conditions of an irregular or unsound character, although as such they may constitute no infraction of law. National or state officers have no such corrective or remedial powers. They are obliged to confine their criticisms to actual or technical violations of law, and before exercising official authority must wait until conditions become so bad through incompetency or otherwise that it is necessary to levy assessments on shareholders to repair capital losses, or at last resort to the drastic alternative of forced liquidation."

Mr. Talbert denies that in Chicago the effect has been to guarantee deposits. This wasn't even thought of and there was no intent to reflect upon either state or national examinations, but rather to supplement them. On this subject he says that "all that the associated banks have undertaken to do—and even this is a heavy responsibility—is to endeavor to regulate the banks and to try to prevent unsound and improperly managed banks enjoying the privileges of clearing through the association. But no guaranty is, or can be given that failures may not occur in the future. However active and efficient the efforts of the clearing house committee and the examiner may be to keep our banks up to a high standard, there exists no power to prevent such eventualities. This is not a pleasing thing to say, but it is better that it should be said now, and let the public clearly understand the fact, than to have the clearing house association and its system of examinations discredited, and all the good work that it has already done and will continue to do destroyed by the failure of some bank in the future."

The Chicago plan is given in detail and it makes certain that in future bank failures in Chicago, if there are any, the directors cannot plead the baby act and say they did not know. All reports are made in multiple so that every director may have a copy, and his personal receipt for it is requested and filed in every case. The chief examiner of the Chicago clearing house makes the important suggestion that "other clearing house associations, which may contemplate establishing an office similar to the organization in Chicago, should carefully safeguard the condition imposed upon whomever is made its head as to tenure of office. The incumbent ought to be placed beyond possibility of subsequently leaving his position to enter the service of any of his banks which might extend to him an inviting offer." Bankers will understand this and fully coincide with Mr. Talbert, who concludes that the system merely "is an extension of clearing house authority along prudent and legitimate lines. It is a long and an important step in the interest of good banking. In a broad sense it is sound and wholesome government. It should and will endure, for like all good systems of government, 'its just powers are derived from the consent of the governed.'"

The paper, before being sent to the Journal, was submitted to J. B. Forgan, chairman of the clearing house committee, and to the chief examiner. It was highly approved and commended, and doubtless will rank as one of the most useful documents of the year in the banking line. W. T. Fenton, now in Europe, retains the high credit for initiative in the matter.

New Force in Foreign Exchange

Within a month a formidable new entrant will have invaded the foreign exchange and money order banking field with such equipment and backing that success is practically certain. The great American Bankers Association began a few years ago to try to put the express companies out of the banking business, where they do not of right belong. Practical men determined that a better system of local and foreign transfers was the only sure plan and the only one which would not in some way restrict business. Hence it came to pass that bankers all over the United States are arranging to embark upon the lucrative business of issuing travelers' checks, a field that has been monopolized for the most part by private banking houses and—with questionable propriety—by the express companies. The American Bankers Association recently took this matter up and the Bankers' Trust Company of New York were appointed agents for the association to handle the business. In reality the service is to be world-wide. Fred I. Kent, recently appointed a vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, visited Europe and has completed negotiations with a great number of foreign interests who will become representatives of the American bankers. The Bankers Trust Company will enter the foreign exchange field only to the extent necessitated by the travelers' check business. The actual issue of checks, it is expected, will begin next month. Mr. Kent as is well known is a Chicago product, and is the third man trained in our great First National Bank to go to a New York job in foreign exchange banking. Former efforts to "take over" the express companies' business have failed, but now it looks a winner.

Reforming Stock Exchange Methods

The new commission appointed by Governor Hughes to propose new legislation for the reformation of stock exchange abuses is going about its investigations quietly and thoroughly. The muck rake has been so overworked at Washington that Governor Hughes has dispensed with it entirely in his reform equipment. There are to be no sensational discoveries but remedial proposals will be made which should become at once effective. It appears now that the stock exchange governors are anticipating the investigations and are evidently intent upon putting their house in such perfect order that there will be slight basis for criticism by the commission. Whatever may be the outcome, it is evident that there is to be no washing of dirty linen in public, and for this let us be thankful. The recent spectacular failures of McIntyre & Co., Coster, Knapp & Co. and A. O. Brown & Co. have shown the need of drastic action by the governors; and the punishment of other firms concerned in the transactions that made the failures just named so unsavory has had a distinct influence in clearing up the general stock exchange situation in the direction of sounder and more honorable business methods.

Most stock exchange evils grow out of "wash" sales which make market manipulation possible. "Wash" sales keep the gambling element in the game without which values would fluctuate less and only upon a legitimate basis.

Over in Paris a little joker was introduced to protect the Russian loan certificates from professional bear raids and if introduced in New York many of the "talent" would have to go to work to earn a living. The "plan" to stop short sales is to compel the certificates so sold numbered and none other received in settlement. In short, it means that when sales are made on the exchange the buyer shall be given the number of the certificate that he has purchased and shall receive in consummation of the sale. Such legislation would be one of the most effective checks upon manipulative speculation that any legislative body could enact. The compulsory delivery of the numbers of certificates would put an end to the disgraceful exhibition that preceded the A. O. Brown & Co. failure. This plan proved very effective in Paris where Russian securities were being depressed by short sales toward the close of the Russo-Japanese war. When the government ordered that number of the bonds be named in the contracts for sale, the attacks on the prices through short sales promptly ceased. It proved most effective.

It is likely that the commission will do as much for the stock market in the way of making it sane and safe as the bank commission did for banking in the Empire state.

The Currency Experts Differ

It is related that a celebrated New York paper once employed a young man, who but the week before had stroke-oared a world-famous varsity crew to victory, to visit the twenty most famous physicians in the city for physical examinations. The man did not complain or state symptoms but "just wanted to know." He returned with fifteen widely differing prescriptions for as many diseases and had a call back for the result of certain tests from the other five. The currency question, like the athlete, is in the hands of the currency doctors. Mr. Fowler doesn't want to risk the central bank as a cure-all, while Mr. Roberts thinks it about the only real remedy. Mr. Fowler wants the country to be divided into say 30 commercial zones, with the banks in each zone electing half a dozen responsible bankers to oversee the banking business in that particular locality. Then these six bankers are to select one of their number who will be a member of a central board, to oversee the banking business of the country. The paper money of the country is to be based on gold only, each bank depositing in Washington 5 per cent of its deposits and 5 per cent of its notes, say to the amount of $1,000,000,000, thus doing away with bond security.

Mr. Fowler seems to regard the postal savings bank as merely a threat, only to come into existence if other proposed remedies fail. There is another school who see no danger to banking in the postal bank. Its members believe that the government, in the event of adopting a postal savings bank system, is not going to keep the money in its vaults, but rather that it will be re-deposited in the banks of the country, presumably in the banks in those localities where it is originally deposited. In this way they claim it will immediately reach the channels of commerce and that it will most certainly do away with the use of stockings and cigar boxes as depositaries, which are always temptation for the evilly inclined. Thus the currency doctors and the doctors of medicine will always disagree.

"Mobile is famous for its hospitality and many points of historic interest, and as this association has a well established reputation for the social and intellectual features of its meetings, it is confidently expected that the 1909 convention will exceed its predecessors in point of attendance, interest and pleasant entertainment. The idea of a side trip to Havana was at first considered, but this has been abandoned for a water trip down to some point on the Gulf Coast which has been promised by the association's hosts."

Court of Appeals Decision

The question was presented, in the case of Jones, administrator, vs. Crisp et al., administrators, decided by the Court of Appeals of Maryland, whether the entry "Fredericka Crisp, in case of death subject to the order of Evan Jones," in a savings bank book constituted a valid gift under the laws of that state. The court held that there was no valid gift inter vivos, saying: "The delivery of the book of deposit in this case with the entry thereon, 'in case of death subject to order of' the donee, did not constitute a delivery of the money, because the delivery of the fund was limited 'in case of death of the donee.' The possession of the book was entirely consistent with the form of the entry in the book, because the donee could not withdraw the money. It is very clear, we think, that she did not intend to part with the possession and dominion over the property, and under all the decisions this is necessary to constitute a valid and perfect gift inter vivos."

Hazing in Bank Life

Two new employees of the First National of Kansas City were initiated last week. They were informed that the Missouri Savings Bank had sent for $100,000 in currency. They had been selected to take it over. A bundle sealed with many seals was given them and receipts in duplicate were made out, one to each man. They were told that it was necessary to go well armed.

When the two men left the bank each had a belt on the outside of his coat in which were two or three revolvers. At the Scarritt building they presented their burden to the receiving teller of the Missouri Savings Bank. He had been advised of the coming of the messengers, told them some mistake had been made and sent them to another bank.

The two toiled down the hill again. They went from bank to bank and then, in despair, returned to the First National. There they were received with apparent disfavor and the bundle was unwrapped. Then the two boys were accused of either taking the currency or allowing someone to switch packages on them. They were buying cigars this week.

John E. Gardin, the National City Bank's Expert, Discusses International Exchange Before the New York Chapter

John E. Gardin, vice-president and head of the foreign exchange department of the National City Bank, of New York, Thursday night discussed international exchange before the New York Chapter. As Mr. Gardin is recognized as probably the greatest expert in this country, his lecture attracted widespread attention. He began by pleading for a wider interest on the part of Americans in the world's affairs, for a greater breadth of view, now that we have become a world power. He extolled Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Shaw's action in granting interest on gold during its transit from foreign ports and claimed that those who rushed gold to this country—sometimes using special trains to hurry it to seaboard—to check the panic were benefactors in the commercial sense. He referred to stock exchange borrowing methods that led to the debasing of credits and pointed out the aftermath. He said in part:

"The international relations of the United States of America have in recent years obtained such prominence that we now rank with the world powers—in short, we have now assumed our proper place in the concert of nations. This being the case, it is surprising that no more attention is being paid in our educational establishments to the proper dissemination of knowledge relating to the outside world. The American in this respect resembles the Chauvinistic Frenchman and considers nothing of much importance unless it emanates from his own country. The wider knowledge of the world's work, however, is being forced upon the coming generations, particularly along commercial lines, and as commerce always has been the forerunner of enlightenment, much can be expected from this influence." There is no mystery, Mr. Gardin proceeded, about international exchange, although of course a thorough knowledge of our monetary conditions is a preliminary essential. This knowledge must include not only the daily facts, but must embrace the historical as well as the economic principles of our currency, and it will induce the student to extend his researches to economic and political relations of foreign countries until the world becomes an open book.

International Clearing House Neither Feasible Nor Desirable

"Each nation has its own monetary system, and the term foreign exchange merely expresses the co-relationship of these systems and their workings in settlements of international commerce. Exports and imports are balanced against each other and the difference, either in one or the other, is liquidated in the only money that is known to the world at large, and that is gold. Where this is not forthcoming it means insolvency to that particular nation just the same as it would to an individual. Time and again it has been suggested that an arrangement be made among the leading countries for the establishment of an international clearing house, the purpose of which would be to settle international trade balances so as to avoid the transmission of the actual metal. This idea, however, is rather Utopian and is not feasible for many reasons, nor do I think it would be desirable. Such an idea would be upon a par with the irredeemability of a bank note, which would deprive it of its very essence.

Fruits of Scientific Application of Exchange Principles

"During the panic of 1907 banking institutions having foreign connections took the lead in devising methods by which confidence could be restored, and while considerable profit was connected with their activities, still they should be regarded in the light of benefactors in a commercial sense. Here was the true test of the efficiency of the workings of the principles of foreign exchanges, and never in the history of commercial life did application of scientific means bring about more fruitful results. The machinery was set in motion and kept in full force until there was no further need for the extraordinary pressure that the situation called for.

"A sudden call for gold such as was witnessed during the closing months of the year 1907 naturally caused alarm in every financial center, and the first response was the prompt raising of bank rates to prohibitive figures—that of the Bank of England for the first time in many, many years, going to 7 per cent, the Imperial Bank of Germany also to 7 per cent, and the Bank of France to 4 per cent." These protective measures availed nothing. The United States levied tribute upon every nation.

Special Trains Rushed Gold for This Country

Mr. Gardin paid a cordial tribute to the then Secretary of the Treasury, Leslie M. Shaw, for conceiving the idea of having the government advance funds to the banks upon their producing evidence that gold has been engaged abroad. "Gold," he went on, "was immediately engaged in every quarter of the globe, and an activity in this respect was displayed that had never before been witnessed. Special treasure trains were run from London to Liverpool, and from Paris to Cherbourg, and within a few days the gold-laden argosies were treading every ocean path. Marine insurance companies, accustomed to taking big risks, balked at the obligations that they were forced to assume, and premiums rose to an unprecedented figure." All this occurred before the end of April, at the close of which month came the San Francisco earthquake.

Government's Aid to Gold Importers Defended

"The old adage that everything is fair in love or war was never more applicable and it certainly was war, if the use of such a term is permissible in financial matters. The action of the government was perfectly justified in this case and was proper from a moral as well as from an economic standpoint. The same thing is done abroad by the great central banks in an even more drastic manner, and the reply to the criticisms from that source would be that it was merely a question of whose ox was being gored. Under our sub-treasury system the money for customs and other duties taken direct from the people is locked up in the treasury vaults, an inert mass—and naturally aggravating the situation in times of stringency—hence the release of this money against proper security, at a time when the public welfare is in jeopardy, is but proper, and a contrary course would be poor statesmanship indeed."

The importations under this system reached an aggregate of $42,000,000 during April and May, when generally exports are in order, as during the first six months of the year heavy merchandise importations from abroad take place, and the course of the exchanges is usually against us, causing gold exports.

Stock Exchange Borrowing and Prostitution of Banking

"A new method of financing stock exchange operations had developed in recent years, and this development reached its zenith during the year 1906. This was a year of high interest rate in America while the rates abroad remained normal. Another phase of the situation was that in borrowing from a banker abroad actual money was not advanced by the banker, but he merely allowed the use of his good name. This method became so attractive both here and abroad that in the eagerness for gain credits became strained and such an outcry was made, and justly so, that the result was a complete withdrawal of these credit facilities in the following year. So eager were European banks and bankers to indulge in this method of financing, which, as has already been stated, required no outlay of money but simply the use of their good name, that representatives were sent to the United States to solicit business, and to such an extent was it indulged in that in several instances certain names were looked at askance. This brought discredit in its wake. Naturally these expanded credits gave Americans a certain power over the money markets abroad, so that in case of a pinch they were able to draw gold. The great central banks at last became alarmed and the discounting of finance paper was proscribed, and the outcry became so great that a wholesale restriction of such credit facilities was decided upon." Thus this prostitution of the banking business was eliminated.

In September gold imports were again resumed under the auspices of the Treasury Department and continued during October, a total of $46,000,000 being brought into the country, making approximately $100,000,000 for the year. Then came the October-November panic.

"All the cities of the United States suspended cash payments simultaneously, and money to gather and move the crops was not obtainable. Further trouble arose from the fact that a mistaken idea prevailed abroad as to what our real trouble was, and it is really surprising to what extent the general opinion abroad prevailed that it was our paper currency that had depreciated; and were some of the correspondence on this subject, emanating from large financial institutions abroad, published it would reflect very little credit upon the intelligence of their managements. The banks and bankers of New York promptly recognized that the only thing that could save the situation was to ship our produce out of the country and get back gold. Liquidation of American securities had been going on all the summer, and very few credits having been issued in the early spring, we owed the foreigner nothing, and as he had to have our cotton, our corn, and our wheat, he had to pay for it, and had to pay for it in real money—in gold. The effect of the withdrawal of European credits was now felt at its keenest, and had this policy not been pursued we would have been shorn of one-half of our power to command the money markets of the world. In this country it was not gold that went to a premium, but money—that is, any kind of money—gold, gold certificates, silver certificates, or national banknotes—it was the scarcity of a circulating medium that caused the trouble, and the smaller the denomination the higher the premium. On the contrary, however, in foreign ports it was gold that went to a premium as against paper money. The Bank of France sold its gold in England at 78s 2d per ounce as against the nominal price of 77s 9d, and during all this time the foreigner was crying out against the depreciation of the American banknote."

Mr. Gardin will deliver the second half of his lecture next month.

Kansas City Chapter Meeting

The Kansas City Chapter of the American Institute of Banking met last Wednesday night in the clearing house rooms. Thornton Cooke, treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company, spoke on the subject of "Currency," and E. E. O'Brien, department manager of the Commercial National in Kansas City, Kan., also spoke.

Chicago Chapter's Eighth Annual Banquet

By C. R. Wheeler

The eighth annual banquet of Chicago Chapter was held at the Auditorium Hotel January 23d. Two hundred bank men and guests enjoyed a menu that was all that could be desired and the program of speakers was of a high order. Good music by a ladies' orchestra and the Ingleside Quartette was rendered during the courses of the dinner.

The officers of the Chapter and the members of the banquet committee are to be heartily congratulated on the success of the affair from every point of view. The menu cards were patterned after the emblem of the Institute.

The invocation was offered by the Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, and after the banquet President George A. Jackson presented Ralph C. Wilson as toastmaster. Mr. Wilson in a few appropriate remarks, introduced Rev. Mr. Bartlett, who spoke on "Saving the Waste." The speaker, in a brief address drew a lesson from the saving of the waste products of industry and applied it to the saving of time for culture and recreation; to the negro question and to the child labor question. The next speaker was Prof. J. C. Monaghan of St. Johns College, Brooklyn, N. Y., and principal of the Stuyvesant Evening Trade School, New York City, who spoke on "America, The Land of Opportunity." Prof. Monaghan's reputation as a speaker had preceded him and his hearers were on the tiptoe of expectancy. After he had concluded his address he was obliged to rise again and again in acknowledgement of applause.

In introducing the next speaker Mr. Alexander Wall of the First National Bank of Milwaukee and chairman of the educational committee of the Institute, the toastmaster said there were three Alexanders in history. Alexander the Great, Alexander Hamilton and the third was Alexander Wall of Milwaukee. Mr. Wilson quite outdid himself in introducing this speaker—even breaking the record by telling a new story, at least he said it was new.

In response Mr. Wall expressed the opinion that he had "had it handed to him" by the toastmaster.

Mr. Wall's address was on the topic "Productive Education and the Institute Degree." He said:

"The idea of forming the organization which has now become the American Institute of Banking, had its first inception in the lack of a broad training among the bank clerks of the country. In the larger cities particularly the routine work in banking had become so very highly specialized that many clerks lost sight of the real force of banking and were simply wandering in a maze of figures and columns. This condition of things made a very highly developed machine that turned out a great deal of banking work very rapidly, accurately and cheaply.

"In itself this condition was highly satisfactory, but it had a decided drawback. When the stockholders wanted new officers they found that in many cases the men who had been in the banks for years and were very adept at their work could not be promoted, because their intently specialized work had made them too narrow. This was a very bad fault in the system and it was the thought of helping this condition that made the growth of the Institute possible. I doubt if the early organizers of our body had any very much wider scope in mind when they started the movement.

"The first thing that occurred to those who had this Institute work in hand, was the necessity of instruction for the bank clerks. In every city where chapters were organized classes were started or lectures given by men who were accepted authorities in their subjects. We have now been going on in this way for some years and have been the recipients of much education. This sort of education is without any doubt of the very greatest value and of necessity the first step toward a knowledge of any subject. This is so obvious a fact that I do not advance any argument in its behalf, but mention it only as being the basis of a greater and more beneficial educational development into which shape the Institute is about to enter.

C. R. WHEELER

"I do not wish at this time to talk of the past and how great the success of the Institute has been, because I believe that its success so far has been of a political rather than an educational one. Do not mistake me, however, and think that I condemn politics in the Institute. I believe thoroughly that a healthy competition in ideas and an attempt to advance different policies is a very good thing, but we must not forget that the main object of our organization is education. I say the success so far has been largely political. We have formed a fine organization and have provided a few banks with some excellent officers. But I would ask you where is any constructive, economic thought that has come from our efforts. In what manner have we produced education. And right here is the key to our future success. If the Institute is to succeed and grow into the future we must change our system of education. We hear complaints from the small chapters that they have done all they can. They have run through all the lectures available and have no one to teach them more. This may or may not be exactly so, but it is surely so that they have mental indigestion. They have had receptive education until their heads are full of undigested economic and banking ideas. If some outlet is not found and some relief suggested these chapters will surely die of dry rot and overfeeding. The larger city chapters will last longer, but their time will come just as surely.

"It is much more important at the present time to devote our time and attention to ways and means of doing things rather than having things done for us. If we are to make the Institute a success, we must produce and should make a school of economic thought that will have as its aim the practical solution of our banking and monetary difficulties of to-day. You may ask how this can be done. First of all we have our Bulletin and this is an open forum for the discussion of ideas and should be the standard of Institute economic thought. I find a good many articles in the magazine that tell us how great we are, but I do not find any well-defined and consistent economic school. This, then, is the first outlet for our productive work. There is a second outlet in the great controversy on monetary reform. Not very long ago there was a meeting in New York City of the representatives of the Merchants and Manufacturers' associations of the various cities. This came as the result of the realization of the people as a whole that monetary reform is necessary and that they knew nothing about the faults of our present system. Now, the American Institute of Banking has professed to be studying this subject for some six years. It seems to me that we might take a very productive part in this constructive work in teaching the people what is needed and what can be done by way of monetary reform. I can see no reason why a body of merchants should have to get together to beat us at our own work. Then there is a third outlet for productive work which is not only a possible one but is really a duty which we owe to ourselves. Our last convention at Providence accepted the plan to write a book dealing with the practical mechanism of banking. Here is a very practical way in which Institute men can display their productive ability.

"The great fault of the Institute now is, I firmly believe, that we have had so much done for us, have had so many lectures and have been so long the recipients of education that we have lost sight of the fact that we owe a huge debt to education. I feel so keenly on this subject that it seems to me that the real life of our Institute depends upon our showing some interest in an honest attempt to produce a school of practical banking economists. It is not so very hard to get a body of men to sit together and listen to lectures, but all of us who have tried know that it is hard to get debaters, because there the men have to do original work. This should be the aim of the leaders in Institute work for the next few years—to instigate men to do original research work and produce economic thought and a comprehensive understanding of banking theory and practice in each chapter city.

"There is one other phase of Institute inactivity that is worthy of comment at the present time. The saying that the strength of any college or school rests in its alumni is so common and so generally accepted that it is almost platitudinous to repeat it here. But it has a decided bearing on our organization at its present status. A very wrong impression seems to have become the belief of the Institute in the matter of graduates. Many men have seemed to think that appointment as an officer of a bank makes them a kind of graduate of the Institute. But this is far from being the case. These men may have done very good work for the Institute, and it is probably true that in most cases they have the success of the Institute at heart, but they are not our alumni.

"The Institute has three study courses: Political economy, business law and practical banking. Upon passing a satisfactory examination in these three courses any member of the Institute receives a certificate of proficiency from the Institute. This is in the nature of a diploma from a school or a degree from a college. It is a significant thing in this respect that such colleges and universities as are abreast of the times are introducing into their curriculum a school of business and are conferring a degree based upon a study of business. It is to be supposed that an education along business administration lines is good, or these colleges would not have taken up this work. As the main aim in the formation of the Institute was educational, we must not let this become secondary to the idea that office-getting is our objective end. Of course every man harbors a hope that he may some day become an officer, and it is a healthy ambition. But a much better ambition is the gaining of an education. It is also an interesting fact that this last is surely within the reach of all of the clerks any time they see fit to grasp for it.

"Now, if the idea of the Institute is to further education then it should be the desire of every man in the Institute to get our certificate of proficiency, or as I like to call it, the Institute degree. If we could have a large body of alumni, all having our degree, we would solve the riddle of what the various chapters can do. The problem of productive education would become easy. We would create our school of banking thought and we would have a body of alumni that would be far stronger and could do more for the Institute than any other body of men ever could do."

The next speaker was a member of Chicago Chapter, H. Russell Ross of the First National, who spoke entertainingly on "Human Nature a Study."

John H. Puelicher, of Milwaukee, was then called on and responded with a few remarks. The toastmaster then called on E. D. Hulbert, saying that when the Chicago Chapter held its first banquet we sent Mr. Hulbert a complimentary ticket, who indignantly declined to accept a complimentary, but sent in his check. Mr. Hulbert responded with a story and said that he had overcome his prejudice against complimentary and took occasion to thank us for our hospitality.

There were present, beside the speakers of the evening, Elmer Youngman, editor of the Bankers Magazine of New York, M. A. Graettinger, cashier of the Merchants & Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee, H. A. Hollenbeck, cashier of the Capital National, St. Paul, Roy L. Stone, assistant cashier of the German American Bank of Milwaukee and John H. Puelicher, cashier Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee. The following Chicago bankers also honored us by their presence: E. D. Hulbert, vice-president Merchants Loan & Trust Co., F. W. Smith, cashier Corn Exchange National, William G. Crandall, assistant cashier National City Bank, W. H. Munroe, assistant cashier First National and E. A. Erickson, president of the Security Bank.

Prof. J. Paul Goode of the University of Chicago and James I. Innis of the Chicago bar were also our guests. Telegrams regretting their inability to attend were received from Franklin Johnson, president of the Institute and Brant C. Downey of Indianapolis. Greetings by wire were also received from Presidents Woolfolk of Seattle, and Cerini of Oakland, Chapters.

Chicago Chapter News

On Tuesday evening at the general meeting of the Chicago Chapter, A. I. B., a mock session of the United States House of Representatives was held. Parliamentary scimmages, a president's message, the "big stick," an omnibus appropriation bill and all sorts of political fan-fire was introduced. The meeting was organized along the general lines of the house, and as far as possible the regular order of business was followed. A tenor solo was rendered by Harry T. Stallwood, of the Commercial National.

Chicago Chapter members are becoming quite well known as good talkers, and are in demand at various places to address meetings. On Thursday evening F. W. Ellsworth, manager of the advertising department of the First National addressed the Bankers Ad. Association, of Pittsburgh. Mr. Ellsworth's address was the principal event of the evening. Outside associations of every kind know where to come to get good speakers.

Pittsburgh Chapter Reception

The winter reception of Pittsburgh Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was last held at the Rittenhouse, East End, last Friday evening. The following well known members of the chapter had charge of the reception: J. H. Caddick, Charles L. Werner, Howard G. Owens, H. N. Shallenberger, A. K. Markland, E. A. Owens and H. I. Thompson.

"The American as He Is"

A little book has been sent out by the Macmillan Co. containing the lectures by Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, before the University of Copenhagen, on "The American as he is." Dr. Butler says of the text that he has "attempted to set out some of the aspects of American life and to draw, in large lines, a picture of that part of present-day civilization which the world knows as American." He points out that in order to understand the government and the intellectual and moral temper of the people of the United States "one must know thoroughly and well the writings and speeches of three Americans, Alexander Hamilton, Abraham Lincoln and Ralph Waldo Emerson."

There isn't a banker in the United States who would not be benefited by reading what Dr. Butler told those of the Copenhagen seat of learning were his notions of the true American.

South Texas National to Build

The quarters formerly occupied by the Planters and Mechanics National on Main Street, between Franklin and Congress Avenue, will be used by the South Texas National, of Houston, pending the erection of a new bank home on the old site. The lease has been negotiated and the change will soon be made.

Within a week, it is expected, plans now being prepared will be furnished the bank officials by the architects. If acceptable they will be immediately adopted and work will commence in the wrecking of the three-story brick owned by the South Texas Bank.

The structure will not be an office building, but will be used exclusively for the business of the financial institution. As such it will be the only structure in the city so used.

Ex-Cashier Convicted

William F. Woods, ex-cashier of the Woods National, of San Antonio, Tex., which suspended in 1907, convicted of embezzlement and misapplication of the funds of the bank, has been sentenced to eight years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan. Pending the perfecting of an appeal, Woods is being held in the county jail. It is announced that an appeal bond of $20,000 will be required. Besides the charge under which Woods was convicted, two other indictments are pending charging the unlawful handling of the funds of the bank to the extent of nearly $100,000.

Depositories of State Funds

State Treasurer Sam Sparks, of Texas, has advertised for bids for depositories of the state funds in accordance with the state depository act. Under the law creating state depositories both national and state banks are eligible to bid for the funds, and those depositories paying the largest rate of interest on daily balances are awarded the contract for the depositing of funds. The law provides for one depository in each of the thirty-one senatorial districts of the state. There are approximately 600 state and national banks to which notices are being sent. A bank must have a capital stock of not less than $25,000 in order to be eligible to bid for the funds and the limit deposited in any one bank is $50,000. The bids will be opened at noon on February 1st.

State Treasurer Sparks is much pleased with the operation of the state depository law which went into operation just as he assumed charge of the treasury department and the act has proved quite a success financially for the state. There has been an average of $1,500,000 on deposit all the time during the past two years and the amount of interest that the state has derived from this source has been an average of $43,000. This sum, the state treasurer reports is more than enough to pay the entire expense of maintaining the force and other expenses of the treasury department. It is not expected that any changes will be asked of the present legislature in this law which has thus far proved so successful.

Of Importance to Corporations

An opinion of far-reaching importance to corporations has been delivered by the state supreme court of Oklahoma. It held that an appeal from a ruling of the state corporation commission to the state supreme court could be taken without a motion for a new trial, and that an appeal would lie at any time within a year from the making of the order by the commission.

The commission has made many orders that were resisted by corporations, especially railroads, but from which no appeal was taken. Failure to appeal caused lawyers to believe that the orders became permanent, and forbade relief. It is probable that many orders in which corporations seemingly acquiesced will now be appealed to the state supreme court.

The Mercantile National

The Mercantile National of St. Louis, last week permanently organized and the temporary officers and directors were put in office permanently. They are: Festus J. Wade, president; George W. Wilson, vice-president; Edward Buder, cashier; James G. Butler, Paul Brown, James Campbell, William J. Kinsella, David Eiseman and L. D. Dozier, directors.

Those in the conference were Speaker Dolley, Lieutenant Governor Fitzgerald, Senator Denton, J. C. Edwards, chairman of the house banking committee; F. H. Cron of San Francisco, representing the minority of the legislature, and W. F. McFerran, representing the bankers.

All of the ten bank deposit bills in the house and six in the senate were discussed in general, but no definite action on any particular form of a bill or any definite feature of one was taken. The conference was called simply to get all of the different factions on the bank bill present and see if a general guaranty idea could not be worked out. The administration, the bankers and the democrats were all represented in the conference.

Pioneer Kansas Banker Dead

The National City, National Park and Irving National Exchange have had the plan in operation for some time and the Bank of New York is about to put the plan into force also.

The system is not new in this country, it has been in force for some time by a number of trust companies in the New England States and in Chicago.

Ellis of the Manufacturers' & Traders' National of Buffalo, was elected secretary and treasurer.

On motion of Elliott C. ness which naturally belongs there, and which is now being done by express companies. Another feature of this committee's work is money orders. The American Bankers Association money orders have been in use for some time. In the near future, the foreign money order, or traveler's check will be placed in the hands of the banks that desire them. This money order is guaranteed as is the domestic money order; will be as convenient and complete as the express money orders and will be payable in all parts of the world that entertains the American traveling public to any extent.

The standing law committee will make a vigorous campaign with the state legislatures this winter, with a number of proposed laws which will appeal to the banking fraternity generally.

An act to punish the making or use of false statements to obtain credit.

A bill to punish derogatory statements affecting banks.

An act to punish those who draw checks or drafts on banks where they have no funds.

And a heavy penalty for burglary with explosives, and several other features which will prove of interest and benefit.

The committee on uniform laws, which treats particularly with the uniformity of negotiable instruments, has succeeded in passing this law in thirty-six states or jurisdictions.

The committee on voucher checks, in conjunction with committees from the railroad's financial departments of railroads, and a committee from the American Association of Public Accountants, have devised a number of forms of voucher checks and are now recommending same. These forms will be published in our January Journal. It is hoped that this movement will largely reduce the use of the forms of voucher checks, now in circulation, many of which are not negotiable, are of all forms and sizes, and are a decided annoyance to the banks. I think the overworked bank clerk who has to handle some of these vicious forms will appreciate this new departure.

The committee on credit information is working to bring about a plan whereby the bank purchasing commercial paper from commercial paper brokers can secure definite and reliable information as to the credit standing and the amount of paper issued, and offered by the commercial paper brokers for their clients.

In summing up the various adjuncts of our association, I have not mentioned two important committees, for these committees deal largely with the subject assigned me.

Since the organization of the association in 1875 it has been more or less prominent, and has taken a stand on banking and currency matters. The association used its power and influence, and gave assistance to the government in the resumption of specie payments, and through all of these years when it appeared that proper legislation was needed, either in banking or currency laws, or business interests which were closely allied with banking, the association has lent its aid to the correct adjustment of conditions as they existed at those times.

It has been apparent for some time that the currency system as it exists to-day is entirely inadequate for the requirements of the country. This has been particularly noticeable during the crop-moving season. The present issue of currency is, as you know, a bond-secured currency and based on our present national banking act which became a law in 1862, or very nearly forty-seven years ago. There has been little change in this act and it has become evident with the great growth of the country, its increase in commercial activity and wealth, that the present law and method is not at all adapted to our needs.

The National Banking Act was evolved and put into force by Secretary of the Treasury Chase. It was a wise move for those times and accomplished what it was designed for—the sale of government bonds. For many years, and while there was an abundance of bonds, the banks took out a circulation which provided for the requirements of the country, but for a long period our circulation has fluctuated, and has been controlled very largely by the price of bonds; in fact, these bonds have been used by the banks for speculative purposes; the bonds commanding so high a premium, that there was little profit left in the circulation itself, so that the banks looked to the buying and selling of the same for their profits, and this, regardless of the conditions of the country or its needs as to currency at any particular time.

At a meeting of the American Bankers Association, held in St. Louis in 1906, it was practically the unanimous opinion of the association that the time had come to take some action with a view to increasing the circulation. A currency commission was authorized and afterwards selected by the executive council and comprised fifteen members. This commission was composed of men who had made a study of banking and finance; men from various sections of the country and bankers who stood highest in their profession. This commission met and prepared a bill which was introduced into Congress in 1907 and was known as the Fowler Bill. It provided for asset currency pure and simple; a currency based on the assets of the bank, to be issued in connection with the present bond-secured circulation. This bill never became a law, but a bill was introduced by Senator Aldrich into the senate and passed; a bill that has been forgotten, and which never created any change in the methods in vogue at that time.

In January, 1908, the currency commission again met, prepared another bill similar to the bill of 1907, with slight modifications, and the same was introduced by Congressman McKinney. An educational campaign had been kept up for a year, and during the congressional session of 1907 and 1908 almost every ambitious congressman, and some of the senators, prepared bills or amendments on the banking and currency question.

The guaranty of bank deposits is still with us. Such a measure can find no place in the present Congress, but there are sections of this country that are thoroughly imbued with this fallacy, and in several of our Western states, bills will be introduced into state legislatures proposing to put on the statute books a law guaranteeing bank deposits in state and savings banks. We have already had considerable evidence of this, and there is a determination on the part of business men and bankers to make a fight in opposition.

Again I urge you to co-operate with each other in your work; give hearty support to your group organization and to your state organization. Attend these meetings and conventions. They will not only benefit you, but the fraternity at large, and affect your kindred interests, the great commercial pursuits of the nation. One cannot be divorced from the other. They go hand-in-hand and success means prosperity.

Michigan Banking News

When former State Treasurer Glazier's Chelsea bank "blew up" two years ago he had state funds on deposit in it to an amount equal to nearly three and one-half times its combined capital and surplus, and over four and one-half times the amount of the bond the bank had given as a depository for state funds.

The new secretary of state and auditor-general, Fred C. Martindale and Oramel B. Fuller, have made an order that hereafter the state treasurer shall not deposit in any bank state funds in excess of the bond the bank has given as a depository, and not to exceed 50 per cent of the capital and surplus. The new constitution empowers them to do this.

The Cass County State Bank

At a meeting of directors of the Cass County State Bank at Cassopolis, Frank J. Phillips, of Dowagiac, was elected cashier. The president, vice-president, and second vice-president were elected several weeks ago. Mr. Phillips is experienced in the banking business, having served in different capacities for several years. He will go to his new employment as soon as the bank is ready for business, which will be some time in the early part of February, when the new bank building is completed.

The Michigan State Bank

Joseph Carr has been elected president of the Michigan State Bank of Eaton Rapids to succeed J. M. Corbin.

The Chippewa County Bank

The Chippewa County Bank is now doing business at Detour. The bank has excellent prospects, as it will handle business for Raber, Maxton, Gatesville, Drummond, Drummond Island, and Scammond's Cove. Robert Rea and S. H. Knisely are the proprietors, and the latter is the cashier. The new bank advertises a responsibility of $50,000.

Detroit Board of Commerce Dinner

Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of New Jersey, an expert on finance and currency reform, and Albert Kelsey, of Philadelphia, an expert on city beautification and city building, were two strong attractions that brought out a large attendance of the Detroit Board of Commerce at the regular quarterly dinner in the Wayne Hotel and crowded the main dining room to overflowing.

Maj. Ford H. Rogers, at the close of the evening, moved that the assemblage recommend to President Taft that he make Mr. Fowler his Secretary of the Treasury. The motion was carried with a vim.

Fowler Points Out Some Evils

Mr. Fowler said: "You don't change financial laws as you do tariff laws. The financial laws that you pass are more enduring and leave a lasting impression on the country."

"Banking in the United States is very bad, because it is not what it should be, nor what it could be made to be. In 1907 every one was convinced that something was radically wrong about our system. What was the matter in 1907? The banking business is all in isolated units, strong only as the weakest link in the chain. When trouble came, it was not the people running on the banks, but the banks running on the banks. We were in that strained condition that when the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York failed, people began taking their money out of banks and putting it away in drawers. In Boston, New York, and Philadelphia, probably $250,000,000 were locked up in this way.

"We want a system that will compel people to put their money into banks and to have the confidence to keep it there. And yet what do you bankers do? You advertise your safe deposit vaults and say to the people, 'Come, put your valuable in here.' And when postal savings banks are created the people will have another place to put their money. You will have a run on your bank facilitated by the government.

"The mechanism of exchange broke down in 1907, and what did the banks do under the pressure? They converted bank credits into currency—something that was, and is contrary to law, but something that you should have the right to do every day. I leave to your imagination what would have happened if clearing house certificates had not been issued, and they had the intelligence to pass something worse than we had ever passed before. We issued $500,000,000 of bond secured notes.

"We don't want a bond secured currency. The reserves in your bank should be gold, because the standard of value is gold. In 1907 the people came to your banks to draw money. You couldn't pay them. They didn't know what they wanted, anyway, so you advised them to go home."

Forced to Make Six-Cylinder Cars

For several years Mr. Winton has known six-cylinder cars to be superior to fours. But originally he did not anticipate marketing a six until about 1910.

His belief was that the public would not be ready for sixes until then; and you know how unwise it is to try to hurry public opinion.

Well, after marketing the four-cylinder Winton Model M in 1907—a car that to this day has no superior among fours—and finding buyers clamoring for a new merit that fours could not satisfy, Mr. Winton had no alternative. He was forced to make and market the two years ahead of his schedule.

Then the four makers smiled knowingly. In their opinion it was a foolish thing to put all one's eggs in the six basket.

That was more than a year ago.

To-day nearly every maker who isn't marketing a six is either wishing he were, or is experimenting with one in the hope that he may produce a six to equal the self-starting, sweet-running Winton Six.

Men who own Winton Sixes enjoy a contentment that no other car ever gave them.

That's why the Winton plant is working full force, full time, and is still behind orders.

If you want a new satisfaction in motoring, we suggest that you place your order early.

Our booklet, "Twelve Rules to Help Buyers," tells how to compare cars of all makes, styles and sizes. Another booklet, "The Difference Between Price and Value," tells what you pay for when you buy a car. Both books sent upon request.

The Winton Six carries no starting crank in front. Starts from the seat without cranking.

So flexible that gear-changing is seldom required.

Quieter than nine-tenths of the electrics you pass on the street.

Goes the route like coasting down hill.

Beautiful in its lines, superb in the character of its design and the quality of its material and workmanship.

Precisely the car for the man that seeks the best there is.

Made in two sizes, with various body designs. Five-passenger, 48 h. p. Winton Six touring car $3000. Seven-passenger, 60 h. p. Winton Six touring car $4500.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

Secretary Graettinger of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is sending out the following circular to non-members of the association:

The Wisconsin Bankers Association is continually growing stronger and the membership increasing. All of its energy and resources are turned for the benefit of all the banks in this state. It has reduced the cost of burglary insurance, and has been the means of eliminating a number of technicalities which formerly appeared in the several policies. It offers you a lower and uniform rate for time lock cleaning; it has created a "protective fund," out of which the expense incurred by any member up to $250.00, in arresting and prosecuting bank burglars and forgers, is paid; it causes warning notices to be sent to every member when informed of the operations of any criminals.

These and many more are the benefits derived from membership in the association. Can you afford to remain out when the annual dues are so small?

The Milwaukee Provident Loan Society

At the annual meeting of the Milwaukee Provident Loan Society a dividend of 15 per cent on outstanding stock was declared. The profits distributed amounts to a total of $4,777.50. There are 109 stockholders holding a total of 637 shares. There remains in the treasury a total of $2,397.28, which makes the shares worth $53.75, or $3.75 above par. It is probable the society will double its present capitalization of $50,000. William Lindsay, W. B. Rubin, C. W. Norris and H. M. Benjamin were elected directors to succeed themselves. Officers will be elected at a subsequent meeting. A total of 2,061 applications were received last year, of which 603 were new borrowers. The total loans amounted to $101,640.91, an increase of $19,977.91 over those of 1907. Total earnings for the year were $9,306.68, making a net profit of $4,121.36, or 13 per cent net on the paid-in capital. There were very few foreclosures.

Milwaukee Clearing House Association

The annual meeting of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association was held at the Milwaukee National. The following named officers were re-elected: President, J. W. P. Lombard of the National Exchange; vice-president, James K.

Ilsley of the Marshall and Ilsley; manager, Geo. W. Strohmeyer of the Milwaukee National. No other business was transacted.

Hughes, assistant cashier First National; A. H. Lindsay, cashier Marine National; Ed Redeman, assistant cashier Germania National; J. H. Puelicher, cashier Marshall & Ilsley, and E. A. Farmer, assistant cashier German-American. Group One unanimously adopted a resolution directing the distribution of literature to call the attention of the people to the probable operation of the proposed postal savings banks. An officer of the group said after the meeting that it was intended by such literature to show the disadvantage of postal savings banks. C. W. Lockwood of Eau Claire, was elected president of the group, and George D. Bartlett of Stanley, secretary-treasurer.

The Fidelity Makes Report

Expenditures of $186,721.94 were made during the last year by the Fidelity Trust Company, receivers for the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railway company, that branch of the interurban road embracing the Milwaukee street lines. The company presented its annual report to Judge Tarrant. Of this sum $176,258.61 was expended for construction work, most of which went to the Columbia Construction company. Maintenance cost $9,463.33. The receipts go to the receivers appointed in federal court for the entire system.

Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance Company

Gen. Otto H. Falk was elected a director of the Milwaukee Mechanics' Insurance Company at the annual meeting of stockholders Monday afternoon. He succeeds Sebastian Brand. ### A South African Travel Book

Under the taking title "The Other Americans" Scribners have brought out a most pretentious book of travel by Arthur Ruhl, a distinguished globe trotter and magazine writer. There are three hundred pages and the text fully illustrated.

The book gives a splendidly clear idea of Caracas and the Venezuelans, of Lima and the Peruvians, of Bolivia, of the metropolis of the Andes, which bears the name of Santiago, the Cuban city familiar to us from the Spanish war, of the cordilleras in winter, of the city of Buenos Aires (the city of Good Airs), of Rio and Brazil.

Mr. Ruhl is a traveler of unusual powers of observation and style. His narrative is instructive and interesting, brightened by many well-told stories and memorable anecdotes.

The volume is very handsome, fully illustrated and retails for $2.00. The side lights upon "governmental concessions" the magnet which draws most of the visitors, are worth many times the cost of the book.

In and Around Pittsburgh By LATIMER T. LAWTON

Plans have been prepared for another handsome banking house for Pittsburgh, although it is scarcely probable that work on the structure will be commenced this year.

It will be the new home of the Safe Deposit and Trust Company, and will occupy the frontage on Fourth Avenue next to the Arrott building. This property extends through to the site of the building of the Peoples National, which the trust company controls. The plan is to erect a four-story building, with ample space for business rooms on the first floor, allowing the upper stories for the clerical forces of the two institutions.

The Peoples National building was remodeled several years ago and need not be touched, but it will be connected with the trust company building in such a manner as to make them practically one.

The plans as prepared allow sufficient space for the institutions at this time, as well as provide for such demands as may be made by the rapidly expanding business in the future.

To Quote Bank Shares

Dealings in Pittsburgh bank and trust company stocks will be resumed on the stock exchange on February 1st, after a suspension in this department since October 22, 1907, the day preceding the announcement of the appointment of receivers for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. The directors of the exchange have also approved a recommendation for the establishment of an unlisted department.

R. J. Davidson Elected President

R. J. Davidson has been elected president of the Guarantee Title and Trust Company of Pittsburgh, succeeding Joseph R. Paull, resigned. W. H. Seif has been elected vice-president; S. H. McKee, second vice-president; C. C. Taylor, third vice-president, and Alexander Dunbar, secretary and treasurer.

The Pittsburgh Life and Trust Company

The Pittsburgh Life and Trust Co., which recently absorbed the Washington Life Insurance Co., has apportioned from the company's surplus dividends to the class of Washington Life policies upon which that company did not pay any dividends during 1908.

First National of Weatherby

The First National of Weatherby elected the following directors: Elmer Warner, J. M. Stauffer, A. D. Swartz, E. F. Warner, W. P. Long, A. L. Pottiger, R. O. Sendel, A. M. Masonheimer, T. J. Drumbor, and A. L. Patterson.

A Pittsburgh Stock Exchange Seat

A seat in the Pittsburgh stock exchange, that of the late J. S. McKelvy, has been sold at auction for $3,650. This was $850 less than the last price of a membership at auction, and $350 less than the last regular sale.

The First National of Ambridge

The First National of Ambridge has created the office of second vice-president, and Frank E. Reader, of the law firm of Rice, Morrison, Reader & May, has been elected to the place. Mr. Reader has been a director of the bank since its organization. The other officers are: President, John R. Miner; vice-president, W. C. Robinson; assistant cashier, J. H. Crawford.

The Allegheny-National

Receiver Robert J. Lyons of the Allegheny National, expects that checks for another dividend will be received from Washington before the close of the week. The dividend amounts to 10 per cent, about $256,000, and it is believed that assets still on hand will eventually permit the payment of all depositors' claims in full. Receiver Lyon is also receiver of the Cosmopolitan, and it is thought that a dividend of 10 per cent will soon be declared by him for that institution.

The Keystone National

Vice-President W. H. Nimick of the Keystone National of Pittsburgh, has been elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the death of George M. Laughlin. William Witherow, a director of the bank, has been elected vice-president.

A Director Dead

William G. Park, director of the Mellon National, Union Trust Company, and the Union Savings Bank of Pittsburgh, is dead.

The Enactment Given in Full

Following is the enactment covering transactions in bonds:

"That on and after February 1, 1909, all bonds be quoted 'and interest,' and that it is not necessary to specify this in making bids or offers for record on the board. Interest at the rate specified on the bond must be computed on the basis of 360 days a year, i. e., every calendar month is one-twelfth of 360 days, 30 days, and every period from a date in one month to the same date in the following month is 30 days. The securities' committee will adopt rules covering time contracts, bonds in default, etc."

New National for Bally

A new national bank has been organized at Bally with a capital of $25,000. Geo. W. Melcher, Oswin W. Berky, Chas. Genszler, Jeremiah Case, T. S. Jansen, S. B. Latshaw and others are promoters.

Two Companies Organized

The Monroe Trust Company and the Peoples Trust Company have been organized at Stroudsburg.

Increases its Capital

The Bridgeport National has increased its capital from $50,000 to $75,000.

The Bank of Nova Scotia

The annual report of the Bank of Nova Scotia just issued shows that, for the year ended December 31st, net profits were $559,577, out of which the regular dividend of 12 per cent per annum was declared.

The bank has a paid up capital of $3,000,000, a surplus or reserve fund of $5,400,000, (being 180 per cent of the amount of the paid up capital) and undivided profits of $55,741, also a special reserve fund of $100,000 to provide for loss in liquidating insolvent banks.

Total assets are $44,746,648, of which $10,035,284 are represented by cash, checks on and balances due by other banks, and sterling exchange, and $16,767,197 are investment bonds and call loans secured by collateral or a total of quick assets amounting to $26,802,481, being over 74 per cent of total liabilities to the public, which amount to $35,985,910.53.

The bank has 81 branches, of which 68 are in Canada. Other branches are in Boston, Chicago, Havana, Cuba; Kingston, Jamaica; St. Johns, Newfoundland. The bank's New York agency is at 48 Wall Street.

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, January 28.—The expected bill providing for the guaranty of bank deposits made its appearance in the Iowa legislature when Representative Dabney, of Davis county introduced it in the house. The Dabney bill provides that within sixty days after its enactment, the auditor of state must levy against the capital stock of each state and savings bank 1 per cent of the average daily deposits for the year preceding and the amount thus secured creates the state guaranty fund. The auditor is given power to make a special levy if the guaranty fund falls short of the demands upon it. National banks are permitted to take advantage of the act upon written application and the payments to the state auditor of the 1 per cent. If the government establishes a guaranteed system, national banks may have 90 per cent of their money for the preceding year refunded. Any state or savings bank refusing to comply with the demands of the auditor shall have its charter revoked.

Another Bill of Interest

This is but one of the several bills introduced in the legislature of special interest to bankers. Representative Grier, a banker from Deep River, has a bill providing that state banks may be assessed the same as nationals. He would have the assessment stand against the owners of the bank stock and in the meantime wants the legislature to memorialize Congress to amend the national law so that national banks may be assessed the same as state banks in the various states.

A Savings Bank Bill

Representative Schulte, of Clayton county, has offered a bill providing that savings banks may invest in real estate outside of Iowa and in adjacent states and not be confined to Iowa real estate investments.

Senator Smith, of Des Moines county, has a bill in the senate to permit trust companies and state and national banks to act as administrators, executors and guardians.

A Bill for Inheritance Tax

Senator Gilliland has a bill providing for an inheritance tax, but excepts real estate from the amounts fixed for taxation on the theory that real estate is assessed from year to year and has thus paid its share of taxes. Senator Seeley has a bill providing for the taxation of stocks of foreign corporations held in Iowa in such a manner that double taxation will not result. As yet the bill has not been introduced. Representative E. R. Moore, a Cedar Rapids banker, has introduced a bill providing that all fidelity, surety or guaranty companies must deposit with the state auditor a guaranty fund of at least $50,000 for the protection of the people who do business with the concern.

That the tax laws of Iowa are due for a revision seems certain from statements made by various legislators and already a bill has been introduced by Representative Harding, of Woodbury county, providing for the naming of a tax revision commission of five men to inspect tax laws in other states and report needed changes in Iowa.

Senator Cummins' Address

Senator A. B. Cummins of Des Moines was elected United States senator for the six year term, January 19th. In his address following his election, the senator referred to postal savings banks in the following words: "The constitution gives Congress the authority to establish post-offices and somewhere in this grant of power, must be found, if it exists, the authority to create a savings bank system. While I am in profound sympathy with the effort to stimulate a habit of savings among our people, I realize first that it will tax the ingenuity of the constitutional lawyer to find a safe footing for adding to the ordinary functions of a postoffice, the business of a bank. I realize also that it will require great care to prevent the postal savings banks from introducing disorder into our existing commercial and financial adjustment."

Senator Cummins' Interview

In an interview given by Senator Cummins upon his arrival in Des Moines from Washington, he said that he doesn't expect the postal savings bank proposition to come to a vote at all the present session of Congress. But the senator says that the postal savings bill now before Congress will never pass without some such amendments as he himself offered are adopted. These provide for the depositing by the government of the postal funds in the banks in the territory in which the postoffice is located, the depositing of the funds in state as well as national banks and the elimination of the section giving the government a first lien upon the bank deposits.

The Des Moines Bankers Club

The Des Moines Bankers Club at its monthly meeting in the Savery entertained Governor Carroll, Lieutenant Governor Clarke, and a number of legislators. Governor Carroll, in a brief address, declared that there should be a more thorough inspection of banks, and said there should be fifteen or twenty bank examiners in Iowa. James G. Berryhill of the Iowa National spoke on the unfair discrimination in legislation relating to the state and national banks. Senator Saunders of Council Bluffs was the third principal speaker.

Des Moines Bonds

Des Moines seems about to be extricated from the entanglement of its sale of bonds amounting to $350,000 for the construction of a new city hall. The sale has been held up pending the right of a city to issue bonds when its bonded indebtedness reaches a certain figure. But the bonding firm of Bechtel & Company, of Davenport, has come forward with a request that it be permitted to purchase the bonds as soon as the council offers them for sale. It is expected that the bonds will draw either 4 or 4½ per cent. Mr. Bechtel declared that in his opinion the feared legal tangle will come to naught.

Banking Notes

The Marquardt savings has filed with the city clerk a request that it be allowed warrants totaling $3,476.49 on claims which it purchased from contractor P. F. Smith some months ago. Afterwards the council and Smith engaged in a wrangle with the result that the claim was cut to $2,076.95. This left the bank holding the sack with a loss of $1,388.54.

Des Moines bank clearings made another big gain for the week ending January 23d. The total was $3,170,367.85, a gain of $632,317.12 over the corresponding week last year.

The first of the annual group meetings has been announced. It is that of Group Seven which meets at Cedar Rapids, February 22d.

The First National at Britt has passed into the hands of all Britt men. John Hammill has been elected to the directory succeeding Webb Vincent while C. P. Lewis takes the place of Mr. Vincent as vice-president.

C. D. Smith at Burt has sold the controlling interest in the First National of Burt of which he was cashier, to H. O. Buell. Mr. Smith will go to Lemmon, S. D., where he will have charge of several banks in that vicinity. H. O. Buell succeeds him as cashier at Burt.

S. E. Keith, A. B. Allen, and George Ramstad, all of Vinton, have purchased a controlling interest in the First National at Coleman, S. D. Keith will be president, Allen, cashier, and Ramstad, assistant cashier. The Coleman bank has a capital stock of $25,000 with a surplus of $5,000 and deposits of $175,000.

A. O. Hauge, cashier of the Iowa Trust and Savings, who is a believer in bank advertising, has offered three prizes of $10, $5, and $3 for the best advertisement for his bank written by high school students, who alone are eligible to the contest.

The Iowa National of Des Moines has been made reserve agent for the Ottumwa National.

J. M. Jones, for twenty years president of the Farmers National at Webster City, and one of its founders, has retired and his son Robert E. Jones has been elected in his stead. Mr. Jones was a soldier in the Civil War, a major and paymaster, and retires because of ill health.

The officers and directors of the Des Moines National, who have decided to start a savings bank in connection, are not able to decide upon a name for the new institution although they have discussed the proposition at several meetings.

Otto Beckjorden has resigned as deputy county auditor of Winnebago County and has taken a position with the Winnebago County State at Forest City.

The new steel work for the Farmers and Merchants Savings at Charlotte has been purchased and will soon be installed completing one of the best new bank structures in the state.

H. K. Holloway, formerly a well known Iowa banker at Creston, has retired as cashier of the Trinidad National at Trinidad, Colo., and expects to leave shortly for Europe.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., January 28.—The legislative committee of the Washington State Bankers Association has received for its action a bill embodying the views of some of the bankers who do not oppose the guaranty of deposits in state banks. This is to be presented to the legislature, now in session at Olympia. It provides for assessments of 3 per cent on the capital stock of banks or trust companies doing a banking business, instead of a tax on deposits. A provision of the bill restricts a bank to deposits in an amount equal to 10 times its capital stock. Provision also is made that the commission shall be composed of five men, four of whom are officers in banking institutions of the state of Washington, and the fifth the state bank examiner. The members, other than the examiner, are to be nonsalaried, provision to be made for actual expenses while traveling in discharge of the duties of the position and for the expenses of the office for clerk hire and other incidentals. Institution of the guaranty is to be upon the application of ten or more banks with $1,000,000 or more combined capital stock. Any bank or trust company now doing business that is qualified for membership may become a participant in the guaranty, while it is made compulsory for new banks to go into the organization. In the event of a failure of a bank the commissioners are to make immediate payment of the deposits, the money to be refunded to the fund from the assets of the bank with interest charged on funds so advanced at rate of 6 per cent. When occasion shall require, the commissioners are authorized to make assessments on the capital stock of banks for the benefit of the guaranty fund. An appropriation of $2,000 is asked to put the law in effect.

The Inland Bank

Robert E. Cavette, president of the Inland Bank, which closed during the flurry of 1907, is having a petition circulated among the depositors and creditors of the bank asking that the charge of violating the state banking laws be dismissed. The depositors, many of whom were working people and had placed their last penny in Cavette's Bank, will receive but a few cents on the dollar. Since the bank failed Cavette has been engaged in the realty business and the promotion of various prospects at Sunnyside, Wash., and is said to be prosperous. The case has been continued to the February term of the Spokane County Superior Court.

Good Work Done by Bank Examiner

Eugene T. Wilson, national bank examiner, also chairman examiner of the Pacific Coast district, has moved from Davenport, Wash., where he was receiver of the Big Bend National, to Seattle. In connection with the receivership which has been so nearly concluded that the remainder of the work can be closed, Mr. Wilson has effected the work with an expense of only 4.6 per cent of the liabilities, and 5.1 per cent of the collections. He did not promise more than 20 per cent on the Big Bend Bank when he was assigned by the Comptroller of the Currency.

Talk on Postal Savings Banks

It is probable that the reason I was asked to talk to you to-day about postal savings banks is because I have the honor of being chairman of the Committee on Postal Savings Banks of the American Bankers Association.

It will doubtless be of interest to you to know what this committee is doing and what it expects to accomplish.

It must be very plain to everyone that no committee of busy men can carry on an effective campaign which covers the entire country and which should reach every citizen of the country. We have felt, therefore, that the most effective work would be accomplished by putting the matter squarely up to the bankers of the United States. The proposition is one that should appeal to the officers, directors and stockholders of every banking institution in our country. The committee has felt that if proper literature were placed in the hands of the officers of each of the approximately 22,000 banks in the United States, these officers would carry on the work locally of explaining the matter intelligently to their depositors; prominent local men; the newspapers, and the people generally who have to do with the framing of public opinion and of ultimately making legislation. So it is that with our small appropriation we have sent out to all banks in the United States, regardless of whether they were members of the American Bankers Association or not, tens of thousands of copies of literature bearing on this subject, and it is the intention of this committee to keep this up. Further than that, we have communicated with the officers of state associations, asking them to communicate with their group chairmen; we have sent letters to credit associations, bar associations, etc., but in the campaign of education which we are carrying on the committee cannot say too positively that in the final analysis the effectiveness of the work which we are doing lies with the individual bankers throughout the country. They must take this matter up as their own particular work in their respective sections, communicating with their representatives in congress and explaining clearly the objectionable features of the postal savings bank.

The attitude of our committee toward those favoring the passage of postal savings legislation is entirely friendly, as our entire desire is to carry on an effective, educational campaign so that in the end the right side of the case may win. My observation is that the idea of postal savings banks has been urged, for the most part, by people of more or less socialistic disposition. In recent years the tendency toward giving greater power to the Federal government in the matter of the regulation of business enterprises has, of course, important bearing on the subject, although in the matter of postal savings banks the theory of government regulation of banking institutions is for the time being passed by, and we are urged to go over to the proposition of government ownership. I think, however, that in this country the theory is quite generally held that the function of the government is to regulate rather than to operate, and unless there is clearly a need for so doing the government should avoid engaging in business activities. Even the most casual study of American development will indicate that our aggressive pioneering work, through all the years, has been the result almost entirely of individual initiative.

Let us frankly admit that in the two points which are urged in favor of postal savings banks there are considerations worthy of notice. The advocates of postal savings banks consistently urge two points:

First, That a postal savings bank, being a government institution, would attract

(a) The savings of foreigners, who have been accustomed to government savings institutions abroad, and knowing nothing of our institutions, will become more thrifty citizens if provided with the system in America.

(b) Many American citizens who, through ignorance or some unfortunate experience, have no confidence in our banking institutions, will be led to make use of government depositaries.

LUCIUS TETER
Chicago

Second. It is claimed that in many parts of the United States banking facilities are not adequate for the needs of the people, and that the postal savings bank would furnish banking service for vast numbers who live at a remote distance from the larger towns, and who are deprived of banking service owing to this fact. There being more post offices than banks, it is argued that these people will be better served.

The altogether desirable results to be obtained are that it will make our people more thrifty and will bring from hiding a very considerable amount of currency that is not now in circulation.

While granting the strength of these arguments, it is well for us to examine carefully into the situation to learn:

First. Whether the need is as great as is claimed.

Second. Whether, even granting a very definite need, the benefits obtained would be as great as the injuries done.

Third. Whether our present banking system is developing, and whether it contains possibilities of development and regulation so that the needs will be met as the country grows.

In analyzing the first point of our investigation, a study of the subject will develop some interesting facts. The people who are in charge of the postal savings bank agitation at the present time seem to have entered into their campaign with amazing ignorance concerning banking conditions in the western part of our country. They seem also not to have taken advantage of the easy opportunities for procuring accurate figures for use in their literature.

In illustrating the need for postal savings banks, the advocates of the plan have taken the reports concerning the venerable mutual savings banks of the country, about 1,300 in number, and arbitrarily decided that these, and these alone, are the savings banks of the United States! As a matter of fact there are fully 22,000 banks, of all kinds, in the United States, and it is very conservative to say that fully 75 per cent of these institutions receive savings deposits, turning these deposits into the channels of business in their own neighborhoods and assisting in the upbuilding of their several communities.

Practically all of the remaining banks in the United States take small deposits and issue certificates of deposit therefor, which in the final analysis amounts to a savings bank service. So it is that while the mutual savings banks of the United States have approximately $3,500,000,000 of savings deposits, an eminent authority in financial matters has recently said that the grand total of savings deposits of mutual, state and national banks will certainly approximate $6,000,000,000. I believe this statement is conservative. In my judgment the total is even greater.

Senate Calendar No. 544, which I hold in my hand, is the report of senate committee on post offices and post-roads of a hearing in April 17, 1908, at which hearing the postmaster-general was present, as was Senator Carter, the author of the bill that is now being urged in the senate.

In this document information is given which leads one to understand that in your own state of Wisconsin there is only one bank accepting savings deposits, and that bank has a total deposit of $94,867, whereas your commissioner of banking, under date of November 27, 1908, shows that in the 450 state banks in your state there were $22,240,000 of savings deposits.

The same document would indicate that there are only five banks doing a savings business in the state of Indiana, with a total deposit of $3,552,000, whereas a letter from the auditor of the state of Indiana under date of January 18, 1909, advises me that in the state banks, trust companies and private banks in the state of Indiana, under date of September 30, 1908, there were $33,008,000 and in the five savings banks which are mentioned in Senate Calendar No. 544, $10,934,000 making a total of $43,942,000 of savings deposits in the total of 546 banking institutions under state supervision in that state.

The same document indicates that in the state of Illinois there are 21 banks accepting savings deposits with a total deposit of $16,362,000. The report of the auditor of state of Illinois, under date of September 24, 1908 indicates that 232 state banks accept savings deposits, the total deposits being on that date $179,702,240.

In no one of these cases is included the certificates of deposit, nor are the savings deposits in national banks taken into consideration. I might say at this time that the committee has suggested to the Comptroller of the Currency that a separate report of the savings deposits in national banks be called for, and he was good enough to make that request at the time of the last call, November 27th. This report shows that savings deposits are accepted by over 2,000 banks out of the 6,800 nationals in existence, and as we all readily recall national banks in our various neighborhoods who do accept savings deposits, it is entirely fair to say that the number of institutions accepting savings deposits in these three states would be very much greater than the numbers we have already given.

It would seem unnecessary for me to say very much to you men about the harm likely to result from establishing postal savings banks, since you are all familiar with the development of our western country. You all know that with the exception of the railroads nothing has had more to do with the developing of this territory than the banks. You know that the small bank established in a new community is the means of bringing in some outside capital and of carefully conserving such local capital as may develop. The money of the saving farm-hand, or the more prosperous farmer is taken by the bank and turned back into activity in the community by being loaned to some new resident, perhaps, to assist him in buying implements and animals for the development of his farm, and he is built up to times of prosperity, when he in turn becomes a lender of capital through the local bank, which in turn may loan the money to other farmers, or to storekeepers and manufacturers as the community develops. This work can never be done by the postal savings bank. Even its most ardent friends would not claim this for it, and yet they would create this system which would handicap present small banks in new communities, and without question defer for indefinite periods the establishment of new banks where needed.

Turning our attention briefly to our final point, as to whether our banking system is developing, one need but review the history of the last ten years in which the number of banking institutions in the United States has increased very rapidly. During that period the national bank act has been so adjusted that now national banks with capitals of $25,000 each may be established, and many hundreds of these institutions have been organized in the newer communities.

There is no doubt that many improvements should be made in our banking system—no greater improvement than that of providing suitable currency, which responsibility congress should dispose of before it undertakes anything further in the banking line. But the several states have a great work to do in bringing their banking legislation to the point where it would be fair to the bankers and give an absolutely satisfactory service to the people; however, this work of evolution is going on. The American Bankers Association and all of our state associations are carefully at work at all times in an effort to improve banking legislation in the several states. The friends of good government and those people who are sincere in a desire to provide better banking facilities for our people should unite with the banking fraternity in the cause of making good banking laws in the several states in preference to creating a substitute in the form of postal savings depositaries, which cannot in any sense meet the ultimate banking needs of the several communities.

Mastery of Mind Makes the Man

R. F. Fenno & Company of New York, have printed the latest volume from the pen of Henry Frank, author of the Kingdom Love and other collections of essays. The title is "The Mastery of Mind in the Making of a Man," and Mr. Frank writes:

"Some day, psychology will become a practical science reduced to the daily needs of man and included in the regular curricula of schools and colleges. The psychology that at present is studied is an academic pursuit, prosecuted chiefly to add to the curiosities of knowledge and the gratification of intellectual thirst. We are taught to regard the mind as an abstract faculty of the soul, or as an aggregation of faculties, each of which is controlled by metaphysical causes, beyond the apprehension of the ordinary man. The mind they say, is the seer, the feeler, the thinker. The mind is the aggregation of the phenomena of consciousness. The mind is the stage on which all the inward forces play their several parts; where the great drama of being is set and the ever-changing scenes are shifted. Yet how it works, by what law it is controlled, what deep-laid energies may be conjured for daily use, how it may be made a tool and not a mysterious agency at which we marvel but which we cannot apprehend, this the psychology of the universities does not yet teach us."

This, it must be admitted, is rather hard on the many teachers of psychology who are devoting all their powers to the attempt to accomplish that which Mr. Frank says they are failing to do. In a way, however, Mr. Frank is undoubtedly right. The popular knowledge of psychology is still exceeding vague. And vague it must almost inevitably be for many years to come. Still, there is a place for such books as Mr. Frank's, which, if it does not teach the many a great deal about the science of psychology, contains at least very much that is suggestive and inspirational. No one can read it without discovering new possibilities in the way of self-mastery and self-guidance, which, if he will seize upon them, must make his life broader and deeper and nearer to the ideal of true manhood. The first part of the book deals with the "psychic factors"—the mind, the heart and the soul; the second with the "physical instrument"—the brain, the nerves and the body; and the third with the "moral agents"—the parents, the teacher and environment.

Plan of Danish Government for Helping Disabled Banks

On February 15, 1908, the Danish legislature passed a bank guaranty act on the collapse of the Grundejerbank and the Detaillehandlerbank, in order to allay the panic and prevent further calamities. A state guaranty was given, and a committee appointed to control the working of the banks. This has lately attracted a good deal of attention for several reasons. In the first place, the government has increased its number of representatives on the bank committee from two to five, so that the government and the five assisting banks now have the same number of representatives; the government always had five votes, and one of its representatives is chairman of the committee. Secondly, the committee has decided that the public henceforward shall receive no information as to what takes place at its meetings, nor even as to when the meetings are held. And last, though not least, the scope of the guaranty through the, some think rather arbitrary, decision of the committee, has, it appears, been very materially extended beyond what was originally meant by the legislature and the exchequer. It now comprises other distressed banks, both in Copenhagen and the provinces, for which no provision whatever was made in the original law.

A Grant on Moral Support

This extension of the scope of the bank committee's work and duties is the more to be wondered at, inasmuch as the state guaranty up to Kr 10,000,000 was granted mainly as a moral support. It was not supposed that it would entail any actual loss to the exchequer, and this view was distinctly stated by the late minister of finance in recommending the adoption of the guaranty bill. It soon became manifest that the state guaranty would mean a loss, and probably rather a serious loss to the exchequer (through the unexpected insolvency of the Detaillehandlerbank), and that tax payers are beginning to grumble at the course adopted by the bank committee. The banks at present under the control (and guaranty) of the committee outside the two already mentioned, comprise the Laanekassen, Copenhagen, for which it was understood at first that the five guaranteeing banks (the Nationalbank, the Handelsbank, the Landsmandsbank, the Privatbank, and the Discontobank) held themselves responsible. And there are also included the Nibe and the Logstor banks, for which the Landsmandsbank was supposed to be the guaranteeing party, and finally the Fredericia Bank (originally a branch of the Landsmandsbank), with its deficit of some Kr 800,000.

Desire to Close the Arrangement

These latter four banks have been included in the joint state and bank guaranty without the authority of any legislative measure or parliamentary vote, the bank committee acting solely on the strength of a letter from the late minister of Finance, dated March 10, 1908, in which he authorized the bank committee to extend the state guaranty to the depositors in other banks upon which a run has been made or might be apprehended, and the downfall of which it might be deemed advisable to avert. The aggregate state guaranty, however, was not to exceed Kr 10,000,000. Parliament was not made acquainted with this letter until after its reassembling in October, and no additional or supplementary bill has so far been introduced or passed. It has also been stated, though again contradicted, that the banks within the bank committee, or at least some of them, were desirous of terminating the state co-operation by coming to an agreement as to how much the Danish state should contribute towards the losses, which sum was then to be paid down, and the exchequer to withdraw from the guaranty and the committee. The Nationalbank and another of the leading banks are understood to be against this plan, which has several obvious drawbacks, including the possibility of having to find other means to cover the advances made to the disabled banks through the bank committee, which amount to some Kr 38,000,000.

The Deficits Not Known

It is at present impossible to form any approximately accurate estimate of the deficits in the various insolvent banks (from which the Grundejerbank and the Laanekassen are excluded) but the deficit, beyond the entirely lost share capital (Kr 12,000,000, as far as the Detaillehandlerbank is concerned), is put at from Kr 5,000,000 to Kr 7,000,000 for this bank, both of which figures may prove excessive; the joint deficit for the Logstor and the Nibe banks is likely to be about Kr 800,000, and that of all the Fredericia Bank as already stated, is supposed to be also some Kr 800,000, so that the aggregate loss may amount to some Kr 8,000,000, of which half comes upon the state. Legal investigation is going on as regards certain dealings and doings of the three Copenhagen banks under the control of the bank committee, but so far no public proceedings have been instituted. State aid in some shape is also about to be invoked in connection with the Farmers of Sealand Savings Bank, which has been closed since the day of Alberti's arrest. His embezzlements have left a deficit of Kr 14,000,000—Kr 15,000,000.

"The Girl and the Motor"

Hilda Ward has written, and illustrated by her own drawing, a book upon "The Girl and the Motor," which will make a lot of people revise their notions about the tractability of motors in general and about the mechanical ability of the American girl. The text is good and likewise the pictures. The book is as interesting as it is instructive and only sells for a dollar. Published by the Gas Engine Publishing Co., Cincinnati.

The National Board of Trade

Washington, January 25.—The National Board of Trade, at its annual meeting to-day discussed the proposed $500,000,000 bond issue for the improvement of the country's waterways and indorsed the President's advocacy of the plan for the conservation of natural resources. In the afternoon delegates visited the White House in a body and were received by President Roosevelt. The effort made by John S. Rossell, of Wilmington, Del., to secure the board's indorsement of a resolution to increase the membership of the Monetary Commission by eighteen members to be selected by the President of the United States from among the banking, manufacturing and commercial interests, was not successful.

R. J. Nelden

Paterson, January 25.—Robert J. Nelden has been elected president of the Paterson, (N. J.) Savings Institution at a meeting of the board of directors of the bank, this being a promotion from the position of cashier which he has held for about a year. He was formerly and for many years cashier of the First National, which is closely affiliated with the savings institution.

The directors also elected William R. Meakle to the position of secretary and named Justus G. Botbyl as assistant secretary and treasurer. It was decided not to fill the vacancy in the office of treasurer, caused by the elevation of Mr. Nelden, at this time.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce

The 23d annual report of the Boston Chamber of Commerce for the year ended December 31, 1908, is issued. The net income from all departments compares as follows: For 1908, $6,763; for 1907, $12,028; for 1906, $11,388; for 1905, $16,631, and for 1904, $10,474. The mortgage of real estate, which stood at $105,000 on December 31, 1907, has been reduced to $95,000 by the payment of $10,000 during the year. On account of the proposed merger of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Boston Merchants' Association, which has already been approved by both organizations, the retiring officers of the Chamber have been renominated to hold over until the merger and no contest is expected.

New Jersey's Guaranty Bill

A bill for the guaranty of deposits in banks and trust companies that fail, patterned after the Bryan plan and that followed in Oklahoma, was introduced in the senate at Trenton. The bill is fathered by Senator Gebhardt, and imposes a tax on the banks and trust companies to be levied by the state treasurer. This fund is to be known as the "insolvency fund," and is to be drawn on to liquidate losses by failed banks or trust companies when the assets fall short of the liabilities.

Edwin A. Potter

Edwin A. Potter was on Tuesday appointed receiver for the American Guaranty Company of Chicago by order of Judge Christian C. Kohlsatt in the United States Circuit court.

To Organize Sheridan Trust

Permission to organize the Sheridan Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago has been given by the state auditor of public accounts to W. J. Klingenberg, Malcolm Lamont, Theodore Krueger, Thomas F. Low and C. W. Ross. The bank when organized is to have a capital of $200,000, and it will be located at Wilson and Evanston avenues in Sheridan Park. The proposition to start the bank is still in preliminary form, none of the stock having been placed definitely and the subscription books not having been opened.

Cameron Quits Hamilton National

J. H. Cameron has resigned as vice-president and director of the Hamilton National of Chicago. His successor has not been announced. An officer of the bank said that the bank had no statement to make regarding the matter and Mr. Cameron declined to state his reasons for withdrawing. His position will be difficult to fill as but few men have the requisite knowledge of Chicago credits and banking practices who could be obtained.

J. F. Sullivan

James F. Sullivan, vice-president of the Market Street National of Philadelphia and of the Midvale Steel Company sailed for Liverpool Wednesday for a six weeks' trip in France and Italy.

Secretary N. P. Gatling

The spring campaign is on in Virginia for new members of the Virginia Bankers Association. Secretary N. P. Gatling, like the gun of the same name, is a rapid firer and his letters are quite warm after two or three shots and no reply from the nonmember banks. After stating neatly the benefits offered this January 30th letter winds up with this paragraph:

"Assuming that you have read the foregoing statements carefully, let us beg of you to give this matter the attention it deserves from you as a progressive bank. Do the proper thing—the loyal thing, sign the enclosed card, upon receipt of which by the secretary, you become at once a member of the Virginia Bankers Association, and a nicely framed certificate to that effect, ready for hanging in your banking room will be forwarded to you promptly. The courtesy of a prompt reply to this letter returning the card properly signed, or giving a reason for not joining the Association is respectfully requested."

George F. Orde

George F. Orde of Minneapolis was in Chicago the past week and returned home by way of Kansas City. He reported "business good and growing" in the great Northwest.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS

The daily papers have concluded, by agreement, to name Mr. Reynolds for the Treasury portfolio under Mr. Taft. The Chicago Banker for ten years has been reflecting the modest personality and great talents of the big chief of the American Bankers Association, and can add nothing new, except to say that the above portrait isn't a fancy but is absolutely a fact. Not anything could be more like him. Sitting for a portrait isn't the simplest thing in the world. In a letter to Trevor-Haddon, the painter, under date of July 5th, 1883, Robert Louis Stevenson wrote:

"I have no photograph just now, but when I get one you shall have a copy. It will not be like me; sometimes I turn out a capital fresh bank clerk; once I came out the image of Ranjeet Singh; again the treacherous sun has fixed me in the character of a traveling evangelist. It's quite a lottery, but whatever the next venture proves to be, soldier, sailor, tinker, tailor, you shall have a proof."

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

H OPE of gain and wobbly morals are at the bottom of most business irregularities. When a high class New York financial paper puts a man out to solicit advertising upon a "No Salary" basis but allows him from 30 to 60 per cent commission, they put him upon temptation. The other day one of these chameleons approached a Chicago advertiser with the argument that his paper "has ten times the 'cirkilation' (that's the way he pronounced it, how he would spell it the Lord only knows) of—in which you have an ad."

"N OW, MR. SOLICITOR, look here! You once told me the paper in which I am now advertising had ten times the circulation of the New York Financier, a paper which once employed you. Your latest story would mean, taken with the former, that the American Banker now prints one hundred times the number of copies issued by the Financier. They both are good papers, splendid, but neither one of them would keep you an hour if they knew what I know of your methods. Such tactics will not secure and cannot hold the business of any reputable institution."

T HE interview ended with the admonition "Don't come here again for any paper" and the knocker left. No paper can float such an incumbrance very long.

T HERE is another recent instance where one of the largest banks on La Salle Street asked for similar reasons, that no future calls be made at that bank. There was a time when automobile salesmen tried to land a customer by knocking all other cars. Their back axle was weak or their crank shafts snapped and soon the customer, by hearing such tales repeated wherever he went, was frightened from buying any. The best paper representatives speak well of all papers. The other kind belong to the variety of bird which befouls its own nest.

G REAT work is being done by Lucius Teter on behalf of the savings bank section in making addresses before bankers' meetings in various parts of the country. In the course of one week he appeared in Tennessee, Wisconsin and Massachusetts and in every instance presented a strong argument against the adoption of postal savings banks by the United States government. Mr. Teter is intensely in earnest and devotes much time and care to the preparation of his addresses and except in so far as compelled to do so by the presentation of statistics, he never repeats himself. Several private letters received from Boston, spoke very highly of his address there on January 27th.

I N all of the work done by the special committee appointed at Denver by the savings bank section to combat the postal bank heresy, it has had the co-operation of the secretary of the section, Wm. Hanhart, 100 Broadway. Mr. Hanhart himself is a savings bank man of vast experience and fully equipped for the preparation and arrangement of such data as the committee may care to circulate. The savings bank section for years has been the envy of the other sections in this respect. Mr. Hanhart always has worked in the friendliest of relationship with the general secretary, Col. Farnsworth. In these two men the American Bankers Association has found two secretaries who absolutely are matchless in both fidelity and ability.

I N a recent short trip through Nebraska, THE CHICAGO BANKER representative found that the little pink and blue slips prepared, printed and circulated by Carson Hildreth still are to be found on almost every banker's desk in his section of the state. As an up-builder his city and county of Franklin owe him a great deal. There isn't a phase of human activity to be found in his part of the great commonwealth in which he is not a leading spirit. Two of the latest issues of his circulars relate to securing better freight rates for the shippers from points in his vicinity and toward the purchase of a new Grand Piano for the Franklin Academy.

M R. HILDRETH believes that it is a part of a banker's prerogative to assist in the building up of every local enterprise, whether it is of a money making nature or as in the case of the Franklin Academy purely educational. There are seasons of the year when Mr. Hildreth is after everybody to plant trees. At another time he is urging the farmers to improve their stock or to build better roads. To enumerate all of this busy gentleman's activities would be to catalog the improving processes of Franklin County, Nebraska.

FRIENDS of W. G. Edens of this city who had the misfortune to fall and break his leg recently, will be glad to know that the necessary operation by the surgeons was performed successfully and that Mr. Edens' recovery has been so rapid that he will be removed to his home to be with his family on Sunday.

T HE new president of the Guarantee Title & Trust Company of Pittsburgh is R. J. Davidson, a young man of brilliant attainments in the banking line whose portrait appears elsewhere in this issue of THE BANKER. W. H. Seif, first vice-president of this growing institution, also is a young man and had his early training in the business office of Pittsburgh's greatest newspaper—The Pittsburgh Dispatch. S. H. McKee and S. S. Taylor, second and third vice-presidents, and Alexander Dunbar, secretary and treasurer, also can be classed among Pittsburgh's younger bankers. It will be remembered that Jos. R. Paull retired from the presidency of this institution to engage in the bond and investment business. The bank has a capital of $1,000,000 and a surplus of a like amount.

A NOTHER of our middle western states has adopted the group system and Kentucky will hereafter be divided into eleven such groups. The phenomenal success of this system in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Illinois has been responsible for other states organizing their state bankers association into groups. Nothing else can build up the state organization so rapidly.

ILLINOIS has made more progress in one year under the group system than in five years of its previous history. The employment of a skilled and accomplished secretary and the opening of permanent headquarters has given prompt results. During the month of January more than thirty new members were added to the Illinois Association and orders for insurance policies keep coming in at the rate of about five per day. If business continues to grow and members continue to come in, Illinois will before long be without a rival as to the size of its state organization.

T HE Baltimore Clearing House has formally endorsed Harry M. Mason of the Commercial and Farmers' National for appointment as bank examiner in the Baltimore district. Mr. Mason has had previous experience in this office and has been vice-president and cashier of his bank during the period of its greatest prosperity. It isn't likely that a better man could be obtained for the position than Mr. Mason.

N OT everyone knows that C. L. Wise, who figures so modestly on the editorial page of the New York Financier as "treasurer" is, in reality, the owner of the paper. The late Col. Ewing had borrowed on the stock of his paper to invest in Brooklyn real estate equities, all of which doubtlessly would have worked out had he lived. His death in Chicago caused a receivership for the real estate and in the panic of 1907 the bank which had loaned upon his stock failed and the loan was called. All he had put into the real estate was lost and the bank sold the Financier stock to Mr. Wise who had been receiver for the real estate.

M R. WISE is a progressive, and has made a fortune as an insurance broker. He already has left his impress upon the Financier. New supplements are being added and Mr. Wise is "looking" about for a few more publications to keep his big printing plant busy. Just at present he is en route to California but the financial trade press is fortunate that at least one powerful paper has fallen into such conservative hands. Mr. Hazen, the talented editor of the Financier, will remain in charge at great advantage to the paper and at some profit to himself.

A STORY that the Financier would consolidate with or purchase another New York paper was quickly put at rest by Mr. Wise, who said "nothing to gain by it." And that's the kind of a man Mr. Wise is.

I T will be remembered that the Council Club, which was organized at Denver, will hold its first annual banquet and meeting during the Chicago convention of the American Bankers Association. Every ex-member of the executive council of the A. B. A. is eligible for membership and the price of the banquet ticket will include the annual dues and other expenses, which will, of course, be nominal.

W HEN the ex-members were called together at Denver, they very appropriately chose John L. Hamilton as president for the first year and Joseph H. Ingwersen of Clinton, Iowa, as secretary. These two have secured the names and addresses of eligible members from Secretary Farnsworth at the New York office. This compilation in itself was no small job.

T HE main officers of the big Council Club, in addition to those named, will be the members of the banquet committee. W. T. Fenton, of this city, by common consent, has been chosen as chairman of the banquet committee and all other ex-members of the big council, resident in Chicago, will serve on the committee with him. Privately, we expect J. M. Hurst, who distinguished himself during the Illinois Bankers convention last fall, to do a large part of the executive work.

M R. FENTON now is in Europe but upon his return activities will be in order. The precedent set in Chicago of naming all of the local eligibles probably will be followed in other cities where the Council Club will meet in conjunction with the American Bankers Association convention.

The Pittsburgh Banking Situation

By H. P. Taylor & Co.

Pittsburgh, February 1, 1909.—The election of directors, by all of the national banks and by most of the state banks and trust companies of Pittsburgh, in January, failed to show any noteworthy changes tending to suggest important demarkations from the established order of financial arrangements in Pittsburgh. No surprise was expressed over the results of these annual meetings, though there had been repeated predictions that several interesting eliminations would occur. But there was none, and only such directors, who had declined reelection or had retired for reasons personal or otherwise, of which due knowledge was had in the financial district, were the only ones whose names do not now appear in the directorate of the banks. Nevertheless, the close student of banking in Pittsburgh, has been noting a gradual, though none the less steady, reshaping of bank management; a return towards aforetime conditions and a recovery from the baneful effects of the recklessness and extravagances practiced in the period from the beginning of 1900 to about the end of 1903. There is no doubt in our minds that several of our largest and best managed banking institutions will be guided by new heads within the next few years. There are some men now identified therewith who have been trying to lighten their burdens and to shift cares and responsibilities on younger shoulders. Foreseeing coming retirements, bankers and bank directors have been canvassing the situation and have found a woeeful lack of material with which to maintain the position and prestige of the institutions that are practically certain to be affected. Perhaps the chief reason for this deficiency is due to the fact that the Pittsburgh district has so many banks and trust companies, of which more than 50 per cent have been organized within the last eight years, that men have been taken away from the older institutions before they had full opportunity for development and were placed in positions where their duties and responsibilities are not broadening to an extent comparable with those attached to the big banks and trust companies. The scarcity of men available for executive heads was aptly illustrated only a few weeks ago when a downtown institution experienced unexpected difficulties in securing the right kind of an official. This same question is certain to bother other banks in the comparative near future.

Many Banks have been Liquidated

Despite the voluntary or involuntary liquidation of 35 banks and trust companies since 1903, having an aggregate capital of approximately $20,000,000, there are still 79 banks and trust companies in Pittsburgh, proper, which, according to their last official statements, had $53,500,000 capital; $83,950,000 surplus and undivided profits and $265,400,000 deposits. Of the 35 institutions referred to, 20 were absorbed by other banks and trust companies. The year 1903 was the period of greatest activity in banking mergers and consolidations, of new organizations and of increases in capital stock by existing institutions. The institutions absorbed include the American, Home, Equitable, Moreland, Standard Security, Pennsylvania, German and Public Trust Companies; the Colonial, Tradesmens, Iron City, Merchants & Manufacturers, Republic, Industrial and Fifth National banks; the Pittsburgh National Bank of Commerce, N. Holmes & Sons, the Bank of Brushton and the City Savings Bank. In addition, the banking departments of the Bankers Trust Company, the Mortgage Banking Company and the Mt. Washington Savings & Trust Company have been liquidated. In seven years, the following suspended: The Prudential Trust Company, the State Bank, the North American Savings Company, the Fort Pitt National Bank, the Allegheny National Bank, the Iron City Trust Company, the Traders & Mechanics Bank, the Treasury Trust Company, the Columbia Savings & Trust Company and the Cosmopolitan National Bank. In this same seven year period, a large number of banks and trust companies were started which includes the Washington National Bank, the Washington Trust Company, the Liberty Savings Bank, the Metropolitan Trust Company, the Pennsylvania Savings Company, the Farmers Deposit Savings Bank, the Continental Trust Company, the Land Title & Trust Company, the Oakland Savings & Trust Company, etc., omission being made of such institutions that have been liquidated.

Period of High Priced Stocks

Of the institutions voluntarily liquidated, practically all were absorbed in some ambitious plan of consolidation. In 1903 there had been the craziest speculation in bank stocks in Pittsburgh which this country has probably ever experienced. All ideas of real value were lost sight of in the upward sweep of prices, and sales at from 100 to 500 per cent above were common. The banks, as well as the speculators, caught the fever and not only facilitated the movement by loaning money on bank stocks carried on margin, but issued many thousand new shares of stocks, selling the same at premiums ranging all the way from $40 to $1,900 per share. The authorized stock increases in 1903 alone were 155,000 shares. Of this, the Bank of Pittsburgh, National Association, issued 24,000 shares in exchange for the stocks of the Iron City and Merchants & Manufacturers National Banks, and the Colonial Trust Company issued 20,000 shares in exchange for the 23,000 shares of American Trust Company, carrying with it control of the Germania Savings Bank and the Columbia National Bank, as well as the Tradesmens National Bank and the Pennsylvania Trust Company, then in process of liquidation. This left 111,000 shares of new stock authorized for sale at certain fixed prices, the aggregate value thereof having been $41,925,000. As an illustration of the manner in which these huge premiums were obtainable, the American Trust Company is cited. That institution was organized in 1900, with a capital of $1,000,000. It had been in business over two years and had made less than $15,000 above its expenses. But one dividend was paid during its existence. The stock had always been considerable of a market favorite and the sharp premium it commanded was, in a large measure, directly responsible for the ease with which the stocks of new banking propositions were advanced even before the subscriptions had been paid in. Early in 1903, the company, whose stocks had been sent as high as $550 per share, increased its capital by 15,000 shares, on which a price of $500 per share had been placed. Most of the new stock, however, was given in exchange for stock of the Germania

Savings Bank, on a basis of almost $1,500 per share, including ownership of the Germania Building; for stock of the Columbia National Bank at $450 per share; for stock of the Pennsylvania Trust Company at $310 per share and for stock of the Tradesmens National Bank at $200 per share. This combination was taken over by the Colonial Trust Company, which company, in August, 1903, authorized a second increase in its capital from $4,000,000 to $6,800,000, which, however, was never utilized to absorb the Farmers Deposit National Bank. The Colonial National Bank, owned by the Colonial Trust Company; the Columbia and the Tradesmens National Banks were removed to the Farmers Deposit National Bank and placed in liquidation. The American and Pennsylvania Trust Companies were removed to the Colonial Trust Company and liquidated, while the Germania Savings Bank was undisturbed. Early in December, 1903, the Farmers Deposit-Colonial Trust merger was declared inoperative, the contention being made that the terms of consolidation could not be carried out. The Columbia National Bank, with the remnants of the Colonial and Tradesmens National banks, returned to Fourth Avenue and Wood Street with less than $750,000 of the more than $8,000,000 deposits taken to the Farmers Deposit National Bank, but, in two years, the former record was almost reached. In addition to the huge amount of bank capital increases above mentioned, 21 new banks and trust companies began business in the same year, having an authorized capital of $6,175,000 and an initial surplus of $1,841,000.

Influence of Inflation on Present Conditions

We refer to these events of 1903 at some length because of their peculiar bearing at the present time. Many investors and speculators were financially crippled in the reaction from the dizzy heights reached on the movement in bank stocks, but the paralyzing effects have been apparent not only in brokerage, but in business circles within the last six to nine months. The aggregate losses, on account of reckless bank stock speculation, probably exceed $50,000,000, but, while this may at first seem like a thoughtless estimate, it requires only a little figuring to demonstrate the approximate probability of such an amount. The above showing also has a closer significance. One institution has been working on a plan of divesting itself of controlled banks for the past several months. The financial district is much interested in the outcome, as the basis of settlement or apportionment will, in a large measure, merely be a reflection of the real unprofitableness of consolidations, absorptions and mergers on an inflated basis as they exist in other quarters. Pittsburgh has been laboring hard to rid itself of the pernicious influences of the consolidation and capital-increase period. A few of the banks have, by reducing their dividends, publicly acknowledged the error of attempting to practically deplete their earnings by paying rates of dividend, established in 1903, 1904 or 1905, when conditions were radically different than they are to-day, and when inflation was in the air.

Other Changes Predicted

The banks are also gradually coming to realize the importance of other changes in their methods of conducting business. Last March the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association elected a committee to make a study of the situation, especially emphasis being implied on the matters of paying interest on daily balances and of collecting checks at par. The committee has secured much valuable data and, while there is a natural diversity of opinion, bankers are coming more and more to realize the folly of maintaining many features of the system or practices in vogue. The payment of high interest rates on banking and checking accounts, along with other concessions, have not only materially cut into the profits of the banks, but, in order to make interest accounts profitable, some unusual risks were taken, which, in effect, were responsible for not a little of the uneasiness and uncertainty in our banking position in November and December, 1907. But mistakes have been profited by and there is now a more businesslike administration of financial affairs. We predict the consolidation of some of our large banks before the end of next year and the elimination of smaller institutions for the same reasons as have applied thereto in the past five years.

Resuming Open Trading in Bank Stocks

Opened trading in bank stocks will be resumed to-day. The last public quotations were on October 22, 1907, when the exchange was closed on account of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing receivership. Bank stocks were denied quotation when the exchange reopened for business on January 27, 1908. There have been private transactions and sales at auction in the meantime and prices now prevailing show marked declines from 1907. As compared with 1903, declines range all the way from $100 to $500 for many stocks. Trading is resumed under important restrictions. There will be one call daily, at 11 o'clock, which is the only time when bids, offers and sales may be made, and the secretary of the exchange has been granted authority by the directors to refuse to accept any trades or quotations which he may consider misleading, absurd or intended for manipulative purposes. These restrictions will curb speculation and will tend to encourage investment buying. At one time bank stocks were most popular investment securities in Pittsburgh and present prices are more nearly in line with actual value than at any period within the past seven or eight years.

Wisconsin Bankers Association

A party using name of F. S. Henry is reported to have cashed checks at Norwalk and Rio, Wis., recently, supposed to be signed by "Emerson and Papke Company" or "Henry and Papke" on the National Bank of Commerce, Mankato, Minn. These checks are, apparently, forgeries, as there are no such accounts carried at said Bank.—M. A. Graettinger, Secretary.

Coinage in January

The coinage executed by the mints during January was as follows: Gold, $5,924,890; silver, $847,000; minor, $134,030. Philippine Islands, 1,956,000 pieces, San Salvador, 6,934,170 pieces.

The Council Club

Secretary J. H. Ingwersen, Clinton, Ia., of the Council Club, composed of the ex-members of the executive council of the American Bankers Association has notified the following well known bankers that they will serve upon the banquet committee for the Chicago convention. Those named are: W. T. Fenton, chairman, Homer W. McCoy, Ralph Van Vechten, August Blum, T. J. Fletcher, E. A. Potter, Geo. M. Reynolds, Lucius Teter.

It is the idea of President Hamilton and Secretary Ingwersen to prepare a neat badge to be worn by the members of the club. These two officers hope to meet at the next Bankers Club dinner in Chicago, to settle on further details.

Mercantile National Growing

The Mercantile National of St. Louis, which opened for business on January 14th, has already deposits amounting to over $3,000,000. A large per cent of this money came from out-of-town clients, and a small portion represents accounts transferred from the Mercantile Trust Company, the surplus of which furnished the capital for the bank. The bank has already arranged its foreign connections, and its new currency is expected to be in circulation at an early date.

Swanger Appoints Helpers

Jefferson City, Mo., February 1.—State Bank Commissioner Swanger to-day announced the following additional appointments for his department: Victor T. Moberly, receiving teller of the International Bank of St. Louis, one of the eight inspectors, and Ross B. Sayle of Clark, stenographer.

Victor T. Moberly has been connected with the International Bank of St. Louis for several years and was teller of that bank when he was appointed by Secretary of State Swanger as special agent to wind up the affairs of the Olive Street Bank. He is a native of Humphrey, Sullivan County, Mr. Swanger's home, where he assisted his father, George T. Moberly, cashier of the Farmers' Exchange Bank, before coming to St. Louis.

Group One, P. B. A., Banquet

Several hundred bankers of Philadelphia and the country at large assembled at the annual banquet of Group One of the Pennsylvania members of the American Bankers Association, which was given in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Friday night. It was the largest gathering of the kind ever held there.

While the occasion was mainly one of good fellowship, the program included serious discussions by those attending.

There were four after-dinner speeches, each speaker being limited to twenty minutes. Postmaster-General George von L. Meyer addressed the bankers on "Postal Savings Banks."

He was followed by John S. Wise, a prominent New York lawyer, but a Virginian by birth, who responded to the toast, "The Sunny South;" the Rev. George H. Ferris, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Philadelphia, on "The Business of Belief," and Cresswell MacLaughlin, on "The Art of Saying Nothing Briefly." Howard W. Lewis, president of the Farmers and Mechanics' National, was toastmaster.

Wants Clearing Houses to Examine Banks

Washington, January 30.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray has asked Bank Examiner Hanna, of New York, to consult with some of the banking interests of the New York Clearing House to ascertain whether it is not possible to hit upon a plan of bank examination by the Clearing House, which shall be independent of the national bank examination, but which shall also have in view the furnishing to the Comptroller, data which are needed by, or likely to be of use to him in maintaining a satisfactory condition in the affairs of the different institutions. Mr. Murray has been informed by groups of bankers in several other cities that it is their intention to take such a step by appointing an examiner to go through the banks belonging to the clearing houses of those cities. Mr. Murray has become convinced that something more than bank examinations controlled from Washington is desirable to assure the best results.

Depositors in the Fidelity National of Cincinnati, the E. L. Harper institution, which failed in 1887 following a futile effort of Harper to "corner" the wheat market, have received a final dividend of 55-100ths of 1 per cent. This payment will make a total of 59.04 per cent recovered by the depositors.

The failure was the greatest sensation of its year in this country. The Fidelity National had a capital of $1,000,000 and a large surplus and the deposits aggregated about $4,000,000. The capital and surplus was wiped out and the stockholders were assessed for 100 per cent.

New Bank for Vienna

A new bank has been organized and will be launched at Vienna this month. The safe and fixtures have been purchased, and as soon as they arrive the bank will open for business. The new concern will be called the Farmers' Deposit Bank. W. J. Wildman, for nine years cashier of the Citizen's Bank of South Charleston and for seven years connected with the Exchange Bank of Cedarville, is at the head of the new institution.

Municipal Bonds for Deposit Funds

Attorney Ed H. Moore, of Youngstown, was in Columbus last week to put an important question to state treasurer D. S. Creamer before the state funds are loaned on competitive bidding. He believes that successful bidders who can furnish public bonds as security should be given preference over those who offer surety bonds. In fact, he is of the opinion that the treasurer ought to give notice to all bidders that one half of 1 per cent would be added to their interest rate bids if they offer surety bonds as security. He points out that a financial institution which would secure a large deposit of the state funds might fail. While he has no particular opposition to surety bonds, still he feels that in case of such a failure there would be no trouble of collection where municipal or county bonds were placed as security with the treasurer, as they would be worth their face value at least and would bring full returns for the amount deposited without a probable contest in the courts.

The Superior Savings and Trust Company

F. A. Scott, who since its organization has been secretary-treasurer of the Superior Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland, has been elected vice-president in recognition of his able services. E. L. Howe, the assistant secretary, was made secretary and P. J. Darling, the assistant treasurer, becomes treasurer.

Depositors Propose Expert Investigation

A call was issued by a committee of depositors for a general meeting of the creditors of the assigned Citizens' State Bank of Napoleon, to be held next Monday, to determine what action to take to protect their interests. A half million deposits will be represented, and both criminal and civil actions will be considered. An expert accountant, and local attorneys are expected to be employed to examine the bank officials under oath concerning the bank transactions.

The North Dayton Savings Bank

The incorporation papers for a new banking house at Dayton to be located on Valley Street, near Troy, has been filed. The new enterprise is to be known as the North Dayton Savings Bank and is backed partly by J. N. Lemmon, cashier of the Citizens' Bank of Waynesville.

The other directors are Dr. F. A. Duckwall, David L. Pickrel, R. A. Bunn and S. H. Thall. The capital stock is $25,000.

It is alleged that the bank was insolvent when sold to them.

The Farmers & Citizens Bank & Saving Company

The stockholders of the Farmers & Citizens' Bank & Savings Company of Bucyrus held their annual meeting recently for the purpose of electing directors and voting on a constitutional amendment. A proposed amendment of the constitution, abolishing the finance committee, was decided against and the by-laws will remain unchanged.

The regular election of directors resulted as follows, there being nineteen candidates with fifteen to elect: G. W. Miller, Amos Keller, James Decker, W. H. Angene, D. B. Eichelberger, Jacob Bach, C. R. Rowe, T. M. Kenedy, H. N. Oberlander, E. C. Heinle, A. S. Leuthold, F. Schifer, Samuel Fauser, R. O. Perrott and D. H. Miller.

Tax on Life Insurance

The Ohio tax on life insurance companies is illegal is the decision of the Supreme Court handed down last week. The decision says foreign insurance companies are exempt from the tax on their premiums so long as the premiums are forwarded to the New York or other headquarters of the companies out of the state. The tax here is 2½ per cent upon gross premiums.

The case was brought by the Mutual Life Insurance Company against the state of Ohio a year ago. The common pleas and circuit courts upheld the state's contention, but today the Supreme Court reversed this.

The Cincinnati Trust Company

Financial and banking circles last week had a rumor that the Cincinnati Trust Company has under consideration an increase in the capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000. The bank has a surplus of nearly $400,000, and the deposits are over $5,000,000.

Indianapolis and Indiana Banking News

By CHARLES REMINGTON

Notice has been given in Rochester by the stockholders of the Indiana Bank and of the Rochester Trust & Savings Company that the two banks would soon consolidate. The business of the bank will be transacted in the present Bank of Indiana's quarters by practically the same force now employed. Some of the stockholders were interested in both banks and they felt that by merging interests a larger and a stronger institution would result. The new bank will have a paid-up capital of $75,000. Frank E. Bryant has been chosen president. A. B. Green, for years cashier of the Bank of Indiana, will continue in the same capacity, with Charles Burns as assistant. A. J. Barrett is vice-president, P. J. Stingly, cashier, and A. C. Beyer, treasurer of the savings department, and G. W. Holeman, general counsel. The directors include J. E. Beyer, G. W. Holeman, A. J. Barrett and F. E. Bryant, all of Rochester; A. L. Stephenson, J. M. Studebaker, Jacob Woolverton and R. C. Stephenson, of South Bend.

The Bedford Building, Savings & Loan Association

F. Parret, R. A. Fields, D. A. Hull, A. D. Milburn, Wilbur Kolb, James Bruner, J. W. Cunningham and R. F. Lockhart. Since the extension of the Evansville & Southern Indiana traction line to Patoka several new industries have sprung up there.

Another Bank for Salem

Another bank is to be established in Salem, one of the most progressive county seat towns in Southern Indiana, where two banks, the Bank of Salem and the Citizens' Bank, both flourishing financial institutions, are already in operation. The capital stock of the new institution, which is to be a state bank, is $40,000, and is being organized with forty to fifty stockholders, including some of the most prominent business men of the town and the wealthiest farmers in the county. Nearly all of the stock has been subscribed and a meeting of the stockholders will be held in the near future to elect officers and directors and complete the organization of the company. It is expected that the new institution will be opened next summer.

"The Banking and Currency Problem"

The new book dealing with the banking and currency problem in the United States by Victor Morawetz has just been issued from the press of the "North American Review Publishing Company," a department of Harper Bros.

This distinguished financier and author has taken up the question submitted by congress to the National Monetary commission. The task set by congress contemplated the founding of a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics.

Mr. Morawetz has been a lifelong student of the money question, and possesses a very unusual insight on this subject. He makes a broad claim that no such financial stringencies occur in other countries such as those which periodically distress this one. He proposes a complete plan for co-operation between the banks and treasury which is very interesting and convincing.

The book is of convenient size and sells at $1.00. The Harper Bros. also publish "The Principles of Money and Banking" and the "Principles of Banking," a smaller book, both by Charles A. Conant, the distinguished author of the Philippine money system.

Any of these works will be furnished by the CHICAGO BANKER at the advertised price.

South Dakota Convention Dates

The executive council of the South Dakota Bankers Association held a meeting at Huron and fixed the date of the annual convention for June 23d and 24th, the meeting place to be at Pierre, S. D.

The Citizens Bank of South Hill

The Citizens Bank of South Hill, Va., has been organized with a capital of $25,000. S. S. Northington is president.

Virginia Convention Dates

A meeting of the executive council of Virginia Bankers Association was held in the directors' room of the Citizens National, Norfolk, Va., recently, and after disposing of some routine business, the matter of selecting a time and place for holding the next convention was discussed at length. A number of invitations were received, by the committee, and a decision was finally reached by a unanimous vote, to hold the next convention at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va., on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, May 20, 21, and 22, 1909.

The meeting was well attended, the members present being, Joseph Stebbins, President of the Association, South Boston, N. P. Gatling, Secretary, of Lynchburg, and Messrs. T. F. Tilghman, Norfolk, Thomas B. McAdams, Richmond, T. K. Sands, Richmond, Julien H. Hill, Richmond, R. C. Vance, Waynesboro.

After the committee had transacted its business, they were most hospitably entertained with an Oyster Roast at the Hampton Roads Yacht Club, and later the committee, as the guests of the Norfolk Bankers, went to see "The Devil" at the Norfolk Theatre.

Boston National Banks

There were very few changes in the boards of directors at the annual meeting of Boston national banks. A number of vacancies occasioned by death were filled, but resignations were unusually few. The National Shawmut Bank elected four new men to its board; namely, Jacob F. Brown, Charles Hayden, Albert Stone, and William H. Wellington.

Boston bank earnings for last year show a falling off of approximately 33 per cent, due, it is claimed, to low money rates, depreciation charges and actual losses.

The total capital of the twenty-four national banks is now $24,900,000, of which $3,190,805 was earned last year. The dividend rate averaged 8.08 per cent.

Clearing Houses of Germany

The clearing houses of Germany show a total of $11,400,000,000 in checks drawn during 1908, as against $11,325,000,000 in 1907. This increase, in a year of financial and industrial depression, seems odd, but it is explained as due to the concerted efforts of banks to increase the use of checks by their customers.

Kansas Convention Dates

The 22d annual convention of the Kansas Bankers Association will be held at Wichita, Kan., Wednesday and Thursday, May 26 and 27, 1909.

New Bank for Edwardsville

W. K. Smith, of Birmingham, is organizing a new bank at Edwardsville, Ala.

Citizens National to Build

The Citizens National of Covington, Va., will erect a new bank building.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, was a speaker last week at the annual banquet of the Methodist Social union. He interjected business ideas into his talk and tried to show the church people how its revenue raising should be put on a scientific basis. He said that the social department of the church is seriously affected by the business side. The Methodist church fathers the most numerous projects in the most unbusinesslike way of any church. It is a mistake, he said, to take a collection or charge an admittance fee every time there was a gathering of a social nature. His own church had hit on the solution of the question by establishing a cabinet by which all such matters were considered in advance.

The Robbinsdale State Bank

W. A. Farr of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and I. F. Cotton, Ass't. Cashier of the Northwestern National, are credited with obtaining control of the Robbinsdale State Bank in a Minneapolis suburb. The bank has $10,000 of which $8,000 changes hands. Residents of the village are interested. The bank belonged until lately to the late John Lund's estate. Mr. Lund was president.

Savings Department of First National

The Union State Bank

The stockholders of the Union State Bank have re-elected the directors, and have left the question of increase of capital for some future action.

Public Examiner of Minnesota

The public examiner of Minnesota will be elected to office in the future, notwithstanding strenuous efforts to kill the W. A. Nolan bill. One of the representatives moved to have the bill referred to the banking committee because of its importance and the need for a hearing of the bankers on the subject. An adherent of the bill said that the plea against the bill was that it would make the position a political office. He inquired what office there was where politics were played harder than in the examiner's office. The examiner is appointed and of course wants to help out the party in power. Mr. Nolan said that by making the examiner responsible to the people his work would be just as effective and more so than were he responsible to the governor, as now.

A. Schaeffer, the public examiner, said that Minnesota takes a backward step twenty years. "No man living can master the details of the office, nor perform the work satisfactorily until he has spent two years in it," said Mr. Schaeffer. "And as the best men do not run for office, this department will become the political ball of the parties."

The Minneapolis Chapter Meeting

The Minneapolis chapter listened to an address by former Mayor W. H. Eustis on Tuesday evening about "The Growth of Knowledge." Then the clerks discussed plans for a benefit performance at the Lyric theatre, February 16th and 17th, the funds to go to establish a chapter room where the clerks may lounge and read financial papers and periodicals.

An International Clearing House

An international clearing house, through which payments may be made without the actual exchange, shipment and reshipment of gold between this and foreign countries, is urged in a joint resolution presented in the Minnesota house by George McKenzie of Gaylord. The resolution is a memorial to congress asking it to invite the powers of the world to establish such a clearing house.

Minneapolis Banks

Minneapolis banks have notified the city treasurer that unless the amount of the bonds required of them as city depositaries is reduced they will cut the rate of interest allowed the city on daily balances from 2 per cent to 1½ per cent. According to the comptroller the banks have been carrying excessive amounts of the city money. The law requires that the banks shall take deposits for no more than one-fourth the total amount of the capital and surplus. As $622,000 is coming in from the sale of bonds the city will take up the whole question with the banks.

Twin City Visitors

J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Clinton, Iowa, and vice-president C. B. Miller, spent two days visiting Twin City bank officials. J. W. Wheeler of Crookston is another banking official who is in the Twin Cities, but it is to take the Scottish Rite degrees in Masonry. Mr. Wheeler is past president of the state association and is a national banker.

Eugene M. Stevens & Co.

Eugene M. Stevens & Company have been forced out of their quarters in the Northwestern National Bank Building and are temporarily in the Oneida building while the rooms in the new Farmers & Mechanics' Savings bank building are being prepared for them. Mr. Stevens has just bought a new home in a fashionable part of the city.

By W. T. FOSTER

"We do not take possession of the Walker property, which we recently purchased at $750,000, until June 1st," said William Livingstone, president of the Dime Savings Bank of Detroit.

This statement was brought out by a query as to how the recent lease, by a brokerage concern, of a portion of the Dime purchase is to be construed. The brokerage office opened in one of the Walker estate stores January 1st, installed a wire service and a quotation board.

"We have no control over the leasing of any portion of the property yet," said Mr. Livingstone. "Until June 1st, the present holders may do as they please. When we take possession we will do as we please."

Glazier Found Guilty

Ex-State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier of Chelsea, whose failure in December, 1907, closed the Chelsea Savings Bank, of which Glazier was the head, and which had on deposit about $685,000 of state funds, was Wednesday found guilty of misappropriating state funds. Mr. Glazier's attorneys immediately gave notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court and he was released on $10,000 bail and given until March 8th to file a motion for a new trial.

An investigation of his action in depositing $685,000 of state funds in his bank, which had suspended through excessive loans to himself, resulted in the indictments against Glazier.

A Lesson in Saving

It is recorded that a noted reformer once stood on London bridge all day long offering "genuine gold sovereigns at a shilling each" sold not a single one. When the great Philadelphia North American, one of our best newspapers offered "a check for fifty cents" free to all the matter was different. The philanthropist on the London bridge was unknown, the North American was known and thousands came. The plan of the paper was that upon application a nickel-plated pocket bank and a check for 50 cents would be given to the person applying, the only condition attached to the offer being that the applicant shall open a deposit with a certain trust company, and that the sum of at least $2.50 must be deposited with the 50-cent check, the depositor at once being given credit for the combined amount represented by his cash deposit and the check.

"It seemed to us a practical way of bringing home to every individual, be he the smallest 'wage earner' says the paper 'the lesson we strive to teach constantly against waste. For, to us, it seems illogical to strive to awaken a national consciousness of the importance of economy in production and transportation and the imperative need for the saving of our natural resources when all the while we held apparently an attitude of ignorance or indifference toward our neighbors, whose lives and activities we figuratively can view from our office windows and who are the friends and supporters of this newspaper."

On the first day the entire supply of 25,000 banks and checks was taken. The next day 10,000 more. People stood in line for two blocks. Some came out of curiosity and a few in hopes that they could realize upon the check in some way. Careful inquiry and straight questioning put to a large percentage of those who received banks elicited incontestable proof that at least 90 per cent not only sincerely desired to open an account, but really believed that they would be able to do so. In that line were mothers carrying babes eager in their devotion to start a tiny fund that might grow with the other infancy. Millionaires were so impressed with a plan to teach the pride of independence and the value of money saved that, like many men of moderate wealth, they came for banks for their children, their grandchildren and the children of their brothers and sisters. For hours in line stood children of foreign birth whose determination to lay a foundation of savings that would bring a fairer, fuller life than any dreamed of by their fathers no one who watched them could doubt.

It was a grand scheme grandly carried out, not by a speculative safe company nor by the trust company which was the beneficiary. It is in line with the educational work which THE CHICAGO BANKER for years has been urging upon the American Bankers Association. It is a work which that organization could foster and

The Stock Market not a Puzzle

The failure or liquidation of stock brokerage houses does not create even a ripple nowadays. The plunging broker with his easily earned "profits" is not trying to break into society and going broke in the act. The "expense account" and bad guessing on the market have put such foolish notions out of his head. The cash traders have swamped the public ardor and the innocent investor is "out for keeps" or, until Governor Hughes' committee has reformed the stock exchange. In the mean time expenses in wire houses and in "member" concerns run on with unabated use of red ink.

Brokers complain that, dull as trade may be throughout the country, it is not half so dull as speculation in stocks. Perhaps 75 per cent of the current trading represents professional operations, leaving only 25 per cent on which full commission of  $\frac{1}{8}$  of 1 per cent is obtainable. The public are neither buying nor selling; they seem content to hold what stocks they have, and if they have money to invest they lean to bonds. Until something of real importance happens to dislodge the market from its present rut no active business can be hoped for. Stagnation in January has been unusual and therefore peculiarly discouraging. February is ordinarily a quiet month speculatively, and this year there is little reason to look for great things. Perhaps after March 4th, and more particularly after tariff reform takes concrete shape, the prevailing lethargy may be thrown off. The country at large does not suffer because stocks are not changing hands at the rate of one million shares daily. Only the change in dividend power can hurt, when it fails. New corporations of the million dollar variety are not of daily occurrence even in Maine, Maryland, or New Jersey. Truly the market manipulation business has been so grossly overdone as to kill in part the real support of the exchange.

Labor Blight upon Chicago

For years the building contractors of Chicago and in many cases the owners have been paying tribute to an organized gang of "business agents" and federation officials, all pretending to be working in the interest of union labor. It is a plain case of buncoing the laboring man and of laying tribute upon the building contractors and property owners. At the time of the great Iroquois fire it was frequently stated that violations of the building ordinances cost only $25 each. This is another phase of the abuse. The inspectors practically are named by the unions and they then work in "harmony" with the business agents. The Chicago Tribune, friendly to union labor, and a completely unionized office has much to say about the labor blight upon Chicago, as brought into national prominence by the tie-up upon the new $20,000,000 railway depot for the Chicago and Northwestern Ry. Co. There is no dispute on wages, no question of employing nonunion labor, but a faked-up contest between unions employed upon the work. The Tribune says "over at the new Northwestern station the work is stopped. Six hundred workmen are idle. They do not know why. No one can tell them why, perhaps, even if they were wise enough to ask and demand a straight answer. No one can tell them why but 'Skinny' Madden, czar of the building trades, master of a so-called union that prides itself on its secret organization and its secret management, president-emperor of an organization of free men who have chosen him to be their ruler for life!"

The tie-up is a disgrace. The Corn Products Co. has kept Madden at bay by means of a huge stockade and an armed guard. Madden was almost successful in having the newspapers and the courts condemn the Corn Products management for peonage and other imaginary crimes. If union labor does not cease its present course under Madden there will be more stockades—not to keep laborers in but to keep grafting agitators out.

Not a Banking Necessity

At the time that President Roosevelt gave his consent (no prosecution to follow) that the U. S. steel trust should take over or absorb the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, it was given out that it was "to stop the panic and prevent the failure of certain New York banks. The principal bank in the public mind at the time was the Trust Company of America, of which Oakleigh Thorne is president. These were the premises upon which the president excused his act and no doubt arguments of the kind were used to influence his decision. But now comes Mr. Thorne, testifying before the Senate inquiry committee and denies the whole story as a fabric without a single thread of truth in it.

Mr. Thorne testified that the Trust Company of America had no interest in the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company as owner, but that on November 1, 1907, it had loaned $482,700 to six individuals, holding the stock at 60 as collateral. All these loans, said

Mr. Thorne, were paid off in November, with the exception of two of $52,000 each. Mr. Thorne said he considered the security for the loans absolutely good, and his company had no interest whatever in the absorption of the Tennessee company by the steel corporation, and did not know of the negotiation until after it was commenced.

Senator Culberson asked Mr. Thorne whether he had knowledge of a syndicate which owned the controlling interest in the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company in the fall of 1907. He replied that he had, and that he was a member of that syndicate, but that he had bought his stock and withdrawn it from the syndicate, and therefore was not familiar with the syndicate's operations.

This lets out Mr. Thorne and the "banks that would fail," etc., but there are Mr. Roosevelt and the "interests" still in it. If he was imposed upon by untruthful statements, should he not now vindicate himself by having the whole transaction, admittedly illegal, set aside in the courts? What other course is open to him? Mr. Thorne has shown the way.

Death of Mrs. R. T. Forbes

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Forbes were inexpressibly shocked on Tuesday morning to learn of the sudden death of the latter, at her home in this city. Mr. Forbes, president of the Drovers Deposit National, was absent from the city on a business trip, and was instantly summoned by telegraph. Mrs. Forbes has been partially paralyzed for ten years, and only when necessary did Mr. Forbes go beyond call. His devotion and care for his afflicted life partner always has been the cause of admiring comment by all who were privileged to know them in their ideal home life.

Northern National

Duluth, Minn., February 1.—The Northern National, formerly the Duluth Savings Bank, began its career as a national bank this morning.

The Duluth Savings Bank was organized six years ago last November. The capital of the bank was $100,000. Under the conservative management of its directors, who are also the directors of the Northern National Bank, the bank has shown steady growth since its organization. It was this increase of business and the widening of the field of banking business in Duluth and the surrounding territory, that led the directors of the bank to organize the bank as a national institution.

The Northern National has a paid in capital of $250,000 and a surplus of $250,000. This is an increase of $150,000 over the capital of the Duluth Savings and an increase of $10,000 in the surplus.

The new bank will be under the same officers and directors as controlled the Duluth Savings Bank, with the addition of two new directors, Marshall W. Alworth and David O. Anderson.

The bank will have a savings deposit department, 3 per cent being paid upon savings deposits. The new bank will also enter the field for commercial business.

The same conservative policy that established the growth and excellent business reputation of the Duluth Savings Bank, will be followed with the affairs of the new bank.

At the organization of the Duluth Savings Bank in November, 1902, John R. Mitchell was president of the bank; John G. Williams, vice-president, and J. W. Lyder, Jr., cashier. The following men constituted the board of trustees: John R. Mitchell, John G. Williams, James H. Pearce, Francis W. Sullivan,*J. W. Lyder, Jr., Louis S. Loeb and Dr. J. J. Eklund.

John R. Mitchell is at the present time president of the Capital National Bank of St. Paul, one of the largest banking institutions of that city. J. L. Washburn of Duluth succeeded Mr. Mitchell as head of the Duluth Savings Bank and is the president of the new institution.

The new Northern National begins its career with every prospect of a successful future. Mr. Lyder is one of the best known of the Northwest bankers and his wide acquaintance will help greatly to the new exchange and collection business for which the Northern National is fully equipped.

Illinois Bankers Association

Secretary Rinaman has sent out a letter to members of the Illinois association relating to the new developments in matters of importance to them. The new office is going through the same experiences as affected other states. Some members always will take the cheapest thing offered in insurance and time lock cleaning and only use the low joint rates to still further badger competitors for lower prices. Mr. Rinaman's circular says in part that "While it is perhaps early to predict success for this office, I believe it can be safely said that it is going to be successful. Its success depends upon whether or not the members place their fidelity bond and burglary insurance through this office, and I believe you will because it is in every way to your interest to do so. While only a fraction of the burglary insurance maturing since the office was established has been written through me, the premiums for January will aggregate $1,000 or more, yielding a revenue of more than $200 for association expenses.

"If our members would, as a unit, trust me to write their business for them, we would have an income of $7,500 the first year; almost what the Missouri association required years to accomplish. With this income assured, there is no obstacle in the way of the protective committee adopting methods such as rewards, publicity, etc., as will surely stamp out and eradicate from our state, safe blowers, forgers, swindlers and the like. When this class of individuals, who keep well posted, know we mean business and have the funds to do it with, they will pass Illinois up as dangerous ground, give their attention to other states and as a result, further reduction in the rates for burglary insurance can be expected.

"Some of our members have shown the true association spirit by sending in their maturing contract with a message akin to 'Here it is, do for us as you think best for our interest' and I assure you their confidence has not been abused. Should all our members get the same habit, my task would be easy and the future certain."

Emergency Currency Issued

The bureau of engraving and printing has completed the printing of 500 million dollars of the so-called emergency national bank currency, authorized by the act of May 30, 1908, and 80 million dollars of the new notes are now being issued to banks in the regular course of redemption. These notes will take the place of the old national bank notes which will be retired as fast as they reach the Treasury.

The law directing the issue of the notes contemplated the formation of national banks throughout the country into currency associations which were to be held responsible for the notes issued by the individual banks forming the association.

Soon after the act of May 30, 1908, was passed there was a general movement among the banks of the country to form currency associations, but the question was raised whether an individual bank could retire from the association at its pleasure provided all of the obligations of the associated banks had been met fully. The Secretary of the Treasury decided against this proposition, whereupon banks generally suspended further efforts to form associations until Congress had specifically authorized the retirement of banks under the conditions named.

Value of a Bank Account

The Royal Trust Company is doing some clever advertising in the dailies of Chicago for savings accounts. Under the top line in bold type "Value of a Bank Account," appears the following in neat display.

"Pearson's Magazine for February says that six young men applied for a position in New York City. The merchant asked:

'How many of you young men have savings bank accounts?'

Only one replied that he had.

'I'll take you,' said the merchant. He wanted no better recommendation."

California Banking News

By WILLIAM J. HOLLISTER

The Union National of Oakland moved last month from its location of many years on the corner Twelfth and Broadway, to 1114 Broadway, where its president, George Roeth, declares it will make its permanent home.

American National Review Circular

A review of the conditions in San Francisco, as published in the monthly financial letter of the American National, indicated that the city had shown a substantial growth in 1908. The bank clearings of San Francisco in 1908 were $1,757,151,000; in Los Angeles, $505,558,000; Seattle, $429,499,000; Portland, $310,656,000; Tacoma, $218,113,000; Spokane, $307,791,000. The combined clearings of the five outside Coast cities are only slightly more than those of San Francisco. San Francisco's building permits for 1908 amounted to $35,000,000, against $10,000,000 for Portland, $13,000,000 for Seattle and $10,000,000 for Los Angeles. The receipts of the San Francisco postoffice for 1908 total $2,011,399, an increase of 12.5 per cent over those of the previous year. Imports, according to published custom house figures, were valued at $46,000,000, as against $54,000,000 in 1907, though exports were $1,000,000 larger—$32,000,000 against $31,000,000. There has been a gradual shrinkage of savings deposits and a large increase in commercial deposits. In December, 1907, the nine national banks of San Francisco and two others which were later nationalized had deposits, exclusive of government deposits, amounting to $56,000,000, and on November 27, 1908, almost exactly a year later, these 11 banks held $60,000,000, an increase of $13,000,000.

San Francisco Chamber of Commerce

There was a very large attendance at the annual meeting of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce to listen to the report of President Chas. C. Moore. The proposal of the building committee to erect a new building and the resolution calling for a change in the by-laws to enable the Chamber to incur a bonded indebtedness not to exceed $500,000, to be used in the construction of the new building, were approved and passed respectively with only one dissenting vote. The secretary's annual report showed that the membership of the Chamber had increased more than 30 per cent and that the efficiency of his department had increased in a like manner. The total membership is 756. The proposed building of the chamber is now assured. While no definite plans were announced it is probable that the chamber will seek a location in Market Street, below Parny. The new structure undoubtedly will be a two-story affair, the quarters of the chamber occupying the upper floor and the street floor to be rented. At the conclusion of the reading of the report a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Moore and a similar vote wishing success to James McNab, the new president.

California State Clearing House Association

The California State Clearing House Association is now operative, and a sufficient number of the banks of California are affiliated. It is not likely that the several districts of the state will employ examiners prior to the meeting of the central board next April, which will follow meetings to be held by the branches of the respective districts. That will be after adjournment of the state legislature. The bill introduced in both houses of the legislature to regulate the banking business, with possibly some modifications, will have considerable bearing upon the actions of the bankers. The bill in its present form provides for the creation of a department of banking, and the superintendent of banking is authorized to appoint a chief deputy, an attorney, and a sufficient number of examiners and clerks. In case competent examiners shall be employed to thoroughly examine banks to the satisfaction of the people the State Clearing House Association may be relieved of the necessity of engaging separate examiners. The bankers of California are determined to bring about such examinations as will protect bankers and depositors. Frederick H. Colburn, assistant secretary of the California Bankers Association, has been appointed secretary and treasurer of the California State Clearing House Association, to succeed C. E. Woodside of Los Angeles, who resigned his position.

The Bank of Central California

At the annual meeting of the Bank of Central California of Fresno, last week, the following named were chosen directors: Louis Einstein, Robert Kennedy, Lee Gundelfinger, Albert Meyer and Max Frankeneau; and as officers: Louis Einstein, president; Lee Gundelfinger, treasurer and cashier; C. E. Hamilton, secretary and first assistant cashier; Berton Einstein, second assistant cashier. Besides declaring a semiannual dividend of $2.50 per share, payable immediately, $5,000 was set aside for a like dividend payable July 1st next, and $30 per share, or $60,000, transferred from its accumulated profits to make the capital stock of the bank, which is $200,000 fully paid up with a surplus and undivided profits of $17,500.

First National of Huntington Beach

Directors of the First National of Huntington Beach elected at the meeting of the board are: A. L. Reed, president, W. T. Newland, vice-president; S. L. Blodget, cashier; S. Townsend, H. S. Hazeltine, J. F. Heartwell, T. B. Talbert, D. M. Cate, C. H. Howard, R. Courreges and D. Brush. Ralph E. Graves was elected assistant cashier.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

The New Business Department

The New Business Department as a specific department in a bank is of comparatively recent development. We can all remember back to the time (and it is not very far back either) when it was little short of heresy for a bank to publicly solicit business. There are banks today which hold to the old order and are content with the minute siftings of trade which trickle down to them through the sieve of competition. I have in mind a western bank of some size, established before the Civil War, which has never made a practice of inviting business, has never published an advertisement knowingly, and hasn't a typewriter or an adding machine in its office—unless E. St. Elmo Lewis has been around there in the last few weeks.

But banks of this type are fast disappearing either through dry rot, voluntary liquidation or involuntary consolidation. It is no longer considered necessary for a bank to maintain that false dignity which prevents the exercise of the modern cardinal virtues of business:—enthusiasm, energy, ambition, and achievement.

Speaking in a general sense, the New Business Department includes the entire office, for—to quote from the Good Book—"with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," and "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." As the bank serves the public, so will the public serve the bank. And by the "bank" is meant every individual employee, from the president to the humblest bell boy. Each one has his particular function to perform, his own share in serving and satisfying present customers; and in so far as the customers are satisfied, just so far, you may be sure, will they reciprocate by producing new business, for verily is a satisfied customer the best advertisement.

The New Business Department, speaking specifically, is devoted to the primary purpose of securing accounts. To accomplish this end, two principal means are employed: the personal conference, and its substitute, advertising.

Taking the name of your organization as a cue, I assume that you are more interested in the substitute than in the original, and I will therefore address myself more particularly to that function of the department.

Advertising involves the use of an almost infinite variety of media with which you are probably more familiar than I. First and foremost of these is of course the press.

If you are seeking the accounts of out of town banks, the logical papers to use are the financial weeklies or monthlies that circulate in your territory. Unless you are willing to take the publisher's word for it, it is difficult to determine just which papers to use and which to leave alone. The sublime diffidence with which the average solicitor will "admit" an enormous circulation is most beautiful to behold. A little more than a year ago, after securing "claimed" figures from all the banking periodicals of any importance I addressed a series of four queries in regard to their circulation and popularity to all of our out-of-town correspondents. The replies, tabulated, proved unusually interesting, and determined in large measure the quality as well as quantity of circulation. Using this information as a guide I have since been able to distribute our advertising contracts more intelligently and with a cleaner conscience.

Address delivered at annual meeting of Bankers Ad. Association of Pittsburgh by F. W. Ellsworth, Manager Department of New Business, The First National of Chicago :: :: :: ::

F. W. ELLSWORTH
Chicago

The "write-up journals" which thrust their horned brows up over the window sill every now and then and ask for a crust, are an evil with which many banks are apparently unfamiliar, to judge by the number that patronize them. These pitiful literary coyotes, whose circulation and frequency of issue depend entirely on the number and liberality of the suckers they can secure are a positive detriment to the legitimate periodicals, and deserve annihilation.

A representative of one of these sheets once invited our people to place an ad in their columns. He claimed a circulation of 5,000 and wanted $80.00 per page for one insertion. We declined. One month later a second representative called, evidently unaware that we had been approached. He claimed 22,000, and asked but $50.00 per page. We declined and made it very plain to him why we declined. Instances like this while perhaps not always as glaring are altogether too frequent.

The local dailies are used to distinct advantage in seeking city business, especially for the savings department. Our two institutions do away with the necessity for discriminating by using all of the Chicago dailies for they all happen to be good. We can always be pretty sure that the bulk of their circulation is local, and in most cases are reasonably sure of their circulation statements. It has been said you know that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a circulation manager to stick to net figures, but I am glad to be able to testify that this modern adaptation does not apply in all cases.

In placing advertising with the dailies there are of course three essential elements to be taken into consideration. These are: position, display and composition. An ad must have good position to insure an audience; it must be well dressed to create an impression; and it must contain convincing talk to inspire action. There you have them: attention, impression, action. Any ad which arouses these three emotions is a successful ad.

Another medium which the savings bank cannot afford to ignore is the foreign language paper, of which we have in Chicago considerably over a hundred. Many of these are obscure little sheets with very limited circulation, no influence and barely enough income to keep the breath in their bodies. I visited the office of one of these struggling little papers recently to satisfy myself that the impossible impression gained from the loud mouthed solicitor was correct. I found a long room which had formerly been used as a bowling alley, absolutely devoid of furniture except at the far end. Here were two stands of type, an imposing stone bearing on it forms of two pages, and a little rusty stove. Two cadaverous looking men were fussing around the stone making corrections. When I recalled the tall, broad-shouldered, loud voiced solicitor with his big claims and then beheld the puny office I was reminded of Lincoln's story of the boat down on the Sangamon River, which had a two horse power engine, with a five horse power whistle. You remember that every time the whistle blew the boat stopped. In this case the only way to keep the boat going was for the whistle to keep blowing.

But among the foreign language periodicals there are many substantial ones whose columns are as productive as those of the English press, and it is not only wise but quite necessary to use them if it is intended to take advantage of every opportunity for securing new business.

In writing ads for these papers care should be exercised to adapt them to the particular classes which are to read them.

The use of booklets, in which Pittsburgh rather sets the pace, is, as you well know a favorite and effective means for attracting accounts. The preparation of booklets gives the advertising man a chance to spread himself, and to indulge his taste for beautiful creations. Depend upon it too, that when a well worded and well printed booklet gets into the hands of the average person it is going to be read. Then if the impression created is followed up at intervals by brief forceful letters, something is going to give. The proper distribution of booklets is a problem worthy of study. The First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, for instance, issues several hundred thousand at a time—enough to cover the city—and has one placed in each home by a distributing agency. To check up the thoroughness of the distribution, each of the clerks is asked to report for his neighborhood, and as there are nearly six hundred clerks, living in every part of the city, these reports tell the story in a reliable manner. Purely as an experiment, the last piece of literature distributed by this institution contained very little about the bank, bearing instead a humorous philosophical poem entitled "Money in the Bank" by S. E. Kiser. The results obtained from this innovation were decidedly satisfactory, and it is altogether probable that the experiment will be repeated. It is a good plan to issue booklets or folders two or three times a year, making sure each time that the ground is carefully and fully covered. These need not necessarily be very elaborate or pretentious and the entire cost of printing and distributing will not exceed four or five dollars per thousand.

Form letters appropriately worded for their respective uses and mailed to all new incorporations, newly established firms and business houses, new banks, sellers of real estate, etc., are productive of results.

A liberal supply of monthly blotters containing the calendar for the current month and a pithy little talk will always be found useful. Large business houses where there are many office employees who should carry savings accounts can very easily be trained to use just such blotters month by month.

Probably the most interesting function of the New Business Department is the reception and entertainment of advertising solicitors. And when I say "interesting" I use the word advisedly, for as a class and as individuals they are decidedly interesting. In the main they are well educated, courteous gentlemen, are good enough salesman to tell their story briefly and know how and when to say "Good day" without being forced to it. But! Then again there are those who have none of these estimable qualities. Here's one for example who has a unique little novelty which is bound to revolutionize bank advertising. "May I show it to you?" Whereupon without waiting for an answer he digs down into a hidden cavern inside his coat somewhere and hauls out a great book which he calls the "Young Bride's Friend"—a recipe book full of ads and recipes which is to be sent to every bride in the city. "No, we will not care to use it—have had it up for consideration before and decided that we didn't want it." "But," protests the enthusiastic salesman, "this is much improved," etc., etc., etc. "Will you please just close the door when you go out?" is finally the only way to get rid of him.

Another welcome character is the chap clothed in the heavily laden free lunch breath who wants an ad for the program of the Owl Pleasure Club's Annual Soiree. He generally lasts about one minute. Still another is the fake charity solicitor. Very often his appearance is deceptive. So he is asked to call again tomorrow. If he is legitimate he comes again, if not, he stays away, for he knows that his scheme will be investigated over night.

After all though, the solicitor no matter what his station, is engaged in the same occupation as are we—he is after new business, and he should be given courteous consideration. But he should be brief, for he is dealing with busy men.

The New Business Department initiates, begins, starts things. It hunts up prospective customers, makes every honorable and honest endeavor by the various means which I have enumerated to change the prospective into an actual customer. After this is accomplished the office as a whole must step in and complete the transaction by intelligently supplementing the initiary work of the New Business Department. An institution which expects to grow must be able to retain and make permanent its clientele by the personality of its management, and by a generous and capable service rendered in a correct manner by intelligent employees. The bank which can present to the business community a battery of such facilities need have no fears as to the success of its New Business Department.

The Seattle Spirit

The Seattle Spirit, the new monthly publication of the Seattle Chapter, A. I. B., made its first appearance last month. This number contains twenty-four pages of reading matter. George R. Martin, collection teller at the Seattle National, is the editor of the paper; B. N. Schnoor, exchange teller at the Washington Trust Company, is business manager; R. S. Walker, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, is associate editor; W. H. John, of the First National, is advertising manager, and H. Helwig, of Dexter Horton & Company, is circulation manager.

Editor Martin says: "The Seattle Spirit with this number begins its journey along the broad highway of monthly periodicals. While primarily a paper published in the interests of Seattle Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, its appeal will reach beyond the Chapter to bank men everywhere. The banking fraternity of the nation is looking toward Seattle, marveling over her wonderful growth and forecasting her future. It suggests the need of 'The Seattle Spirit' to tell the story of Seattle and make plain some vital truths concerning her real greatness as a modern commercial city.

"The first of these articles, on Seattle, appears in this number, by W. F. Paull, trust officer of the Union Savings Bank and Trust Company and first president of Seattle Chapter. We are glad to announce that this series will be continued throughout the year from month to month.

"R. S. Walker, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, will have charge of the 'Echoes from the Corners,' a department which we hope will grow with the paper in interest to every bank man of Seattle.

"A special feature each month will be the 'Sound News,' consisting of little newsy items and editorials, pertaining to events and happenings in and around Seattle, affecting Seattle's financial and commercial life. Mr. Walker, this month, opens up a timely discussion with his advocacy of the widening of the Duwamish river, irrespective of building the proposed canal between Lake Washington and Puget Sound.

"The Athletic Department will be edited by Arthur Goodfellow of the Peoples Savings Bank and E. W. Brownell of the National Bank of Commerce. Mr. Goodfellow asks in this number why not take the management of the inter-banking baseball from the respective committees appointed by the clearing house banks and put it under control of the Chapter. This suggestion, we believe, will meet with general approval. An athletic committee should be appointed at once to take full charge of all inter-banking athletics, whether baseball, bowling or track.

The Seattle Spirit wishes all its readers a happy and prosperous New Year. If it can merit your appreciation and good will and retain your hearty co-operation, its purpose, in part at least, will be fulfilled."

Philadelphia Chapter Meeting

J. Hector McNeal delivered an address last Friday night on the "Law of Promissory Notes" before the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, at its meeting in the Roger Williams Building. ### New Books from Page & Co., Boston

L. C. Page & Company are publishers de luxe to that vast army of American readers who would be informed upon the polite essentials of European art, literature, architecture, castles and ruins. Two of the latest additions to their half-hundred such volumes are "Cathedrals and Churches of Northern Italy" and "The Art of the Netherland Galleries." The latter in blue buckram cover done in gold medallion is a history of the Dutch school of painting, illuminated and demonstrated by critical descriptions of the great paintings in many galleries and is by David C. Preyer.

Other volumes in this series are "Art of the Vatican"—of the Pitti Palace;—of the Louvre;—of the Venice Academy;—of the National Gallery;—of the Dresden Gallery;—and of the Prado. Taken together the set has no rival in beauty, in illustration, in binding, and is in a class by itself as a complete collection of all that is desirable. This volume has 47 full page reproductions from Rembrandt and Hals to de Bock Thérèse Schwartz. All the great painters in portraiture, genre, landscape, animal and still life, and all the famous galleries are treated in full. The reviews are critical and thus instructive. $2.00 net.

"The Cathedrals and Churches of Northern Italy" is bound in yellow canvas, bordered in emblems of the church, with an embossed relief in gold leaf of Padua. T. Francis Bumpus is the author and the volume is uniform with the "Cathedrals of Northern France;—of Southern France;—of England;—of the Rhine; and of Northern Spain. The cathedral series has thus reached six volumes and is the most exhaustive in text and the most richly illustrated of any in existence. No cathedral or church of importance in Northern Italy is left out, and each is shown in a fine illustration, page size. Along with the descriptive matter is included their history, architecture, together with much of interest concerning the bishops, rulers, and other personages identified with them. The uniform price for the set is $2.50 per volume which runs to 500 pages.

"Tales from Bohemia" is another valuable addition to literature from the L. C. Page press, at Boston. The tales are a collection of the short stories and sketches by the late Robert Neilson Stephens, author of "An Enemy to the King," dramatized and played by E. H. Sothern; "Philip Winwood" and many others. Mr. Stephens was on the Philadelphia Press at the time when Richard Harding Davis, R. E. A. Dorr and others who later became famous were feeding "copy" to the blue pencil at merely living wage. Stephens was dramatic critic, hence Tales of Bohemia, the best of their kind. $1.50 net.

"Race or Mongrel" by Alfred P. Schultz also comes from the Page Company, and is a brief history of the rise and fall of the ancient races of the Earth; a theory that the fall of nations is due to intermarriage with alien stocks; a demonstration that a nation's strength is due to racial purity; a prophecy that America will sink to early decay unless immigration is rigorously restricted. To prove these theories to be true, or at least reasonable, is the formidable task which Mr. Schultz has set himself. His illustrations are taken from the histories of fallen nations, from Chaldeans and Phoenicians down to present day. The volume has a valuable bibliography and index and will appeal to all students of racial phenomena. $2.50 net.

Spokane Chapter Ball

Jenkins of the Old National; an instrumental solo, by Miss Odegaard; vocal solo, by Miss Posey; a discourse on "Municipal Affairs and City Improvements," by H. A. Rhodes, assistant corporation counsel, and a lecture on "The Elements of Success," by Rev. Dr. C. Ross Baker.

Rules on County Depositary Law

The attorney-general's department of Texas held that the cashier of a state bank can not at the same time hold the position of county judge when such bank is the county depositary, notwithstanding the fact that such cashier owns no stock in the bank; that it is contrary to public policy.

The inquiry was from the county attorney of Sutton county, who advises that the judge of that county holds the dual position.

The bill authorizes all banks, national, state and private, to participate in the guaranty. The banks, to start with, must give approved bonds to the amount of one million dollars with the state treasurer as an earnest that they will pay assessments levied against them to meet losses sustained by failing banks. The assessments are limited in number each year. Depositors of failed banks are given interest bearing certificates. The assets of the failed bank are first applied on the certificates and if the bank finally doesn't pay out the guaranty fund is used to make up the difference and cancel the certificates.

New York Banking and News Letter

By J. R. MORGAN

Clark Williams, state superintendent of banks, and Attorney-General O'Malley, were the principal speakers at the annual dinner of Group Five of the New York State Bankers Association Saturday night at the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany. Supt. Williams, referring to the evidence of growing conservatism in the state institutions, said that "We seem slowly to be returning to banking for quality, not quantity." The payment of excessive interest rates, he declared, was one of the great offenses of economic principles and sound banking. He attributed this evil largely to improper competition between different classes of financial institutions and expressed gratification at the movements in different parts of the state for the reduction of these excessive rates.

Mr. Williams paid a tribute to the legislation recently enacted affecting banking institutions, characterizing it as a body of just and proper laws reflecting logical steps of real progress rather than selfish interests or ill-judged experiment.

"These laws," he said, "are playing their part in the enforcement of conservatism, but you cannot legislate honesty into any man. Strict observance of existing law, coupled with reasonable business judgment under intelligent and hopeful supervision, will go far to prevent failure, but without the element of personal integrity and trustworthiness such restrictions and precautions are of no avail. I believe that the American banker embodies these virtues to the highest degree."

Mr. Williams made an earnest plea for closer association of the banking power in the different parts of the state for mutual co-operation and protection and for the public good.

Attorney-General O'Malley pledged the support of his department in aiding the banking institutions of the state in safeguarding the interests of depositors, declaring that nothing is of greater importance to the citizens of the state.

"The banking laws of our state," said he, "while perhaps not perfect, have been improved steadily and sanely until they rank with the best in the world. Abuses have crept into the banking laws in our state as in every department of human endeavor; but whenever these abuses have occurred measures have been promptly resorted to looking to the correction of such abuses until the New York banking laws are looked upon by the sister states of the union as the best."

Urges Strict Compliance with Rules

The following notice issued by the Chicago Board of Trade to its members has been circulated on the New York Produce Exchange as a matter of interest:

"By a vote of the board of directors of the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago, the attention of the members of the board is hereby respectfully called to the importance of strictly complying with the provisions of section II of rule IV of the rules of the said Board of Trade of the city of Chicago.

"The following is a copy of said section II of rule IV:

"Section II. No member of this association is allowed under any circumstances to be both principal and agent in any transaction in any of the commodities dealt in under the rules of this board. Furthermore, no member of this association in any transaction in any of the commodities dealt in under the rules of this board shall allow himself directly or indirectly, either by his own act or by the act of an employe or of a broker or other member of the association, to be placed in the position of agent for both seller and buyer."

"This section shall not apply in case of exchange of cash property."

Of Interest to Bankers

The committee on corporation law of the New York State Bar Association, at the annual convention in Buffalo last week, reported that it has prepared and submitted to the New York legislature amendments to the New York law providing for the formation of companies having stock shares representing proportionate interest and having no assigned values in money.

"The abolition of the money denomination of shares," the report says, "would, we believe, deprive those who promote corporations of the advantages, real or seeming, of that exaggerated capitalization which undoubtedly is possible under existing laws, and at the same time it would compel investors to fix their attention upon actual value."

New York Stock Exchange Members

Charles H. Whitney, Sidney Rheinstein and Thomas M. McKee were elected members of the New York Stock Exchange this week.

$116,796,000 Increase in Reserves under New Law

Clark Williams, state superintendent of banks, on Saturday issued a statement showing the increased strength of the general banking institutions of the state under new reserve laws, in effect to-day. The statement shows $116,796,000 increase in reserves under the new law.

The reserve of money carried in our banking institutions is of the utmost importance to commercial and financial interests, underlying as it does our system of credit and affording a safeguard to general depositors. It should not be inadequate to serve its purposes, nor so great as to curtail business activity. It is of equal importance that it should be based upon a thorough understanding of the character of the business it is required to protect.

Bankers to Consider Debt Limit

Mayor McClellan has appointed a committee of bankers to consider the changing of the constitutional provision as to the city's debt limit. The committee consists of James T. Woodward, president of the First National, chairman; J. P. Morgan, Jr., of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank; Francis L. Hine, president of the First National; George Blumenthal, of Lazard Freres; Edwin S. Marston, president of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., and John E. Borne, chairman of the board of directors of the Trust Co. of America. The committee is requested to report to the mayor whether it would be better to have the legislature adopt the suggested amendment increasing the city's debt limit from 10 to 14 per cent of the total assessed valuation of real estate, or the pending amendment now before the legislature excluding from debt limit rapid transit and dock bonds which earn their interest and amortization charge over their operating and repair expenses, or some other amendment be adopted having in view the maintenance of the city's credits.

Trust Companies and the Clearing House

The president of a leading trust company of New York City says that so far there has been no agitation of the question of a reapproachment between the trust companies and the New York Clearing House Association or for the re-entrance of the trust companies into the clearing house. Neither has anything been done even tentatively in regard to the establishment of an independent organization by the trust companies. When the trust companies were contending that a reserve of 7 or 8 per cent was sufficient for those institutions, and the clearing house banks were inflexible about a 25 per cent reserve, a happy medium figure was not easy to arrange. Now, however, with the trust companies obliged by law to carry a 15 per cent reserve, the situation is very different and conservative persons, both in the New York Clearing House and among the trust companies, realize that closer relations would benefit all concerned. It will not be surprising if the question of representation of the trust companies in the New York Clearing House soon takes on active interest.

The Lincoln Trust Company

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Lincoln Trust Co., New York City, will be held February 11th to vote on increasing the capital stock from $750,000 to $1,000,000.

Morse, the convicted banker, are preparing a petition to the judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, asking them to admit Mr. Morse to bail, pending his appeal from Judge Hough's sentence of 15 years in the federal prison at Atlanta for violations of the national banking laws. Scores of prominent merchants and bankers, it is said, have signed the petition.

E. W. Bloomingdale Named

Mr. Bloomingdale was formerly a member of the dry goods firm of that name. He is now a director in the Phenix National and the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

The deposits amount to over $2,118,926. The flawless record which this bank has preserved during its existence of almost forty years; its well known care in making investments; the reputation of its officials and directors for probity of character and success in business, give the public the strongest corroboration of its published statements of condition, and carry the widespread conviction that it is sound to the core.

Its courteous attention to small depositors as well as large has won for it a large clientele in its district, and its list of patrons is constantly increasing.

The officers are: A. M. Baldwin, president; M. P. LeGrand, vice-president; A. S. Woolfolk, cashier; H. T. Bartlett, assistant cashier, and C. E. Norton, assistant cashier. The directors are: J. S. #### Depositories are Named

Jefferson City, Mo., February 1.—The Missouri State Board of Fund Commissioners, of which Governor Hadley, Treasurer Cowgill and Attorney-General Majors are members, today chose depositories for the custody of the state's funds for a period of four years from date. Five depositories were chosen this time, being an increase of one. The four banks which held the funds during the last four years were again chosen. The awards:

Ten-twentieths of the funds to the Mississippi Valley Trust Company at 3.34 per cent and five-twentieths at 3.26 per cent; the German American Bank of St. Louis, one-twentieth at 3.30 per cent and one-twentieth at 3.25 per cent; the National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, one-twentieth at 3.20 per cent; Exchange Bank of Jefferson City, one-twentieth at 3.26 per cent; the First National of Jefferson City, one-twentieth at 3.26 per cent.

This is the highest rate of interest ever paid on the state deposits, and is an increase of 10 per cent over the rate paid by the present depositories. The average interest paid for the past four years is 2.99½ per cent, and the average under the awards made to-day is 3.29½ per cent.

The Mutual Life of New York

The remarkably good showing of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, during 1908, makes the outlook for the coming year excellent. The new business this year is materially in excess of that during the corresponding period of 1908. The Mutual Life is the only company which has ever increased its dividend scale four years in succession. The sum apportioned for dividends, including the "deferred dividends" to be paid in 1909, is $11,092,282.38, as compared with $8,811,002.02 apportioned for 1908 and $4,321,493.34 for 1907. During the sixty-six years the company has been in business the amount paid to policy holders and their beneficiaries, plus the amount it holds in trust for them, exceeds by nearly $125,000,000 the amount received from them.

The payments to policy holders during 1908—over a million dollars a week—exceeded by $9,000,000 the figures of 1907.

No starting crank in front.

Bearings flooded with oil by the Winton circulating system at no more expense for lubricant than on cars which save oil and waste bearings.

The Winton Six does everything that you looked for in fours—and didn't find.

So quiet that you doubt it's running.

Goes through traffic and up the hills on high, seldom requiring gear changing.

Silent as to exhaust.

Motor vibration eliminated.

Saves gasoline, tires and upkeep. Sworn statements of ten prominent business men in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois prove how ten Winton Sixes ran more than twice the distance around the world (65,687.4 miles) on an average upkeep expense of $1 for each 4343 miles. That ought to interest every man who has ever paid a repair bill.

Beautiful body designs. We have touring car, limousine, landaulet, roadster and other bodies. The Carriage Monthly says we "are at the top" in body making.

THIS department of THE CHICAGO BANKER will make announcements from time to time concerning the progress of the Council Club. From the very first mention of the fact that the ex-members of the council have very little to do on the evening of the regular council banquet, the proposal that the exes, or down-and-outs, should get together, was favorably received. The ex-members of the council now are the prominent bankers of the country. They all are mighty good fellows and wish to keep together. The Council Club is the solution of the problem. All ex-members of the council who have not already done so, should communicate with Mr. Ingwersen at Clinton, Iowa, and get on his mailing list.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

James K. Ilsley of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, chairman of the committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association on taxation; F. W. Humphrey, Shawano, and J. R. Wheeler, Columbus, members of the committee, appeared before the tax commission to urge a change in the manner of taxing banks, Wednesday.

They wish a uniform system for the state adopted, something similar to the law in New York and in Illinois, where all banks are taxed 1 per cent on their capital, surplus and undivided profits. In this state, different communities tax on different plans and uniformity is entirely lacking.

In Milwaukee, for instance, banks are taxed 2 per cent, and in Madison one and a fraction. The committee is endeavoring to secure the recommendation of the tax commission for its plan and will then appear before the joint committee of the legislature on taxation and assessment.

Thirty-five years ago Mr. Feind became actively identified with the development of northern Wisconsin and at one time owned several thousand acres of land from the sale of which he became wealthy. When the Chilton National was formed in 1901, Mr. Feind was elected president and he has served in that capacity ever since.

If this is fully carried out it will include a lake trip on one of that company's carferries, from Milwaukee to Ludington, where a special train will be taken and some twenty to thirty Michigan towns, from end to end, will be visited. # Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, February 4.—Bills relating to banking matters continue to enter the Iowa legislature mostly through the house of representatives. Grier of Poweshiek has introduced a measure to remove the state banking department from the supervision of the auditor of state and place it in charge of the state treasurer. This change has been contemplated for some time and it is not unlikely that it will prevail.

Representative Jacobs of Calhoun county, has introduced a bill relating to the taxation of state, savings and national banks and loan and trust companies. It provides that the assessment in each case shall stand against the individual stockholders except that the amount actually invested in real estate shall be deducted from the real value of the separate shares. The bill forces the banks and other corporations included in the act to present a complete report to the assessor of the number of shares of stock issued and to whom, their value, capital stock, surplus, undivided profits, etc.

Mortgages on Real Estate

Mortgages on real estate are considered as real estate and assessed to the owner in a bill presented by Representative Dawson of Cherokee. Dawson considers the debt secured by mortgages as any other debt and would permit the mortgagor to deduct it from his assessment. Representative Sankey introduced a bill providing that an owner of real estate can be taxed only for his equity after deducting the amount of the mortgage. Representative Lee introduced a bill to tax inheritances which is entirely dissimilar to the Gilliland bill introduced in the senate. The Lee bill provides that inheritances of all nature including real estate shall pay a tax of 1½ per cent for amounts from $10,000 to $20,000 and a graduated scale up to 3½ per cent for amounts three times that valuation.

Interested in Speech

Iowans were of course interested in Senator Cummins's maiden speech in the senate on his amendments to the Carter postal savings bank bill, now before Congress. Senator Cummins has given his friends in Iowa to understand, however, that he will introduce an entirely new postal savings bank bill because he thinks the Carter bill is too cumbersome. He will propose supervision over the postal savings banks; dividing by districts instead of centering in Washington the entire force for inspecting postal savings accounts. The senator, however thinks he will present his bill the next session, inasmuch as he expects no action on the Carter bill at this session.

Shocked at Suicide

Iowa bankers were shocked at the suicide of cashier C. S. Scroggin of the Portsmouth Savings at Portsmouth. Scroggin locked himself in the bank and shot himself early one morning. Bank Inspector H. M. Carmony had begun an investigation of the bank the day before and upon news of the death reaching Des Moines, head of the state banking department Frank Roberts went at once to Portsmouth. However, the affairs of the bank have been found to be all right and it is suspected that Scroggin's only reason for ending his existence was that he feared he was to be replaced by another. He was a man about 65 years old.

Various Bills Proposed

State Auditor J. L. Bleakley is not enthusiastic over the various bills proposed by the legislature to take away different departments from his office. Bills have now been introduced to take away from the auditor the insurance department, banking department and municipal accounting department. Auditor Bleakley says he has asked for no relief and thinks that some of his political enemies may be trying to knock him out of as many appointments as possible, rather than in the interests of the people of the state. Mr. Bleakley says, however, that he will not object seriously to the transfer of the state banking and municipal accounting departments if the legislature will only leave him the insurance work.

Another Problem Presented

Des Moines bankers have been doing some speculating as to how much time elapses after employees in the various lines of business are paid off Saturday night before the money thus paid out is back in the banks. G. A. Nelson, assistant cashier of the Iowa National, is of the opinion that 75 per cent of the money thus expended on Saturday or Saturday night is back in the bank by Monday noon. Much of this comes from the merchants with whom the employees spend their money in exchange for the necessities of life. Much of it comes from the employees who deposit the amounts in the banks in their own names.

Were Boys Together

James G. Berryhill and Edward Finkbine, large stockholders in the Iowa National, were boys together down in Johnson county. Now their combined wealth is about three quarters of a million. But Finkbine doesn't hesitate to confess that at one time he admired Obediah Higby, the marshal of the day at the Johnson county fair, more than the president of the United States.

Banking Notes

A good index of the growth of Des Moines is furnished in the yearly report of the post-office, completed by Postmaster J. I. Myerly. The Des Moines office gained over $50,000 over the preceding year, the report shows. The total receipts from all sources were $2,636,443.12. The profits for the year were $446,368.97.

A dividend of 10 per cent has been ordered paid on all the claims, both common and general, out of the funds of the LaRue assignment of property by C. F. Andrews, receiver for the defunct Corning State Savings. This is the dividend that Judge Towner ordered paid at the close of the last term of district court at Corning. At that time the receiver had on hand about $22,000 received for the sale of assigned property.

H. A. Wingate, who has had charge of the country bank ledger for the Iowa National, has resigned and C. W. Oxborrow has been named in his place. Mr. Wingate goes to Enid, Oklahoma, to enter into the real estate and loan business. He has been connected with the Iowa National and Des Moines Savings for about ten years.

J. O. Trumbauer and Ira Rodamar have been elected vice-president and treasurer for the Farmers Loan & Trust at Waterloo. Mr. Rodamar has been cashier of the Leavitt & Johnson Bank of Waterloo.

The Farmers Savings is soon to be launched at Dike. Jeppe J. Schultz is to be cashier and C. E. Thomas of Grundy Center is to be president. Schultz has been cashier of the First National at Dike, while Mr. Thomas has been director of the First National at Grundy Center.

Polk county will pay back to the People's Savings of Des Moines taxes collected on $45,000 in government bonds held by the bank in the years 1903 and 1907. This is the effect of a stipulation agreed upon in a suit brought by the bank against the county.

S. H. Sibley, cashier of the Luther State at Luther, Wyo., has been in Des Moines transacting business.

The German Savings at Eldridge has filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $10,000. The officers are, president, Hugo Kuhl; vice-president, Adolph Muhs of Davenport; vice-president, A. H. Sunderlunds of Davenport; cashier, A. H. Kimper of Davenport. Directors, F. Harsenmiller of Eldridge, H. J. Struben of Eldridge and Chris Jessen of Eldridge.

The Bank of Greenwood

The Bank of Greenwood, Greenwood, S. C., one of the oldest banks in Greenwood County, is sending out the "Bank Almanac." This little book tells the value of time and money. The following is taken from the "Bank Almanac:—"

"There are so many interesting things about banks and banking that people want to know, that it is hard to tell where to start to tell about them. In various places in this little book we have endeavored to clear away the veil of mystery which shrouds banking to many, and we have tried to make those little perplexities so clear that our friends will not only be the wiser for having read, but will find many things of absorbing interest.

"We might say that we are full of belief in the present and future of this country, and of our own community. We believe that, since from the soil comes our great stability, no amount of surface disturbance can disturb our permanent prosperity. We believe in the honesty and the fairness of man, and we believe that the world is growing better each day.

"Those who have confidence in their fellowmen and in themselves, and who can see the brighter side of things, are, we think, the people who can successfully carry a financial institution on its way. So we offer our services to you: the service of a hopeful, progressive, safe and sane bank.

"This almanac is one upon which you can rely. We have obtained our calendar and data from the very best authorities. We have selected the contents with great care and feel that it contains reading matter of practical every day value.

"The 'Bank Almanac' is presented to you with our compliments and with the hope that it will impress upon you the numerous advantages of a bank account and a banking home. We want you to hang it up where it can be readily referred to, and we trust that it may be a constant reminder that our bank is your bank, if you will make it so. We will gladly explain any banking proposition upon which you may wish information, and nothing will please us better than to have you visit our bank and get acquainted, in case you do not already know our officers."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The clever "New Thought" book by that charming writer, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, is in reality selections from her daily newspaper work. They are bright and original and of the stimulating, instructive sort. Published by W. B. Conkey & Co., Chicago, at $1.25.

The Western Bank Note Company

A handsome leather bound desk pad, mounted upon a polished oak base is being given out to friends and patrons by the Western Bank Note and Engraving Co. There is a renewable section for succeeding years. It is very useful and very ornamental, the two essentials.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Reeder, N. D., reports capital of $10,000 with the following officers: E. B. Page, as president; C. A. Cameron, vice-president; and E. F. Jones, cashier.

The directors of the Security State Bank, of Chehalis, Wash., have decided to erect a $15,000 building.

"Westward 'Round the World"

There has issued from the press of E. P. Dutton & Co. New York, a small but valuable book of travel by E. S. Wright. "Tales of travelers" seem to be unfailingly popular, perhaps because no two persons who visit a given place are likely to see the same things or to see in the same way. Certainly there might have been the last word written about Honolulu and Nagasaki and Cairo and Benares by this time, yet there is always another traveler who likes to tell of the things he saw there, and always there appears to be something new, or something old told about in a new way. Mr. Wright is no exception to the rule, and the reader of "Westward 'Round the World" will readily fall into the belief that he is going over new ground when he reads this new account of journeys to Yokohama, Tokio, Kobe, Hong Kong, Canton, Manila, Singapore, Calcutta, Madras, Suez, Cairo and intermediate points. The volume is interestingly illustrated. $1.25 net.

A New Christian Science Book

The new faith—Christian Science—has produced many new books even in the romantic field. Mrs. Burnham wrote a charming one of the kind and now comes "Satisfied at Last," by Rev. Martin Sindell, published by Reid Publishing Co. Boston. There is no struggle so intense as the mental one of a highly gifted and very spiritually minded man such as Mr. Sindell has characterized in the Rev. John B. Love. It means a good deal when such a one—honored by his fellowmen, and with a brilliant future before him—lays aside all his cherished plans and desires, and takes up the cause of Christian Science.

"Consistent with human conditions and situations, logical in its deductions and convincing in its truths, clean, bright, forceful."—Boston Globe.

The work probably is orthodox coming from the seat from which the faith conducts its missionary work.

Sugar Beet Growers' Annual

The distinguished editor of the "American Sugar Industry and Beet Sugar Gazette," the Bible of the beet growers, and published at No. 5 Wabash Avenue, this city, has compiled and published "The American Sugar Beet Growers' Annual for 1908. Editor Frank Roderus is the premier sugar authority, in America, and his book is a veritable encyclopedia of information about preparing the ground, planting and marketing the crops. The turning of the beet into money for the planter and into sugar for the manufacturer is graphically recited and fully illustrated. Every tool and implement of the trade is shown. So are the pests which afflict. The statistical parts are interesting. In paper 75 cents, cloth $1.50.

Issues a Statement to Depositors

Wm. H. Carlson, president of the wrecked Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles, has issued a statement to the depositors of the concern explaining the plan for the payment of all claims by placing the United Surety Co. in charge of the affairs of the bank. The Superior Court will decide whether this plan shall be adopted or a receiver appointed. H. H. Appel, attorney for Carlson, says that if the United Surety Co. is allowed to straighten out the affairs of the Consolidated Bank, some of the depositors will probably be paid at once, and all claims ought to be settled within 50 days.

An agreed rate of interest must be computed for actual elapsed days. Interest at the rate specified in an interest paying bond must be computed on a basis of a 360-day year; i. e., every calendar month is 1-12 of 360 days, 30 days; every period from a date in one month to the same date in the following month is 30 days. Income bonds must be dealt in "flat."

The Union Savings Bank

The annual meeting of the directors of the Union Savings Bank of Pittsburgh was held in the offices of the institution in the Frick Building. The sum of $100,000 was passed to surplus, bringing that item up to $500,000. The Union Savings is among the most prosperous savings banks in the city.

Weltzel, assistant cashier of the First National of Albion, and its secretary is Henry Wehner, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Cedar Bluffs. Group Three, known as the Norfolk Group, meets at Creighton. Its president is Harry A. Cheney, president of the Security Bank of Creighton, and its secretary is Charles Atkinson, cashier of the Bank of Creighton.

Echo of Bank Wrecking

Philadelphia, Penn., January 31.—The police are engaged in a search for blackhand men who, it is alleged, acting for others defrauded of their money, dynamited the former offices of the banking firm of Parnerilli & Morelli at 840-42 Christian Street this morning, badly wrecking the place. Three months ago, Morrelli, it is said, disappeared from this city, and a few weeks after, Parnerilli left for Pittsburgh. It was announced that the bank had failed.

Banking Restrained by Court

Boston, Mass., February 1.—An injunction to restrain the Greenfield Savings Bank of Greenfield, Mass., from receiving or paying deposits was issued to-day by Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Judicial court at the request of Pierre Jay, savings bank commissioner.

The bank, according to its last statement, had deposits of $3,069,318. Its assets totaled $3,182,779 and its surplus was $107,785.

Lincoln's Head on New Coin

President Roosevelt has given his consent to the placing of the head of Lincoln on one of the popular coins. He conferred Saturday with Director Leech of the mint about the matter, and the details are now under advisement. It is probable the half-dollar piece will be selected as the principal coin to bear the Lincoln head.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane has become one of the "big 30" in bank clearings, its place being 29 by reason of its clearances of $307,791,482 in 1908. It was No. 36 in 1906 and No. 32 at the beginning of 1908. The three cities outdistanced were Albany, N. Y., 105,000 population; Richmond, Va., 115,000, and Washington, D. C., 350,000. It is just behind Portland, now 28 which was No. 27 in 1908, and is ahead of Hartford, New Haven, Rochester, Syracuse, Wilmington, Columbus, O., Toledo, Grand Rapids, Evansville, Des Moines, Peoria, Sioux City, St. Joseph, Mo., Atlanta, Ga., Memphis, Savannah, Nashville, Birmingham, Norfolk, Salt Lake, Tacoma and Oakland. Bradstreets places Spokane No. 27 in its compilation of bank clearings of 100 cities of the United States, showing also that no city has made a greater gain in rank than Spokane, and but two have equaled her record. Wheeling, W. Va., and Sioux Falls, S. D., with clearings of $72,000,600 and $30,496,175, respectively in 1908, have each gained nine points. Portland, Ore., advanced from No. 30 in 1906 to No. 26 in 1908, Tacoma from No. 38 to No. 36; and Seattle fell back from No. 19 to No. 21. Clearings in Spokane for the week ended January 21st were $6,273,407, a gain of 34 per cent over the same period in 1908, when the total was $4,665,471. For the week ended January 14th the total was $7,159,907, a gain of 35 per cent over the same week a year ago.

The Union Trust Company

Stockholders of the Union Trust Company re-elected their old directors and added others at the annual meeting, and these officers were continued in office: President, D. W. Twohy; vice-president, W. J. C. Wakefield; secretary and treasurer, James C. Cunningham; directors, D. C. Corbin, Peter Larson, James Monaghan, John A. Finch, T. J. Humbird, George S. Brooke, R. B. Paterson, Fred B. Grinnell, J. P. McGoldrick, Jay P. Graves, T. L. Greenough, D. McDonald and E. J. Roberts. The directors added are Albert L. Flewelling, president of the Monarch Lumber Company, and representative of the Chicago Milwaukee and St. Paul timber interests in the northwest; William Winters of the firm of Caughren, Winters, Smith & Co., railroad contractors; F. A. Blackwell, president of the Idaho & Washington Northern railroad, the Panhandle Lumber Company, and chairman of the board of directors of the Spokane & Inland; J. D. Porter of Porter Bros., railroad contractors; D. M. Drumheller, vice-president of the Traders' National and Patrick Welch of P. Welch & Co., railroad contractors. The stockholders ratified the sale of the Corbin property to the Old National for $300,000 and purchase of the Marble bank building for $200,000. The Old National expects to have the building, which is to be 10 or 12 stories, ready for occupancy in two years. The bank will continue to occupy its present quarters until its new building is completed, and the Union Trust Company will remain in the basement.

The Old National of Spokane

D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National of Spokane, was much relieved when he heard of the arrest and confession of Don Carlos Wiseley, 20 years of age, at St. Louis, January 20th. The boy was employed as a paying teller blotting clerk by the bank and robbed it of $10,000 by a series of manipulations. Eight thousand five hundred dollars was recovered by the detectives. Until Wiseley confessed the officers of the bank were at loss to know who was the guilty person. His first theft was of $1,000 in silver from the vault. This he covered with a bogus check. Then a $10,000 check came through the clearing house drawn on the Old National by the Washington Trust Company. He let the check get by the bookkeeper, the cashier and the settlement clerk. Then he got it and entered it upon the statement sheet, keeping the check. The following morning the balance was $4,000 short, and he made it appear to be $14,000. The rest of the boy's story follows: "I took the assistant cashier's check to the Bank of Montreal and requested clearing house certificates to its amount. They were refused. I was trying to get $10,000 in clearing house certificates above the $4,000 necessary. The clearing house manager of the bank of Montreal finally gave me the $10,000 in certificates. These I cashed at different banks in the clearing association before November 1, 1908. I was discharged, but made seven transactions afterward." Wiseley first rented a saving deposit box in Spokane under the name of Gale Paul, where he deposited the cash. Ten days later he went to Portland, Ore., where he rented a box under the name of Harry Moore and opened a savings account. He left Spokane in December, going direct to St. Louis, where he has been attending a plumbing school. Eighteen hundred dollars was found on his person and the rest was located as the result of interpreting code letters from his brother in Spokane. Governor Mead has signed requisition for the return of Wiseley to Spokane in charge of Felix M. Pugh, who has gone to St. Louis.

The Inland Bank

Fees charged by W. F. Meier, receiver of the Inland Bank of Spokane, were declared exorbitant at a meeting of creditors, and Judge J. D. Hinkle of the Spokane county superior court granted their petition to hear evidence on February 20th in regard to the reasonableness of the charges of the receiver and the attorney. It was brought out at the meeting that Meier charged $1,750 as his fees as receiver and $750 as a fee for his attorney. O. W. McDonald of the British-American Realty Company, who bought the assets of the bank declared that Samuel A. Stern, Meier's law partner, should not have acted as attorney both for the receiver and the ex-president, Robert E. Cavette, against whom has been lodged a criminal charge; that if Meier had performed his duties properly the creditors would have been paid dollar for dollar, and that Cavette has not turned over all the books of the bank.

The Fidelity National

Furniture and fixtures for the Fidelity National's new quarters at Riverside Avenue and Wall Street to be occupied in March, will cost $15,000. The interior finish will be of white Italian marble and Cuban mahogany. The metal work will be of bronze. A wide balcony in the rear of the spacious room will be encased by arches embellished by stucco work. Bronze railings will be placed along the balcony and the stairway leading to it. The furniture for the main banking room and the rooms fitted up for the officers of the institution will be of special design. The chairs will be of solid mahogany, upholstered in Spanish leather. The furnishings include a heavy mahogany table of unique design for the directors' room. The building will have a new front, the entrance being provided with massive bronze gates.

Banking Notes

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National was at Helena, Mont., last week, as a witness in the case of George Frankhauser, charged with holding up the Great Northern train at Rondo, Mont., in September, 1907. The Old National lost $40,000 by the robbery, being money which was en route from the United States treasury.

The Pioneer State Bank has incorporated and opened for business at Almira, Wash., with F. H. Trunk, an experienced banker, as cashier and with stockholders including prominent Almira and Ritzville capitalists.

Stockholders of the Palouse State Bank elected these directors at the annual meeting at Palouse, Wash.: H. M. Boone, president; M. J. Hawkinson, vice-president; A. S. Parker, cashier; H. C. Johnson, assistant cashier; J. C. Northrup and C. H. Oderlin. Mr. Hawkinson is a recent arrival from North Dakota.

A. P. Johnson, president of the First State Bank at Garfield, Wash., is critically sick in the hospital at Moscow, Idaho. Mrs. Johnson and a physician and nurse are at the bedside. Mr. Johnson was taken to Moscow to undergo an operation but was too weak. His recovery is doubtful.

Important Stock Brokerage Decision

The appellate division of the Supreme Court, New York, has handed down a decision of great importance to stock brokers. The plaintiffs, Weir Bros. & Co., stock brokers, sued a customer who had failed to put up margins for stock purchased on the New York Curb upon his default, and after giving notice to the customer, the brokers sold the stock on the Curb and then sought to recover the difference between the amount realized upon the sale and the price paid for the stock. The complaint was dismissed upon the ground that the broker was obliged to sell out his customer upon default at public auction, and that a sale at any other place was not binding upon the customer. Evidence of the universal custom of brokers to sell in such cases on the floor of the Exchange and upon the Curb in the manner followed by the plaintiffs, was excluded. The decision was in direct contravention of the practice of brokers. Mr. Weir, therefore, retained H. F. Wolff, of the law firm of Ivins, Mason, Wolff & Hoguet. The opinion reversing the judgment below was written by Judge Guy and is the first of its kind in New York in over 35 years which deals with the question as to the place where a broker may sell securities after default by a customer. According to the opinion the early decisions of the New York courts established the proposition that a sale upon the New York Stock Exchange would not constitute such a public sale as would be binding upon a customer in the event of default of payment. The court was, however, of the opinion that in view of the great change in conditions, these decisions would be modified as to permit such a sale, and held that a sale on the New York Curb, after due notice, was a substantial compliance within the meaning and spirit of the law requiring a public sale.

Dividend Disbursements

Total interest and dividend disbursements this month by railroad, industrial and traction corporations, according to the records of the Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, will amount to $75,404,543, against $77,310,913 in February a year ago. Of the grand total this year interest payments will contribute $38,500,000 and dividends $36,904,543, against $37,700,000 and $39,610,913, respectively. The gain in interest disbursements is due to numerous new bond and note issues, while the falling off in dividends finds ready explanation in the fact that a number of concerns either cut or passed their dividends.

Colorado Guaranty Bill

Members of the Colorado State Bankers Association addressed the legislature last week on the bank guaranty bill now pending, and without exception condemned the present bill. Ex-Governor Adams spoke strongly in favor of guaranteeing bank deposits, but said that were the present bill to become a law, it would drive every state bank out of existence and result in the imprisonment of their officials.

It is probable that another bill will be substituted for the present measure, which was drawn by ex-Governor Thomas.

Chicago Nationals

The national banks of Chicago establish a new high record at every call in these growing times. Published reports for the sixteen national banks showing their condition at the close of business February 5th made a new advance in totals in the matter of deposits. The total was $398,442,523, against a previous high record of $378,381,371, November 27, 1908. The growth has been steady with the national institutions so that records do not excite any particular attention except to emphasize Chicago's growth as a financial center for out-of-town deposits. The bank not in this game falls out of the running. The statements in full of the leading national banks will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Drexel Absorbs Oakland

It became known in La Salle Street Tuesday noon that the Drexel State Bank, of this city, has practically secured the control of the Oakland National and will take over the national institution for liquidation. The two banks have been doing business in the vicinity of Oakwood and Cottage Grove avenues, the Oakland having been originally chartered in September, 1888, and the Drexel State dating back to August, 1902. The two banks have grown in that period, but it recently became evident to Robert Jones, the vice-president of the Oakland National, that one bank would be more advisable in that section of the city than two. Mr. Jones came to Chicago about a year ago and bought an interest in the Oakland and later became interested in the Drexel State.

Northwestern National Deposit Slip

The Northwestern National has introduced a new form of deposit slip. It has a column for checks on out-of-town banks, a column for checks on the Northwestern National, another for checks on other Minneapolis banks, and then a place at the bottom of the last column for recapitulation of outside checks, clearing checks, Northwestern checks, gold, silver and bank notes.

The National Produce Bank

The National Produce Bank of this city, at this call of the Comptroller of the Currency, shows deposits in excess of $1,000,000. President Wagner is being congratulated on the growth of the institution, which threw open its doors a few weeks prior to the financial crisis of 1907 and came through with flying colors.

W. G. Edens Out of the Hospital

Friends of W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust, of this city will be glad to know that his recovery from a double fracture of his right leg has progressed so that he has been able to leave the hospital and now is at home. His telephone address is Normal 1066.

The Peoples Gas

The "Melon" which was so loudly touted and put up Peoples Gas 6 points came off on Wednesday. The company will issue $2,600,000 of new stock at par to present holders. The issue will be about 6 shares in the hundred. The dividend rate was not changed.

Detroit Bank Clearances

In January bank clearances in Detroit made a gain of 1.1 per cent over the same month in 1908. The total was $57,923,498, as compared with $57,278,357 a year ago. Detroit was fourth in the list of cities in the middle west.

JACKSON JOHNSON
St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Johnson is the new vice-president of the Mechanics-American National, and is one of the captains of industry of St. Louis. Mr. Johnson is president of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co., which is one of the leading shoe manufacturing establishments of the United States. He is one of the strong business men of his city, and the bank is to be congratulated in securing Mr. Johnson as one of its officers.

J. P. Hinton

At the meeting of the directorate of the Commercial club of Hannibal, Mo., J. P. Hinton, cashier of the Hannibal National, was elected to head the organization as president for this year. Mr. Hinton's name was the only one considered. It was against his wishes that his name was placed in nomination, but when he saw that it was the wish of all the directors that he take the position, he consented, promising to devote his best efforts to the work of the club and to Hannibal's upbuilding.

Chicago Bank Clearings

The daily average Chicago bank clearings last week were $48,103,666, or $11,446,853 more than a year ago and only $1,126,005 below the first week this year, which holds the high record.

W. T. Perkins

W. T. Perkins has been elected vice-president of the Hamilton National of this city.

Two Years Old

It was very kind of the Comptroller to take note of the fact and to call all of the banks in celebration of the second anniversary of the National City Bank of Chicago. That institution was two years old on February 5th, to a day, and shows a growth in deposits which must be quite gratifying to the whole bank family. On opening day, February 5, 1907, deposits were $2,198,337.25. In one year they had passed seven millions and now, February 5, 1909, are close up to thirteen millions. Where can they beat it?

The Spokane Clearing House Association

J. P. M. Richards, head of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company, was elected president of the Spokane Clearing House Association at its annual meeting. A. F. MacClaine, vice-president and acting manager of the Traders' National, was elected to the vice-presidency and W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National was re-elected secretary and treasurer. Mr. Richards was vice-president in 1908 and chairman of the executive committee in 1907, prior to which he was twice head of the association. Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National, is the retiring head of the organization. Mr. Vincent was president of the Washington State Bankers Association, in 1907-8. Besides electing executives, members of the association discussed the calendar of events in Spokane this year, among others being the 17th National Irrigation Congress, which will meet here August 9th to 14th, when many men prominent in the world of finance, commerce and industry will be among the speakers. R. Insinger, manager of the Hypotheekbank, is chairman of the local board of control.

First National of Sommersworth

The First National of Sommersworth, N. H., which was declared insolvent and placed in the hands of a receiver December 16, 1908, having complied with the conditions imposed by the Comptroller of the Currency precedent to its resumption and its capital stock now being unimpaired, has been permitted to reopen its doors for business as an active national banking association.

State Banks Make Records

Most of the state banks of Chicago made public Wednesday reports of their condition at the beginning of business February 6th. Twenty-seven institutions showed a gain of $22,134,597 in deposits, compared with the previous statement, made November 27, 1908. As was the case with the national banks new records in the matter of deposits were shown.

Group Two, P. B. A., Meeting

The annual meeting of Group Two of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association was held Friday morning at the Bellevue-Stratford, and was largely attended.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

JOHN SCHUETTE, sage of the Wisconsin bankers, has sent an able circular on "Postal Savings Banks" to each member of Congress. It is an able presentation of the case from the bankers' viewpoint.

WHEN buying safes do not try to think up or decipher the long hyphenated incorporated titles, but go to "Domrell" who has put in nearly all of the big burglar-proof vaults in the Chicago banks. Any banker will tell you about his work and how to find him. He will do the rest.

TOO bad! There was Love, forced to retire from business just because the fortune of his second wife was found to be tied up in the hands of a wise Chicago banker. The divorced wife wasn't so fortunate. Now another five million heiress and wife has tired of wedded life and putting up for an amateur banker and would-be society leader. A good head and kind brothers showed her very early what she was up against.

THIS kind of son-in-law should be put upon an allowance. To set them up in business, especially where training and good judgment are required, is too expensive. Chicago has almost half a dozen such "mistakes" masquerading as "bankers and brokers" who ought to be retired.

WE have a letter from Decorah, Iowa, relating to the race with Monticello, as to which city has the most prosperous bank, everything accounted for. The letter says: "Our mutual friend down at Monticello overlooked the fact that there are but two banks in his city while we have four here; that we pay but 3 per cent while he pays 4 per cent. We are the only bank, probably, in the fourth congressional district that has kept the rate to 3 per cent."

WHAT state can produce another two such banks, and the two men behind the guns? Can they be beaten or equaled in any state? The hundreds of bankers in Iowa who have enjoyed this little controversy between the two cities are proud of them both.

H. R. AISTHORPE has been elected cashier and secretary of the First Bank and Trust Company at Cairo. He was formerly assistant cashier and assistant secretary, but since the office of cashier has been vacant by the resignation of Geo. F. Ort, who resigned his position to go to California, the early part of last year, H. R. Aisthorpe has practically been doing the duties of the office.

THE promotion of H. R. Aisthorpe is a worthy one. The young man has been in the banking business about nine and a half years, starting in at the foot of the ladder and has gradually worked through every department in the bank, thereby acquiring detailed knowledge which well qualifies him for the office which he now holds.

THE State Bank of Chicago is pushing its bond department to the front and report says it is a profitable one. Nearly all Chicago banks now maintain such departments.

THE information department at the Northern Trust is being closely watched by the other banks. It gives free advice about investments and financial matters, something like the free legal department of the A. B. A.

THE Progressive Bankers Club of Mobile is publishing a handsome paper, now in its second number, and devoted chiefly to the City Bank and Trust Company.

THE Commercial National of this city dug up some interesting data on its own early history upon the occasion of the Lincoln birthday celebration. The Commercial and about one other are the only national banks with such a history in Chicago. Then it was the day of small things. It was in a queer looking little building at 13 Clark Street, when the first statement was published (April 4, 1865) showing deposits of $82,000. Charles Ennis was cashier. To-day the bank is in the finest of skyscraper buildings, owns the building, and is hovering around the fifty million mark in deposits. C. W. Ross collected the statistics.

SEATTLE will have a six-day financial atmosphere from June 21st to June 26th. The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition is the magnet which has drawn the American Institute of Banking there for June 21st, 22d, 23d and the three following days will witness the joint state bankers convention of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho. Then the indefatigable P. C. Kauffman has extracted a promise from the only Vanderlip to speak a piece. Everyone ought to go. Banks should send their best men for the event can only be second in importance to the big A. B. A. Chicago convention.

AFTER enclosing six "Warning" cards in one envelope to his cheerful subjects, Secretary Kauffman closes with this injunction: "Don't accept a plausible story as conclusive evidence of a stranger's honesty in presenting a check or other instrument for acceptance. Frequently the most plausible stories are offered by the smoothest and most dangerous criminals. Use every precaution at all times against possibilities of fraud, and especially in dealing with strangers."

IN another section Mr. Kauffman says: "Handle no pay checks for strangers, no matter how plausible their story, unless they are introduced and check endorsed by a responsible party. Remember, if you cash a good pay check and the endorsement is forged, the loss will fall on you."

OUT in Washington they do one thing about right. The protective committee does everything possible to catch and punish bank crooks and robbers, and then they draw pro rata upon members for expenses. They also tell just exactly what the money was used for, which ought to be enlightening to the old foggy ways of the A. B. A.

THEY have a busy legislative committee which will try to pass the following bills, a rather large assignment: The bank slander act; defining and punishing burglary with explosives; relating to the payment of deposits in trust; establishing uniform law of stock transfers; defining the competency of bank notaries; making 360 days the basis of interest calculations; amending the negotiable instruments law; regulating bills of lading; providing for a uniform warehouse receipt law; and amending the several depository laws so as to permit banks in lieu of surety bonds to deposit with the treasurer bonds, warrants, state, county, and municipal, and other similar securities.

B. M. CHATTELL of the Illinois Trust, made a beautiful three hundred yard drive last week and "reached the green" just in time to "get" a pair of conspirators who had given a raised check to the Illinois Trust in exchange for bonds. The check had been duly certified by the State Bank and then raised to $27,000. The bonds were recovered and the crooks "are on their way." It was Mr. Chattell's promptness which did the trick. The protective committees will be d-e-e-lighted.

THE deadlock in the legislatures of Illinois and Wisconsin deal rather hard blows to the direct primary system of selecting officials. Incidentally, too, they hit the republican party.

THE "big men" of Wall Street are going abroad early this year. With Messrs Morgan, Frick, Reid, and half a dozen others away, the outlook for an active stock market is not so very bright.—Wall Street Journal.

But how comfortable to be away while the steel merger investigation is on in Washington.

IN May of last year Secretary Farnsworth sent out to the banks of the twenty-five largest clearing house cities of the country a circular letter describing a system of letters and numbers to be used on drafts and checks, also a key giving said cities which were lettered from A to Y, and the clearing house banks in these various cities together with their numbers. By this system much time can be saved in transit departments, and while the suggestion has been taken up by some of the banks the plan as yet has not been universally adopted.

THE main office of the A. B. A. is a busy, aggressive center and not to be thus lightly dissuaded. A new letter has been sent out calling attention to the matter, and enclosing a new form of check and draft embodying a suggestion received from several banks. If your bank has adopted the old form it will not in any way interfere with the plan proposed in the new form, there being a consolidation of the letter and number. When getting out new checks or drafts, bankers should adopt this system as outlined by the clearing house section, for when its use became more general, it will be a decided advantage to all banks.

THIS is the kind of work that will pay in the end, keeping everlastingly at it is the only road to anything new in banking. Witness Pierson's six year battle for uniform bills of lading, and the long war necessary to get the negotiable instruments bills through in the several states. The new check as above ought to go into use at once.

"CEMENT securities" is a term now in common use in banks, owing to the volume of such paper which was "on its way" when the steel-merger panic struck us. With a renewal of good times there will be more. Cement securities, like alfalfa, comes in three crops a year. Notwithstanding all this the Portland cement industry will rival that of lumber some day and bankers should begin to get posted early.

TO assist them a book entitled "The Portland Cement Industry from a Financial Standpoint" by Edwin C. Eckel has been issued by the Moody's Magazine Co., New York. It has maps, statistics, history, and expert opinion all in a—no joke—concrete form. There is one chapter on "Bonds issued against unbuilt factories," which is worth the price of the book.

State Senator W. H. Paulhamus' Bill on Compulsory Insurance of Deposits of State Banks

Olympia, Wash., February 8.—State Senator W. H. Paulhamus of Pierce county has submitted a bill to the upper house of the legislature, now in session at Olympia, contemplating compulsory insurance of the deposits of state banks and optional insurance of national bank deposits. The measure provides for a guaranty insurance fund under the administration of the state bank examiner, the money being derived from an assessment of one-half of 1 per cent on daily deposits the first year and one-quarter of 1 per cent the second year and one-eighth of 1 per cent thereafter. One-tenth of the tax is payable in cash, the balance in noninterest bearing certificates of deposit, until the fund reaches $1,000,000, after which the tax must be paid in cash. The assessment is payable at once, is permitted to remain in the bank subject to the call of the examiner until $1,000,000 has been accumulated, when it shall be invested in high-class, low-interest-bearing bonds. Interest on time deposits is limited to 4 per cent and on call deposits to 2 per cent. Any higher rate is penalized. Noninterest bearing deposits are insured at par, those bearing 2 per cent at 90 per cent, 3 per cent at 80 per cent and 4 per cent at 70 per cent. Guaranteed deposits are not insured. Whenever a bank fails the examiner is authorized to take charge and pay all depositors from the insurance fund. The measure also provides several safeguards in the licensing of new institutions by the bank examiner.

The Spokane Spokesman-Review says in a leading article that the unusual feature to the Paulhamus bill is the clause providing a penalty for banks which pay more than 4 per cent on time deposits, or more than 2 per cent on call deposits, adding:

"When banks are allowed to pay a larger premium for depositors' cash it is claimed they have passed the safety line, and become semi-speculative institutions, for they are forced, in many instances, to reinvest their money in speculative schemes to get large returns, in order to have a good margin of profit after paying the depositors their interest.

"The wisdom of other clauses of the bill may be questioned. This state might do well to watch the result of the workings of a somewhat similar law in Oklahoma before adopting such a measure. To date one of the most noticeable effects of the Oklahoma statute has been the organization of a great number of small banks, with but little capital. A tendency on the part of depositors to show little discrimination as to where they bank their money is also reported, for why should depositors worry over the soundness of a bank or the character of the men conducting it, when they are amply protected by the state, which will make conservative, sound bankers dig into their vaults to pay the losses occasioned by the careless or speculative?"

What is the Western Farmer Doing with His Money?

This question "what is the Western farmer doing with his money?" is of far greater importance than a superficial view of the subject would indicate; it involves the consideration not only of the pecuniary interests of the farmer and of the people at large, but also the status of the farmer as a citizen, a man of affairs and as a factor in the development of the resources of our country.

As to the present status of the farmer and his environments, which may be included under the general term "farm life," it may be said that notwithstanding many untoward conditions, the extent of agricultural production in the West has steadily increased and has attained gigantic proportions. This, in a large measure, is due to improved farming machinery and methods and to the increased knowledge of the farmer, all of which reflect the important influences of the national Department of Agriculture, experimental stations and departments in numerous universities and colleges.

Agriculture has now a place in the administration of the affairs of every government in the world, but more particularly in our own government.

President Roosevelt and James J. Hill have both raised their voices in an earnest appeal to improve the average of farm life, to readjust national ideas on the subject of agricultural pursuits, and to bring to bear the highest intelligence and skill in this direction.

The farmers have learned that their strength lies in co-operation, and this co-operation has paved the way for powerful organizations among them: organized efforts of the farmers of our country in the matter of elevator and shipping companies, creameries and other industries, have had a wide and far-reaching influence.

The work of the new farmer may now be considered a business and not merely a means of making a livelihood; he has become a man of affairs like the merchant: he works as hard as the old farmer did, but in a different way:

By Festus J. Wade, President Mercantile Trust and Mercantile National of St. Louis :: :: ::

he uses the four m's, Mind, Money, Machinery and Muscle, using as little of the latter as possible. This is well illustrated by the fact that the dairy products of the farms, which twenty or thirty years ago were considered of minor importance, now amount to about $800,000,000 annually; and what may be called the poultry products of the farm, which were comparatively small, now amount to about $600,000,000 annually.

The value of all farm products of the United States for the year 1908 is estimated at about $7,778,000,000, a gain of nearly $300,000,000 over that of 1907.

The panic of 1907 which affected all lines of business, did not seriously affect the farmer, for the price of agricultural products has been high, and they have ever found a ready market.

Farmers now sell ten articles where they formerly sold one, and banks which have been organized during the last few years are chiefly in the rural districts; in the state of Iowa alone there are as many banks as there are post-offices. Some of the stock of these banks is owned by the farmers of the community, and a large part of the deposits belong to them.

Besides the great improvement in methods of farming, the farmer has made material gains in the matter of home comfort; he has learned the importance of education for his children, and has made his home more attractive and comfortable, installing the telephone, hot and cold water and other modern conveniences; his personal needs and expenditures are also increased, the family of the average farmer of the Middle West being as well housed and well clothed and enjoying as many everyday comforts as the people in our cities. This ameliorated and improved condition of the farmer and his family in their home life and education has undoubtedly increased the expenditures of the farmer, and a considerable of the surplus of his earnings has necessarily been expended therefor.

As a rule, the area of individual farms has been increased, and the farmer is enabled to work a larger area by reason of the improvement in agricultural implements and machinery; Iowa alone, which stands at the head of the list in this respect, has invested about $60,000,000 in labor-saving devices.

It is interesting to make a comparison between the farms of this country and those of other countries; the average size of farms in India is ten acres; in Germany and France, about five, and in England, nine—in America it is 150 acres. The equipment of a farm in India costs on the average only about $10; this may account for the fact that the average Indian farm does not exceed ten acres in extent.

The exact value of the improved farms, including their buildings, cannot be stated at the present time, but will be found to exceed twenty billion dollars. This increase represents not only the "unearned increment," but also represents the investment of money in new farms. The increase in the number of farms between 1890 and 1900 was 1,172,731, and in addition to this the average area of the farms increased within that period nearly thirty acres.

The increased investment of money in farm lands, as nearly as can be ascertained, is not far from $3,500,000,000, and this of itself has absorbed a great proportion of the farmer's surplus.

During the first four years after the census of 1900 the farmer invested over one hundred million dollars in new and improved farm implements and machinery, and his livestock has increased in value over five hundred million dollars in that period. This undoubtedly represents a large portion of the farmer's surplus earnings.

Besides these material and permanent investments the farmer's mode of life has called for a greater expenditure of money for the daily comforts of his home and for the education of his children; he has learned to insure his insurable property, and this alone represents a very large amount of money annually.

During the last ten years the indebtedness of the farmer on farm mortgages has been very early discharged, and this has absorbed many millions of dollars.

The ultimate surplus earnings of the farmer have probably gone into mortgages upon the farms and property of other persons and into the savings banks of the country.

The farmer has been a staunch supporter of the Republic at all times, and if the truth were known it would be found that he has invested much of his surplus funds in government, state and municipal bonds.

As a rule the farmer does not favor corporate stocks and bonds.

Plan Drastic Laws

Drastic banking laws for the state of Michigan are proposed in amendments to the present laws and in new legislation which the Michigan Bankers Association will present, through the Detroit delegation, to the state legislature within a few days.

This revision of the present banking system is the result of recommendations made to the association by a committee of bankers appointed by President Leon Chichester of Petoskey for that purpose. The important provisions, summarized, are as follows:

That the making or using of a false statement to obtain credit be made a felony and punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding five years.

That the person who makes, circulates or transmits statements, rumors or suggestions derogatory to the financial condition or stand-

Dimes Savings of Detroit Absorbs Citizens Savings

The Citizens Savings Bank of Detroit, R. H. Pyfe, president, terminated its existence on Saturday. The stockholders ratified the action of the board of directors at that time in deciding to liquidate to the Dime Savings Bank and in the early part of next week the assets of the Citizens will be transferred to the Dime.

There will be no change in the officers of the Dime Savings Bank, with the exception of adding F. F. Tillotson, cashier of the Citizens to the executive staff of the Dime, probably in the position of assistant cashier. It isn't absolutely certain as yet, what members if any, of the Citizens board of directors will be taken on the board of the Dime. The employees of the Citizens will be taken care of by the Dime, on account of the additional work at the latter institution.

WE INVITE COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

Commenced business August 26, 1907

The Money of the Country

No important change occurred last month in the supply of money in the United States. The total stock of gold money on February 1st was 1,649 millions, or nearly 5 million dollars less than on January 1st, the decrease being due to exports. Of this great stock of gold, 1,042 million dollars are in the vaults of the national treasury and subtreasury, embracing 864 millions represented by gold certificates, 150 millions in the reserve fund, and 28 millions in the general fund. The treasury vaults also contain 523 millions in silver, most of which is held in trust against silver certificates. The amount of money in the treasury, held as assets of the government, is 303 million dollars (including the gold reserve of 150 millions).
The money in circulation increased about a million dollars in January and is about 2 millions less than a year ago.

Baltimore Depositaries

The Baltimore depositaries will accept the new plan established by the finance commission in giving bond for municipal deposits, and a number of them arranged with City Register Thomas. Under the new plan the city requires a guaranty of $150,000 from the unlimited banks, and $50,000 from the limited. This guaranty may be all in city stock, placed with the city register, or any part may be covered by such deposit of stock, the remainder to be protected by a bond from some guaranty company. The Citizens National deposited $150,000 of city stock, while the National Exchange gave $40,000 of stock and a bond of $110,000, and the Drovers and Mechanics' Bank gave $30,000 of stock, and a bond of $120,000.

New Law Recommended

A law has been recommended in Arizona changing the present system of assessing the property of banks only where the bank is incorporated. At present, any property a bank owns anywhere is assessed only in the county where it is incorporated, as part of its capital stock. Even real estate owned by a bank in some other county may not be assessed by that county. A law has also been recommended that all banks holding public moneys (county moneys) shall pay a minimum interest rate of 2 per cent on daily balances.

The New Britain Trust Company

The New Britain (Conn.) Trust Company has elected the following officers: William E. Attwood, as president; L. Hoyt Pease and Chas. M. Jarvis, vice-presidents; Frank G. Vibberts, secretary and treasurer, and Raymond R. Healy, assistant treasurer.

Vice-President Robertson of the Continental National of this city, who is in Europe, says the Bank of France will not intercept Transvaal gold any longer. "I expect a quick repletion of the Bank of England gold reserve and foreigners are waiting to take the cue from us."

Chicagoans Buy Memphis Bank

Robert M. Wells, vice-president of the Bankers National of Chicago, representing himself and others, has obtained control of the Security Bank and Trust Company of Memphis by purchase of a majority of the stock.
The bank is capitalized at $500,000, all paid in, and R. T. Fant is president. It has not grown in the last year, and the stock sold lately at 85.
It is said that the Wells syndicate wants a southern bank to push the stocks and bonds' end of banking.

The Peoples State Bank of Orangeville

The Peoples State Bank of Orangeville, Ill., has filed articles of organization. It is capitalized at $25,000. C. A. Bollandier, D. A. Schoch, Geo. S. Wagner, S. P. Dorn, E. E. Hertwig, A. N. Windecker and others are interested

Chicago Currency Shipments

Chicago currency shipments in January amounted to $10,031,275. Receipts from the country, $11,099,850; receipts from the East, $560,000, comparing with shipments a year ago of $8,609,273; receipts from the country of $15,766,734, and receipts from the East of $475,000.

Before the present year has run its course the Hyde Park Savings Bank of Cincinnati will have erected a handsome pressed brick combination bank building and apartment house, costing in the neighborhood of $100,000. Several architects have been invited to submit plans for the new building, and the number of acceptances already received by the officers of the institution indicate that there will be lively competition for the contract.

The building will be erected on the north side of the public square in Hyde Park, and will have a frontage of 110 feet. The ground has been purchased, but no statement will be made regarding the price paid until the officers are ready to make public the completed plans for the building. It is the intention to erect a four-story building, the ground floor to be occupied by the bank and stores, and the upper floors to be divided into flats. Handsome stone trimmings will make the structure one of the most notable, from an architectural point of view, in Hyde Park.

The Cleveland Clearing House Association

E. R. Fancher, vice-president of the Union National, has been elected president of the Cleveland Clearing House Association. Mr. Fancher has been secretary of the executive committee for four years and his work in that position, as well as on the special committee during the panic of 1907, was such as to attract much favorable attention. F. W. Wardwell, president of the Cleveland National, was elected vice-president of the association; E. R. Date, cashier of the National City, was re-elected vice-president, and C. E. Collins was re-elected secretary and manager. The executive committee is composed of Thomas H. Wilson, first vice-president of the First National; Colonel J. J. Sullivan, president of the Central National; George S. Russell, cashier of the Bank of Commerce, N. A.; T. W. Hill, cashier of the Cleveland National, and L. A. Murfey, cashier of the National Commercial.

Banker Vanishes—Institution Closed

The business of F. Korce and A. Bendik, bankers and steamship agents of Cleveland, was discontinued last week, as Bendik has disappeared mysteriously. Mrs. Bendik said her husband left without giving any explanation. Claims totaling $1,400 against the firm are filed by foreigners, who said money they had left with the banking firm had never reached Europe.

The Cincinnati Money Market

The Cincinnati money market continues easy. Collateral loans are being negotiated at 3½ and 4 per cent on call and 4½ per cent on time. Prime paper is being discounted mainly at 5½ per cent. Most of the banks report an accumulation of funds, and, as mercantile borrowing is only moderate, it is expected relatively low rates will continue to prevail for some time to come.

The Ohio Trust Company

At the annual meeting of the Ohio Trust Company held in Columbus last week, the directors and officers were re-elected.

Ask Bankers to Decide Place of Meeting

Stacey B. Rankin, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association, has sent out from headquarters in the First National Bank building requests to all members of the association in the state to vote upon their preference for the place of holding the convention this year, whether in the state or at some point outside. Last year the convention was held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., in the Thousand Islands, and the council of administration desires to know if the bankers want to take another outing trip this year. As soon as the answers are in the council will meet and decide upon the date and place of the convention. If it is to be held in the state, it is quite probable that the bankers will want to come to Columbus. However, if the result of the vote depends upon those who went to the St Lawrence last year the vote will be for another trip outside the state.

Cincinnati Banks

Cincinnati banks will surrender to the United States Treasury under the call for $30,000,000 of government deposits about $140,000. The call is for the special deposits, and the national banks here that now have such deposits are the Second, German and Citizens' and the two Norwood banks.

W. S. Rabbitts Dead

W. S. Rabbitts, cashier of the Springfield National, is dead, following an operation from which he did not revive. The expedient of transfusion of blood was resorted to, his sister, Miss Anna Rabbitts, permitting the surgeons to open a vein and take a pint of blood in the hope of saving him.

Mr. Rabbitts was highly connected, prominent socially and politically.

The Fourth National

Harry W. Benedict, paying teller at the Fourth National of Cincinnati, by his quick intelligence and keen recollection, last week caused the arrest of a young man who is believed by the police to be a clever check worker, wanted in half a dozen other cities in the Middle West.

Banking Notes

A new savings bank is to be organized at Rardon. Winford Munson, of Corinth, Ky., is one of the promoters.

A new bank has been organized at Vaughns-ville.

is vacated steps will be taken to clear the ground so that work on the new structure can be commenced as soon as spring opens, and the company expects to get into its new quarters by next fall. The entire first floor of the building will be occupied by the company for its banking, real estate and insurance business, and the second floor will be arranged for offices for which applications have already been made.

John Schuette Sees a Dark Colored Gentleman in the Aldrich-Vreeland Woodpile

The Aldrich-Vreeland bill will disclose to any one looking sharp that it has "a nigger in the wood pile."

When this bill was under consideration, and even after it was passed, nearly all believed that only the emergency currency which might be issued under it could be secured by United States bonds or other securities, and that the security against the old national bank notes would remain unchanged, so that we would have two kinds of bank notes, the old, secured by United States bonds exclusively, and the new emergency notes, secured by United States bonds or other securities.

"Other securities," as defined in the act, may consist of state, municipal, railroad bonds, or commercial notes.

This then, is the general acceptance of the provisions of the Aldrich-Vreeland act; but now let me explain how it is entirely different.

The leading spirits in securing this legislation realized that the emergency currency, the security of which might be questioned, as it might consist mainly of commercial notes, would not be accepted by the public as quite as safe as the United States bond secured notes, and to make all alike in the eyes of the people, they lowered the security of the old national bank note to the lower level of emergency bank note, and this was accomplished by an amendment to the national bank act, which only required the adding of three words, "or other security," after the words "United States bonds."

Since the passage of the Aldrich-Vreeland act, all national bank notes printed by the government state upon their face, "secured by United States bonds or other securities."

Since then, not a dollar of emergency currency has been issued, while many of the new notes have been issued to banks in exchange for mutilated bills; and such bills, although secured by no other security than United States bonds, state on their face, "secured by United States bonds or other securities"; this really is a deception. I cannot see any reason for this but a bad one, and that is to prepare the way for asset currency.

While an emergency currency act might have been drawn to give some relief in a money stringency, the Aldrich-Vreeland act has actually done harm in that it depreciates all our national currency. Before this act was passed, all knew that the national bank note was secured by United States bonds, exclusively, deposited with the United States Treasurer, as this was plainly printed on their face. But when they now find that this has been changed to read, "secured by United States bonds or other securities" and the line "deposited with the United States Treasurer" left out, it is a serious question whether the people will not lose their unbounded confidence in our currency, as soon as they will get acquainted with the real meaning of the act.

Although some may not be greatly alarmed by this, yet you cannot convince the people that railroad bonds or commercial notes are as safe as United States bonds, especially in a panic. I fear that as soon as the real character of the fact is generally known, and we have a financial crisis, the Gresham law will begin to operate, which means that the depositors will draw gold and hoard it, instead of national bank notes, which would be far more serious.

As this act is deceptive, misleading, and may undermine the confidence in our whole currency, therefore it ought to be repealed at the earliest moment.

Accounts of Merchants, Individuals, Banks, and Bankers Received on Favorable Terms

Philadelphia Banking News

By J. IRVING COOPER

Over $900,000 will be withdrawn from Philadelphia national banks during the next three weeks, as a result of Secretary Cortelyou's call for a return of United States funds held by temporary depositaries. This will reduce the aggregate of such deposits here to $170,000, distributed equally among 17 banks, as each institution is instructed to remit all over $10,000. The three banks in which the government keeps permanent accounts, the Quaker City, Corn Exchange and Merchants', will not be affected by the present call, and will still hold about $1,100,000.

At the last statement to the Comptroller, on November 27th, the local banks held $2,943,066 of United States funds. This sum was reduced by the call issued on January 9th by approximately $662,190, assuming that the payments were made pro rata on a 23.5 per cent basis. The three permanent depositaries still hold about $1,078,700. They will be required, therefore, to pay something like $908,788 into the government treasury on or before February 24th.

Meyer Talks for Postal Bank

Facing an audience of 600 bankers, representing in the aggregate many millions of dollars, Postmaster-General George Von L. Meyer last Friday night declared himself unequivocally in favor of the adoption by the United States government of the postal savings bank system.

In a speech made at the annual banquet of Group One of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association in the Bellevue-Stratford, he went into the details of the system in a plain common sense way, and presented arguments and statistics to disprove the contention of bankers that the postal savings bank would prove to be an injury to the banking business of the country.

That the regular banks instead of being injured would be gainers by the proposed system was the statement of Mr. Meyer, who showed that it would enable persons in isolated places and with small amounts to accumulate accounts which later would seek more remunerative investment. He said the 2 per cent interest which the government would pay depositors could not tempt accounts from the present institutions, which practically all pay 4 per cent on savings deposits.

In conclusion Mr. Meyer said:

"I regret to say that the opposition to postal savings banks, while not numerous, is alert and well organized. Realizing the impossibility of defeating the measure itself if brought to a vote, efforts have been crystallized to obtain a postponement by having the bill referred to the monetary commission, which would probably result in a state of innocuous desuetude for postal savings banks.

"The move to delay the bill is made with the hope that it will be possible at a later time to entirely defeat it. I request you gentlemen to consider the plan seriously and if possible to give your support to the present measure. I believe that by so doing you will be acting in your own best interests."

New Stock Exchange Members

A. J. Drexel Paul, of Drexel & Co., has been elected a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, taking the seat of his father, James W. Paul, Jr., who died a short time ago. Joseph H. Moore has been elected to membership also, assuming the seat of Arthur F. Luke, who retired from the firm of Darr, Luke & Moore, of New York.

The total amount of dividends paid since the incorporation of the company is $2,520,000. During the year the deposits increased from $4,438,087 to $5,307,019. The total amount of trust funds and investments, which are kept separate from the assets of the company, is $17,304,674.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Senator L. O. Thorpe of Willmar has introduced a bill in the Minnesota legislature providing for an inspection of banks in Minnesota apart from the public examiner's office. He gives the examiner eight assistants and $5,000 a year salary. The head of the department must be a practical banker of five years' experience and will have entire charge of the enforcement of state banking laws. The public examiner in Minnesota has had his work increased constantly by addition of new duties, and meanwhile the banks have increased rapidly in number. The examiner is to be appointed by the governor for three years. It is understood that the bill was drafted by C. R. Frost, secretary of the Minnesota Bankers' Association and that it has the approval of the bankers as a whole.

The bill gives a superintendent of banking, deputy and an examiner for each congressional district, the Fourth and Fifth being combined. The district men are to receive $2,500 a year.

President Gross' Views

F. A. Gross, president of the German-American Bank, says of the measure:

"Provision for practical men as examiners, and the requirement for examination twice a year impress me as the most important points of the bill. The stricter and more thorough the examinations the better for the banks and the customers of the banks.

"I am impressed also by the wisdom of the proposition to have the activities of an examiner confined to his own district where he would be most likely to have a personal knowledge of conditions and be best able to judge of the actual worth of collateral he might find in the banks against loans."

Cashier McRae's Views

A. A. McRae, cashier of the South Side State Bank, said: "Four times a year would be none too often for the examiner to come around, in so far as the bankers are concerned, but twice a year as provided in the Thorpe bill, would be a great improvement over the existent condition of things. The state cannot be too critical. Perhaps the greatest merit in the bill is the provision for the appointment only of men of experience under whom an examination would be an examination in fact, and never a duty to be performed in a perfunctory manner."

Minnesota Legislation

Banking legislation in the Minnesota legislature has not been radical thus far. Senator Henry McColl of St. Paul has introduced his bill for the guaranty of bank deposits by the state, similar in tone to the Oklahoma measure. It naturally does not meet with general approval of the bankers. The chairman of the house committee has five banking bills in hand and has called a meeting to be attended by Twin City bankers and bankers from the other centers of the state to discuss the measures. F. E. Gartside has proposed a bill allowing other than mutual savings banks to use the title "savings" bank. W. H. Putnam, the Red Wing banker, has another bill rectifying weaknesses in the Gartside bill by providing for the segregation of the commercial and the savings accounts in such institutions. J. O. Haugland of Montevideo has entered a bill providing for examination of state banks twice a year. J. F. Selb of St. Paul has a bill causing banks to print the first of every year the names of depositors known to be dead and the sums to their credit. It also provides for the publication of deposits of more than seven years' standing with amount and name of depositor. Chester A. Congdon of Duluth, capitalist, has a bill covering surety bonds for county deposits.

The Minneapolis Stock Exchange

The Minneapolis Stock Exchange has been incorporated. Eugene M. Stevens, commercial paper broker, is president, and George B. Lane, another commercial paper man, is one of the promoters of the organization with Mr. Stevens, and is also an incorporator. W. A. Durst, secretary of the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company and George B. Lane, are two of the board of governors composed of three men. E. T. Chapman, of Eugene M. Stevens and company is another incorporator.

J. G. Smith Dead

J. G. Smith, organizer of the First National at St. Cloud, Minn., and with that institution more than forty years, is dead at Los Angeles, Calif. He resigned from the presidency of the bank in 1903. Mr. Smith was a cousin of J. E. Bell of Minneapolis, president of the Hennepin County Savings Bank.

Thomas Lowry Dead

Thomas Lowry, vice-president of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Savings Bank, and one of the incorporators and first trustees of the institution, died February 4th in Minneapolis. Mr. Lowry was president of the Soo line and of the Twin City Rapid Transit company. Joseph Chapman, Jr., of the Northwestern National, says of Mr. Lowry:

"Thomas Lowry was the most useful, the most public spirited and the most loyal citizen of Minneapolis. He has given to the Twin Cities his time and attention at all times. He has done more for Minneapolis than any other man and by his death this city has suffered an irreparable loss."

In New York on Business

Archibald A. Crane, vice-president of the Northwestern National, is in New York on business.

Personal Mention

W. F. Decker, vice-president of the St. Anthony Falls Bank, has been elected president of the Minneapolis Park board. F. E. Kenaston, president of the South Side State Bank, is interested in the American Timber Holding Company, newly organized with $6,000,000 by Twin City capitalists. A. A. McRae, cashier of the South Side State Bank, has been elected vice-president of the American Bank Protection Company, of which G. D. Bartlett, formerly cashier of the Citizen's State of Stanley, Wis., has been elected secretary-treasurer. J. E. Bell, president of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, has been elected president of the Minneapolis Athenaeum. F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, was elected secretary.

An agreement has been entered into between the Home Savings Bank and the Bank of Los Angeles, under which the former bank will take over the deposits and a large part of the assets of the Bank of Los Angeles, and move its banking room into the quarters now occupied by the latter institution at the southwest corner of Fifth and Spring streets. The Bank of Los Angeles will discontinue its banking business, but will maintain its corporate existence for the purpose of closing up that part of its commercial business that cannot be taken over by a savings bank. The capital of the Home Savings Bank will be increased from $200,000 to $500,000, and the number of its board of directors from 11 to 15 or more. R. J. ## Reflecting Local Conditions

The rapidly improving business conditions are being reflected in the increased savings bank deposits in all of the Chicago savings banks. The high record was made just before the severe disturbances in the money market of 1907, followed in natural order by business depression culminating in May of last year. Decreased ability to earn and to save explains the falling off.

Chicago savings deposits aggregated $162,000,000 in the summer of 1907. A year later they footed up $148,200,000. In the difference is plainly written the story of a twelvemonth of comparative industrial depression. The entire loss, however, cannot be ascribed to that cause. The slaughtering of securities, which went on even after the panic became less violent, afforded a great opportunity to pick up bargains in stocks and bonds. It was one of which many savings bank depositors in Chicago and elsewhere took advantage. They now hold securities worth more than they gave for them and paying interest higher than the savings bank rate.

To this extent, then, the wise depositor is better off than before, and mayhap has learned a useful lesson for the future. Everything now points toward better conditions for this year as shown by the fact that there has been a slow but steady gain in deposits since they reached their lowest point in the spring of 1908. During the months of October and November, last year, the savings bank gained $3,200,000. If there were withdrawals by people who were out of work they were more than offset by the deposits of the employed. In Philadelphia, a newspaper as a part of its campaign of education in public and private thrift and saving, offered a bonus of fifty cents for every new savings account opened through its office. There were 35,000 applications in the first two days. This teaches what might be done by a properly directed effort by the American Bankers Association, or, by the Savings Bank Section. Such a campaign would forestall the postal bank by doing away with its chief necessity.

The steel-merger inquiry is being read with great interest by those timid bankers who thought the artificial thunder in October, '07, was a real cyclone. Books are being kept, however, and Wall Street will not have the benefit of a running start next time.

The amateur La Salle Street banker whose wife is suing him for divorce from herself and fortune, actually is going to contest. There are those who believe him small enough to want alimony, but others will want proof of it.

service, for another good man willing to make the same sacrifice for the good of the whole people. The South Parks system is the finest and largest of the kind in the world and only men of high order dare attain to a place on the board.

His wide acquaintance among bankers is helping Robert B. Armstrong materially in the establishment in Chicago of the huge Consolidated Casualty Company, "to write all forms of insurance except life and fire in one office." The competition for state agencies is right keen.

The jumping of W. T. Perkins from an assistant cashiership clear into a vice-presidency came with little astonishment to the wise ones along La Salle Street. He is a real banker and environment cannot conceal the fact.

It is to be hoped that the young men who started out to get needed banking legislation in Illinois will not be deterred by the members of the Perpetual Nonlegislation Committee which has been sitting on the job in this state for twenty years. Call the roll and line up the new blood against the old.

Boston Trust Companies

Earnings of Boston trust companies for 1908 reflect the business depression to a somewhat less extent than do the earnings of the national banks. While earnings of the Boston national banks for 1908 amounted to 12.80 per cent, as compared with 18.1 per cent in 1907, a decrease of 5.29 per cent, earnings of the trust companies for 1908 were 16.93 per cent, as compared with 21.25 per cent the previous year, a decrease of only 4.32 per cent.

Total earnings of the nineteen Boston trust companies for 1908 amounted to $1,939,867, equal to 16.93 per cent on the combined $11,750,000 capital stock. This compares with earnings of $2,359,439, or 21.25 per cent on a combined capital of $11,100,000 in 1907.

The Deutsche Bank

The Deutsche Bank of Berlin has issued tables showing the note circulation and the specie holdings of the Reichsbank, or Bank of Germany, together with the bank's rate of discount during the past ten years. The private discount rate on the Berlin exchange for the past three years is also shown.

The lowest amount of note circulation in the year 1899 was in March, when there was outstanding 1,060,000,000 marks. The highest this year was in June, with 1,793,000,000 marks, an increase during that period of 733,000,000 marks. The lowest specie holding in 1899 was 701,000,000 marks and the highest in 1908 was 1,166,000,000 marks in August, an increase of 465,000,000 marks.

The average discount rate of the Reichsbank for the past ten years was as follows: 1899, 5 per cent; 1900, 5.3 per cent; 1901, 4 per cent; 1902, 3.3 per cent; 1903, 3.8 per cent; 1904, 4.2 per cent; 1905, 3.8 per cent; 1906, 5.1 per cent; 1907, 6 per cent; 1908, 4.7 per cent.

Diagrams showing the price movements during 1906, 1907, and 1908 of sugar, coffee, wool, silver, petroleum, and other articles are also presented, the whole compilation making a useful and interesting reference to those interested in Germany's financial and trade conditions.

The Liberty Center Deposit Bank

On Wednesday occurred the annual election for directors of the Liberty Center (Ind.) Deposit Bank. Of the 250 shares to be voted all but 14 were represented, and the old board consisting of Dr. Garrett, J. C. Raber, J. B. Funk, W. E. Bowman, E. E. Thompson, Thomas Turpin, J. E. Jackson were re-elected. This institution has been in business less than 18 months, and with deposits of $75,000.00 and net earnings of $2,800.00, coupled with the saving of tax for the stockholders is the secret of the fact of the enthusiastic meeting. The fact of the old board being re-elected and of President Garrett and Vice-President Raber receiving the largest number of votes cast, is conclusive evidence that the stockholders are well pleased with the present management of the bank's affairs and do not want any change in said management or officials.

Baltimore Commercial Paper Market

The commercial paper market in Baltimore reflects a good demand by the banks for first-class names, but offerings are extremely small. Merchants apparently have all the accommodation they require for their current small needs, and enough to last them until business throughout the country becomes more active. Instances of borrowing for future requirements are few and far between.

Spokane, Wash., February 11.—Directors of the Traders National of Spokane are to organize a savings bank and trust company as an auxiliary to the parent institution early in April, when it is expected Aaron Kuhn will return from the East. The new company will do a general bond, insurance, mortgage, and commercial paper business, with quarters in the basement of the bank building to be remodeled at a cost of from $50,000 to $75,000. The room is 60 by 60 feet and has daylight on two sides. A large vault will be installed. A. F. MacClaine, vice-president, who had just moved his family from Tacoma, will be manager of the bank during Mr. Kuhn's absence. Mr. Kuhn is accompanied on his Eastern trip by Mrs. Kuhn and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Weil.

Introduces Novel Study

James C. Cunningham, secretary and treasurer of the Union Trust Company of Spokane, and Robert R. Roberson, and Walker L. Bean, real estate brokers, have introduced a novel study as part of the curriculum at the Young Men's Christian Association in a course of lectures on real estate and allied subjects. Sixteen lectures will be given by prominent dealers and investors, among them being W. S. McCrea, president of the Washington Safe Deposit and Trust Company; F. A. Chase, president Spokane Building and Loan Society; Aubrey Lee White, president City Park Commission; Jay Lawyer, president Western Trust and Investment Company; James C. Cunningham, and Harry A. Flood, president Trustee Company of Spokane. Legal questions will be discussed by W. F. Meier and Charles F. Cowan, other subjects being assigned to W. S. Yearsley, J. R. Dunphy, H. J. Neely, Gordon C. Corbaley, F. E. Elmendorf, and Walker L. Bean.

Spokane Bank Clearings

Thirty-four per cent was the increase in bank clearings in Spokane during January over the same month a year ago. The totals are: $28,890,858 and $21,526,627, respectively. For the week ended January 30th the clearings are, $5,557,990, as against $3,957,058 for the corresponding week last year, a gain of $1,600,932 which is 40 per cent. The expenditures in building operations for which permits were issued, showed gains of 147 per cent in January over the same month in 1908. The totals are $275,160 and $110,607, respectively. There was a falling off in the number of permits—101 as against 132 a year ago.

Announces Speakers

R. Insinger, manager of the Hypotheekbank of Spokane, and chairman of the local board of control of the 17th National Irrigation Congress, which will meet in Spokane, August 9th to 14th, has received advices from New York that W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central, and Frank C. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, will be among the visitors in Spokane during the convention. Others recently placed on the program are: James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern Railway Company; Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, and Albert B. Cummins, United States senator of Iowa. Albert J. Earling, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, will also attend. N. W. Harris of Chicago, and other prominent bankers in the United States and Canada have been invited to be present.

No Bank to Assist County Officers

Hugh C. Todd, a representative from Whitman County, south of Spokane, has prepared a measure to be presented to the legislature, now in session which provides that no bank shall assist county officers in securing bonds, or financing the campaigns of candidates for office. It is reported there are some banks in the state which go on the bonds of elected county officers on condition of placing the county funds in their keeping. Other banks have been in the habit of financing the campaign of candidates for office. If the contest is close they assume the expenses of both candidates. No matter which wins, they secure the large county deposits because of their assistance. This practice is condemned by Mr. Todd, who seeks to abolish it by legislation.

Banking Notes

Miles C. Moore, president of the Baker-Boyer National, at Walla Walla, the oldest national institution in Washington, announces that many improvements are planned to make its quarters the finest and most commodious in that city. There will be tile floors, marble and bronze fixtures and hardwood trimmings. The Baker Loan and Investment Company will move to its own building, giving the bank more room. The bank was organized by D. S. Baker and J. F. Boyer, pioneer merchants, in 1869, and later turned over to Mr. Moore and his associates. The founders are dead.

Deer Park Bank has been organized at Deer Park, Wash., with a capital of $25,000, and the following officers: President, A. J. Peters, vice-president, Allan Haynes; cashier, L. P. Nelson; assistant cashier, R. R. Grove; secretary, W. H. Short. This is the first of a chain of banks to be established at Deer Park, Valley, Marcus, and Bossburg, Wash., and the capital will be increased.

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

The Real Estate Department of a Metropolitan Trust Company

By R. L. Blount of the American Trust and Savings Bank, before the Chicago Chapter

Because of its reality, stability, and universal necessity, real estate has always been a favorite possession: nations have waged bloody wars for it; horses have rolled on it, hens scratched in it, and most of the big, and nearly all of the stable fortunes of the world are largely made up of it. Because it can always be found and cannot be easily moved out of the state, it has to bear about 75 per cent of the total burden of taxation, and for the reason that it is stable and solid, and slow of movement, yet sure, it is heartily condemned by many who own it, and as eagerly desired by those who do not, and withal, the possession of it sobers a man, makes a better citizen of him, a kindlier neighbor, and a truer friend; teaches thrift, and instills a sense of responsibility, which are all good failings for men to be afflicted with.

In Chicago, at least, trust companies and banks do not as a rule make an effort to secure the management of real estate in the capacity of agent, but confine their zones of usefulness primarily to acting as trustee by authority of wills or court decrees, as conservator of insane persons, or those incapable from any reason of attending to their own affairs, as receiver of the property of bankrupts, or under foreclosures, or as guardian of minors and in other capacities of similar nature, and to the making of loans with it is security for the benefit of trust funds, or to invest a portion of savings deposits. Some state banks maintain also, very lucrative adjuncts called mortgage loan departments, through which loans are made upon real estate security, for an honorarium, and the paper sold to mortgage investors throughout the country.

In performing its duties as trustee, conservator, or otherwise the trust company buys and sells under order of court, or otherwise, as the case may be, rents the property at highest prices to the best tenants, collects and distributes the net rents, or returns to the owning estates, and sees that its charge is kept insured and in good repair. For this work it is allowed to retain a fee, one of its most important and closely supervised duties.

The modern system of renting comprehends the landlord making all repairs, cleaning, decorating, etc., thus relieving the tenant of all responsibility and care in the matter, with the result that the latter often seems to feel that he may go ahead with all the waste that he chooses for "is he not paying rent for the flat, and does not the landlord have to pay for the decorating?" Every bank clerk knows that any investment must pay a net return above expenses or it would be a poor proposition, and this being true, and if the landowner's property be profitable, then the tenant really pays for all these fancy and useless repairs himself through the medium of higher rentals.

In my opinion this system is wrong, and especially so among people of ordinary means; it breeds extravagance and waste which is bound to be the case where one man spends or causes to be spent, the money of another, to say nothing of the loss of peace of mind by both tenants and landlords, brought about by wrangling over extravagant repairs.

And to my way of thinking there are some serious moral questions involved in this matter of waste, but morals being left largely for Sunday thought, and Sunday being a day of rest and foot and baseball games, I will simply suggest that tenants may possibly lower rents and save tempers by adopting the simple expedient of leasing quarters for terms of three or five years, on a rental basis which comprehends the tenant making all repairs. It is truly amazing how clean one may keep the walls in a house when he knows that he will have to foot the cleaning bills out of his own pocket.

For the man smart enough to manage his own business (and I advocate endowment life insurance for him who isn't) and who wants to invest safely without buying real estate outright, I know of no place where his money can so safely be placed as in a real estate loan on improved city property or good farm lands.

Because of long association with land and buildings, due to the circumstance of birth and bringing up, most people are more or less familiar with their values, and any one shrewd enough to have saved up a thousand dollars in these times of high living, should be able to make a reasonably close guess as to the worth of a story and a half cottage which might be offered as a pledge for the loan. The same could not be said were the average man trying to arrive at value of a railroad or telephone plant as the basis of a bond issue, a part of which he desires to purchase. Then again the security for a real estate mortgage may be easily examined at any time and kept under close surveillance during the period of the risk. I believe that it was Mr. Ryan of New York who recently testified that only about 5 per cent of the stock of a railroad represented cost value. In other words the issue of bonds practically builds the roads and equips them. So long as the railroad tariffs are high enough to permit of immense dividends being paid on a lot of water, and the stock thereby return interest on valuations of from $150 to $500 per share the bond is doubtless a good investment.

It is customary to loan no more than 60 per cent of the value of real estate improved with new buildings, and not to exceed 40 to 50 per cent on old property, value being understood to mean as near the cost price of the improvement plus the worth of the land, the whole tempered by net rents, depreciation, location, cost of reproduction, etc., as possible.

Now suppose the worst comes to pass and it seems necessary to foreclose. What then? In the case of real estate the investor has to consult nobody, attend no bondholders' meetings, or yield to the desires of majorities, but becomes at once the sole owner of the security and may sell it or keep it as he pleases. In short, real estate security is a simple compact, universal pledge yielding a nonfluctuating investment, easily understood in its common forms by the "widows and orphans" and new-weds, is hoary with age and respectability, and produces the best net return of any investment of the same security class.

It has some defects of course. The principal ones are that the paper cannot always be sold readily should its possessor desire to turn his property into ready cash quickly; nor is it quite equal to government bonds as collateral at national banks although there seems to be little trouble in this respect. It is worth mentioning though that during the recent Wall Street panic good mortgages were readily salable at discounts of less than 10 per cent and that cannot be said of certain other securities.

It would be rather hard to determine, but I am of the opinion that if the amount of money put into the purchase of bonds in Chicago, for purely investment purposes could be compared with the investment in real estate mortgages, it would be found that mortgages would carry off the palm. At all events an average of something like $6,000,000 of money per week is put into mortgages in Chicago, all pure investments.

If the purchaser of mortgages secures them from a good bank or reputable mortgage firm, the interest will be collected and promptly remitted, the payment of taxes looked after, insurance obtained and all details attended to with the same fidelity that is shown in caring for the most approved bond, and all without expense to the investor.

The modern mortgage, as distinguished from a trust deed, is an instrument in writing under seal, by the use of which the title to the security is conveyed directly to the creditor to secure the payment of the mortgagor's note or notes. For several reasons there are objections to this method of binding the security; one is that each time the paper is sold an instrument showing such transfer must be recorded; another, that there are often complications if the creditor be dead when it comes time to pay off the debt and secure a reconveyance; both of which encumber the title unnecessarily, cause the borrower useless extra abstract bills and delays the transaction.

In many states and particularly in Illinois, the more pliable trust deed is used. This also is an instrument of writing under seal, by the use of which title is conveyed to a third party, called a trustee, often a corporation, or if a private individual, then two or three successors in trust are named in the deed who will act in case of the death or incapacity to act for any reason of the trustee. The trustee holds title for all parties interested until the conditions named in the deed of trust are fulfilled, whereupon he reconveys the title to the proper owner by means of a release deed. By using a trust deed and making the principal note secured thereby, and the interest coupons usually attached, payable to makers and endorsed by him, they become as negotiable as unregistered stocks. The trust deed smooths all the sharp corners of the mortgage very nicely. But so far as security is concerned the mortgage and the trust deed are equally binding upon the land.

It is customary to deliver to the purchaser of a loan the following papers, and he should insist upon having them: the trust deed, or mortgage, the principal note or notes secured thereby with interest coupons attached if such are used, the policy of insurance, and the lawyer's examination or opinion of title, or better yet a guaranty of title issued by one of the title and trust companies, either of which is the proof that the borrower had a good and merchantable title to his property at the time the loan was made, and that the latter is a first lien. If a lawyer's opinion of title is used, a merchantable abstract of title made by a reputable company should accompany it.

It is just as easy to forge trust deeds, mortgages, or Torrens certificates, as government money, so it is well to deal with reputable firms at all times.

When considering real estate as security for loans of money let us eliminate from the list all factories, warehouses, mills, churches, places of outdoor amusement, apartment buildings containing more than twelve flats if steam heated, livery stables, greenhouses, manufactories, road houses, dwellings built on less than 25 feet of land or on shallow lots, or dwellings or other residence property erected on land near to saloons or other objectionable property. Such property is often hard to sell and yields little or no income during periods of business depression. Avoid also, buildings containing extremely high priced apartments and private residences valued at more than $25,000. Unimproved property is not very desirable as security for loans, and if considered at all not over 25 per cent of its value should be loaned. On the other hand there is nothing better in the way of real estate security than the ordinary brick buildings containing two flats. Next comes the low priced six, seven, or eight room brick dwellings; such property is always salable and the shrinkage in its value during the period of a loan is practically nothing. Then in order of desirability comes the brick three flat building, those of four, six, and eight flats, inexpensive frame cottages and residences if new, one-story brick structures occupied as stores if particularly well located, unheated buildings containing small flats, two story brick structures containing stores and stove heated offices or flats. Great care should always be exercised when loaning on any class of outside business property. Stores located near stations on the elevated roads or railroad stations, or at section, or half section corners where street car lines intersect—"transfer corners" as we real estate men call them—are usually well rented at all times through good and bad seasons, especially if the neighborhood be well built up with flat buildings.

Having made a selection of the kind of building that is to form part of the security, let us now look into the matter of location, for this is as important as the improvement, often even more so. It readily will be understood that a residential building designed to rent for a hundred dollars per month per flat, should not be erected in a cheap Ghetto district, and vice versa. And it will easily be appreciated that, regardless of cost of construction, a fine improvement in a cheap locality will have no greater value as a general thing than a cheaper building erected for the special purpose of accommodating the demands of that particular neighborhood for the simple reason that people who can pay rents high enough to make the former pay, will not choose to live in the cheaper district. In this connection I want to mention a peculiar thing that seems to affect owners of land exclusively in regard to the view of the value of their real estate. Almost every possessor of this class of the world's goods estimates it to be worth what it cost him, plus a certain amount of enhanced value each year. One has but to cast an eye about when traveling from place to place in the city to see quantities of property mostly vacant, being held while the owners dream of some day realizing a profit above cost and carrying expenses, never seeming to realize that it can be possible that its original cost may have been too great. It is truthfully said that all land in the world is steadily improving in value; that there is just so much land while the population of the world is steadily increasing. The rise in land value, due to the increase in population of the world, is more or less regular, steady, and certain, but almost too slight to be measured.

There is also what is called "speculative value" which in reality is no value at all but is in the nature of a gamble that a given property will bring to its owner certain unearned increment owing to its proximity to a sandbaggable railroad or other corporation, or which may lie in the seeming path of a growing town or section thereof, or be wanted for a public park.

But from the standpoint of the man who makes loans, property has value because of its income alone, for without going into a long discussion of the subject it is a fact that the value of real estate comes directly or indirectly wholly from its income or possible income, therefore if a man make an error by erecting a building not suited for the purpose for which it was built, or too good, or too poor for the neighborhood, or with rooms too dark or too small, its value at once depreciates in direct proportion as its net income. Residence property, and especially flats should be located near to good transportation—there is something about the atmosphere of flats that makes those who occupy them very unfamiliar with work, especially with walking—and in good residence sections.

At one time in the history of Chicago its best residence district was in the vicinity of Canal and Twelfth streets. At a later period parts of Wabash and Michigan avenues north of 12th Street on the South side, Illinois and neighboring streets on the North side, and the vicinity of Halsted Street on the West side were good; every year this circle has been steadily widening. Twenty years ago when I first came to Chicago, the best moderate priced property for residence use on the South side lay north of 43d Street, Ashland Avenue, and east on the West side, and South of Lincoln Park on the North side, while now it is miles further from the center of the city on all sides. The former sections have degenerated into boarding and rooming houses of cheap character, cheap stores, small factories, shops and "bad lands." Twenty years ago vacant land in these sections was worth and sold for prices ranging from $125 to $250 per front foot; to-day the same property goes begging at $50 and $60 per foot.

From this we would judge that the best residence property on which to make loans is that which is located a little farther from the center of the city than a point midway between the pioneer new buildings on the extreme outer edge on the one hand, and the boarding house district on the other, with leanings toward the former. TRANSACTS A GENERAL DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY BUSINESS should always bear in mind that a real estate loan runs usually for a period of from three to five years, and an effort must be made by the appraiser to forecast what will be the value of the property and the character of the locality when the paper matures and make his loan accordingly.

The reasons for the change in the character of locations and therefore in prices are many. Chief among them perhaps is transportation. In the days of the horsecar it was a matter of an hour's ride from the center of the city to Cottage Grove Avenue and 35th Street, and that is about as great a length of time as the ordinary business man is willing to devote to reaching his place of business, hence 35th Street was the limit of first class residence property in that direction save along the railroads. As far back as war times I believe there were settlements more or less thriving on the Illinois Central at 43d, 47th, South and Hyde Park stations, and at Englewood on the Rock Island too for all I know. In 1880, or about that time the cable, a wonderful thing for the period, was put in operation and one could ride as far as 39th Street on the South side in 40 minutes for the same price, and so property adjacent to the cables was rapidly improved, and building lots rose in value.

In 1892 came two of the most important improvements in transportation to date, the elevated road and electric surface lines.

These radical improvements in the transportation field opened up large tracts on all three sides of the city. Because of the slow means of conveyance from place to place in the days of the horsecar, the land convenient to the center of the city became congested and valuable, and had the growth of population kept pace with the increase of the area of the desirable residence land it would have steadily continued to increase no doubt, but such proved not to be the case. The vast tracts of land brought near to the business part of the city by the rapid transportation lines were too great to be filled up by the growth of the city. Subdivisions were laid out and therein the people found new and better houses, newly paved streets, new parks, new schools, fresher air, less dirt and soot and noise, and because of the desirability of the land in the new locations, people newly come to town, the recently married, the ordinary house buyers, and many of the old residents naturally and wisely went to the pioneer districts, with a resulting lessening demand for the older properties and corresponding depreciation of the value of the land.

Second only to transportation in its effect on values is the revolutionary change that has come with the adoption of the so-called "flat" building. One may wander around in the sections built up during the days of the horse car's supremacy and find nothing but one-family dwellings occupying 25 or 50 feet each. But shortly before the great world's fair some long sighted and woolly headed individual straying down East discovered the unhealthy, child prohibiting, vermin infested, architecturally hideous, lazy man's roosting place called a "flat" building when located in cheap districts, and an "apartment house" on Drexel Boulevard and the Lake Shore Drive. Having the same sort of hallucination as that which affected the minds of the people who imported Canada thistles and English sparrows for the improvement of the condition of his fellow men, he transplanted this house monstrosity idea to the limitless prairies of Chicago, and its descendants have waxed many and strong.

The advent of this type of building has had a great effect upon the city in many ways, and if it has not caused a lowering in the value of real estate it certainly has effectually prevented an increase. In place of 25 feet of ground being occupied by one family with some grass and weeds and flowers in the door yard, and some trifle of responsibility about the house, we find from three to ten households stacked up one above the other like layer cake, in cramped quarters, often dark, and always undesirable from the standpoint of true family life, all on the same sized plot of ground.

However the loan man has to take conditions as he finds them and the best property on which to loan then is that which is near to good transportation, in portions of the city where the surrounding structures are new and the construction of buildings going on, and which is convenient to churches, schools, and the home of the juicy beef steak. It must be remembered that as a rule, residence land improves little if any once a good residence or flat has been built upon it and that the improvement begins to depreciate more or less from the day it is finished, therefore the amount of the original loan should be reduced at the end of ten years at the farthest and better at the end of five provided it was a "full" loan at start.

Many will condemn the investment of money in any form of real estate whatever and particularly in the purchase of it. Upon inquiry into the reasons of the objections however, it usually will be found that such individuals have entered into some foolish real estate deal during which their fingers have been burned, and that if the money had been used in any other enterprise with equal lack of business sagacity failure would have followed just as certainly. We may safely assume then that, in order to properly and safely place money in real estate either as a purchase or to make a loan, at least a modicum of the ability and caution used in other lines of business activity must be manifested.

Real estate is a good thing to own always provided the buyer of it uses business discretion in selecting his purchase. The most substantial fortunes in Chicago have it for a foundation, and many of our most farsighted and successful business men deliberately invest a large part of the surplus or profits of their business in it. Such large investments are however, unfortunately not within the means of the most of us for the good reason that we lack the "profits and surplus" necessary, but even so, there is no class of property that can be had on such easy terms. Small frame cottages and two flat brick buildings can be purchased for trifling payments down, and the rent money will help to pay the balance, and when a man has so invested he usually joins the local improvement association, learns what it means to pay taxes for the support of his country and the police department, thinks twice before voting for extravagant bond issues and the tearing down of new court houses and city halls in order to erect new ones, and brings up a family who have respect for property, their own and other peoples, and who usually develop into sound and useful citizens.

I have said nothing whatever about downtown property, my article dealing wholly with residence real estate. Down town property is a subject by itself. There is so little of it and the reasons for its value are so patent that it is not hard for those who deal in it to understand it. Property within the "loop" has become very valuable and is growing more so from one principal cause besides which all other reasons sink into insignificance, i. e., dense population, or rather facilities for the concentration of a great many people in one place during the day. Every main trunk line street car line, every elevated railway line and every suburban railroad line deposits its passengers within a space little more than a mile square in the down town district; and one may travel from Evanston on the North, Harlem on the West, or 79th Street on the South, to the center of the city for the small sum of five cents. Wherever a crowd can be gathered business can be done; business means value to property, and nowhere else on the globe perhaps are people with money to spend so beautifully and expeditiously deposited at a place in which to spend it as in Chicago. It is no wonder that I, a Samuel M. Kennard and Sam C. Davis were elected vice-presidents of the Commonwealth Trust Company of St. Louis last week at the annual meeting. The new vice-presidents take the places of L. B. Tebbetts and W. L. McDonald, who relinquished their places to concentrate their efforts upon the National Bank of Commerce. The officers of the Commonwealth are now: President, A. N. Edwards; vice-presidents, Tom Randolph, Edward Hidden, W. C. Fordyce, Henry Koehler, Jr., Thomas W. Crouch, Samuel M. Kennard and Sam C. Davis; secretary, J. M. Woods; treasurer, L. S. Mitchell; assistant secretary, A. G. Douglass. M. F. Baird was chosen as an additional assistant secretary. The company also declared its regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent.

The men chosen officers of the Commonwealth are both well known St. Louisans. Samuel M. Kennard is president of the J. Kennard & Sons Carpet Company and has financial relations of a high order in St. Louis. Sam C. Davis is one of three sons of the late John T. Davis. Dwight Davis and John Davis are the others. He is prominent in social and club life as well as in business, having achieved distinction as a polo player. The wealth of the family makes the new official an acquisition to the Commonwealth.

The St. Louis Money Market

Money in St. Louis continues very plentiful but the demand is rather feeble, especially from strictly commercial sources. There is some inquiry for demand money but at terms not very inviting to the banks. Collections, both local and country, are reported as being fairly satisfactory only. Rates range between 4 and 5½ per cent.

Defy Oklahoma Laws

Declaring they will not comply with the constitutional provision requiring all foreign corporations that operate in Oklahoma to file a list of stockholders and officers, and the amount of stock held by each, with the state corporation commission, and maintaining that state insurance commissioner T. J. McComb is insisting on foreign insurance companies complying with this provision, the big insurance companies are planning a general withdrawal from this state, and some of them have already notified their Oklahoma agents to cease writing business. The insurance companies are also protesting against the Roddie insurance bill, providing a code for the state insurance commissioner, claiming it places the business of the insurance men in the power of the commissioner.

First National of Fort Scott

The First National of Fort Scott, Kan., known as the Grant Hornaday banking house, opened Tuesday for payment of first dividend. All told, a sum of $160,000, or 35 per cent of the claims proved before January 20th, will be paid. The bank was closed November 20th.

Receiver John Watts received last night signed vouchers from the Comptroller of the Currency and ordered the bank opened for payment. The crowd at the bank at 9 o'clock was not overly large. There was no demonstration. Negotiations for the purchase of the bank are off.

Fifth District, T. B. A., Meeting

The Fifth District, Texas Bankers Association, held its annual meeting Wednesday at Dallas at the Public Library Auditorium. The following was the program presented:

Call to order—Invocation, Rev. Geo. W. Truett; address of welcome (on behalf of City of Dallas) Hon. S. J. Hay, mayor; address of welcome (on behalf of bankers) Nelson Phillips; response, Henry W. Williams, Greenville; address, "Some Thoughts on Bank Advertising," D. W. Sweeney, Banham; address, "The Banker's Obligation to the Public," Karl L. ### Texas Law is Observed

Reports to the Texas state department of insurance show that twenty-five of the thirty-five life insurance companies which transacted business in Texas during the year 1908 complied with the requirements of the new securities investment law and that they invested in Texas real estate mortgages during the year 1908, $1,728,593, and made loans to their policy holders during that year amounting to $273,000.

Since the law took effect July 12, 1907, the same companies have invested in Texas real estate mortgages $1,356,417, and in other Texas securities, mostly municipal bonds, $145,209. Their total Texas investments since the law took effect amount to $2,048,980. They have made loans to their policy holders since the law took effect amounting to $373,177.

Texas State Depositaries

The Texas state depositary board, composed of the attorney-general, comptroller and state treasurer, met this week, opened bids and awarded the contracts with banks in the state to act as state depositaries of the state funds, in accordance with the state depositary law.

Kansas Bankers vs. Guaranty Measure

J. W. Berryman, chairman of the legislation committee of the Kansas Bankers Association, is sending out a letter to all state banks in Kansas urging the bankers to send telegrams and letters to the representatives and senators from their districts to defeat the administration bank deposit guaranty bill.

The letter is quite long and says that while the bill as drawn has many good features it has one especially objectionable section, that providing for the guaranteeing of interest bearing deposits. The letter says that the inclusion of interest bearing deposits in the guaranty plan is wrong and regarded by many bankers as vicious and dangerous, leaving the doors open for reckless and unsafe bankers, as it would permit them to buy business and demoralize the safe and conservative banker.

The banking committees of the house and senate will have a joint meeting Wednesday evening and the letter expresses the hope that every banker who is opposed to guaranteeing interest bearing deposits will telegraph his senator and representative to this effect at once and then be present at this meeting to personally urge the defeat of this section.

Kansas City Real Estate Outlook

Real estate men in Kansas City, Kan., say that the prospects for active business there are now the brightest in the city's history.

The Citizens State Bank

The capital of the Citizens State Bank of McLean, Tex., has been increased from $10,000 to $15,000.

The San Angelo Bank and Trust Company

A new bank building is to be erected for the San Angelo (Tex.) Bank and Trust Company.

New York Banking News

For the purpose of carrying out the merger and to enable stockholders to subscribe to the stock of the new institution at 150, a dividend of 37½ per cent on the capital stock was declared.

The new institution will be known as the National Reserve Bank. A meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated National has been called for February 18th, also to ratify the merger.

Business will be begun by the new bank as soon thereafter as possible, probably on February 20th, in the old quarters of the Oriental Bank, or in the City Investment Building.

All the facts are presented in calendar form. The calendar is issued by the Financial Calendar Company of 25 West Broadway, New York.

"And whereas the railroad company by resolution of the board of directors ordered and directed that the principal amount of said bonds at any time outstanding should not exceed $110,000,000, provided, however, that in the event that the railroad franchise rights and property of the Indianapolis Southern Railroad Company should by supplemental mortgage be brought under this indenture as herein provided, an additional $10,000,000 principal amount of bonds should be issued hereunder, making the total amount which may be secured hereby and by such supplemental mortgage $120,000,000."

Of the total amount $61,766,000 is reserved to retire an equal amount of prior lien bonds.

The National Surety Company

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the National Surety Company the capital stock of the company was increased from $500,000 to $750,000. The directors have authorized the distribution of the new stock to the stockholders at the rate of one share for every two shares of stock now held.

The New Amsterdam National

New Bond House

Theodore B. Morris, who has been for over twenty years associated with the old established banking house of Blake Bros. & Co., has formed a partnership with Edward P. Holden, Jr., son of Edward P. Holden, cashier of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and grandson of James A. Webb, the well known merchant and financier. The new firm of Morris & Holden, which enjoys strong financial backing, will conduct the business of bankers, dealing in high grade bonds, commercial paper, and collateral loans, with offices in the United States Trust Company Building, 45 Wall Street. Mr. Morris has a very large acquaintance with banking and business men in New York and throughout the country.

The Hudson Trust Company

The Hudson Trust Company of New York will move from its present quarters, 147 West 42d Street, into the Metropolitan Opera House, in the place formerly occupied by the New Amsterdam National.

Private Banking Houses

Some of the more prominent New York Italian and other foreign bankers and steamship agents, when questioned said, they would welcome the passage of some state law that would effectively control and regulate private banking houses. While not committing themselves to the bill introduced by Assemblyman Foley on Thursday, they were of the opinion that some legislation in that direction is necessary.

Representative Barnhart Receiving Requests

Representative Barnhart is receiving requests from South Bend bankers and other bankers in his district asking him to vote against the postal savings bank bill, unless it is amended so as to provide that other banks besides national banks can be made depositaries for postal funds.

W. C. Bretz succeeds W. E. Gassaway as cashier of the First National of Huntington, Ind.

A SIX THAT IS A SIX

"I have been driving a six for three months, and I cannot see that it is better than our four."

This statement was made to us at the New York show by a salesman for a company that makes both fours and sixes.

In less than an hour that young man had been shown. He was shown a self-starting, sweet-running car, such as he had never seen before. He was shown flexibility that opened his eyes, and a hill-climbing performance that caused him to sit up and declare:

"Well, it must be that we don't know how to make sixes, and that the Winton Company does know how."

And that, very likely, is the real answer.

Some people can make a very good looking flying machine, but unfortunately the thing won't fly.

Most anybody can put six cylinders together and call the result a "six," but unfortunately it may not do the beautiful things that the advertising says it will.

Perhaps that's why some producers of both fours and sixes would much rather have you buy a four and ask no questions about their "six."

But—and note this statement—the Winton Company hasn't made a four-cylinder car since June, 1907. That is because the

WINTON SIX

so far excels four-cylinder cars that we would feel guilty were we to try to sell fours against our own knowledge and conviction that the Six is infinitely the better car.

We are not hedging between fours and sixes, hoping to get you "coming or going." We stand for sixes and sixes only. We make sixes exclusively. We have the strongest confidence in the Winton Six, because we know how wonderfully good it is.

Of course, if you won't be shown, we cannot do business with you. But if you are open-minded, if you want the best there is, it will take but very few minutes to make you as enthusiastic over the real merit of a real six as we are, as enthusiastic as Winton Six owners are; and they, we venture to say, are the happiest motor car owners in America.

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

The resolution for a constitutional amendment to permit the state to incur a funded indebtedness was presented by Senator Brazeau in the senate. This plan to allow the state to raise money by loans upon state bonds or certificates of indebtedness has been under consideration for many years and the adoption of such an amendment is said to be absolutely necessary if plans for the development of the state are to be carried out.

Under the constitutional limitation fixed by the constitutional convention sitting sixty years ago, the state is prohibited from incurring any indebtedness of any character in excess of $100,000.

The resolution of Mr. Brazeau simply changes the section of the constitution in which this limitation is included, so as to permit loans by the state to the extent of 1 per cent of the assessed valuation of the state. That valuation at the present time is $2,479,561,780, so that if the constitutional amendment of Mr. Brazeau is finally adopted, state loans may be contracted to the amount, in round figures, of $25,000,000. Under the terms of the Brazeau resolution state bonds may be issued for a term of fifty years.

He states that every effort will be made to avoid delays in revising the schedules and passing the new law. He says the house of representatives will be able to perform its part of the work quickly but that in the senate there may be delay on account of the unlimited debate allowed. He says it is certain there will be no filibuster. Mr. Davidson speaks of the rivers and harbors bill passed by the committee of which he is a member and says it includes a proposed harbor at High Cliff on the east shore of Lake Winnebago.

In and Around Pittsburgh By LATIMER T. LAWTON

Attorney-General Todd is preparing a bill which will give the State Banking Department authority in the case of insolvent state banks and trust companies similar to that exercised by the Federal Comptroller of the Currency with regard to national banks. The bill is to give the State Banking Commissioner the exclusive right to suggest to the courts the names of persons to be appointed receivers. This is to take out of the hands of persons interested in the bank management of one of their own number as receiver before the banking department is aware of conditions. This bill is the result of a recent experience in Philadelphia, where the banking department was defeated in an effort to have the courts appoint the receiver recommended by the state instead of the choice of the bank officials.

"The Business Monthly"

The First National of Pittsburgh has issued the February number of its magazine, "The Business Monthly." Its articles pertaining to the banking and industrial interests of this community are always of interest to investors, and the present number is no exception. One article details the important part taken by a former officer of the institution, John D. Scully, in securing the enactment of the national banking law of 1863.

Bankers Ad Association Elect Officers

The newly elected board of the Bankers Ad Association of Pittsburgh met last week at the banking rooms of the Real Estate Trust Company and elected the following officers for the year: President, Edwin B. Wilson, advertising manager of the Real Estate Trust Company; first vice-president, W. H. Siviter, advertising manager First National of Pittsburgh; second vice-president, Paul C. Dunlevy, treasurer East End Savings and Trust Company; secretary-treasurer, George K. Reed, advertising manager Colonial Trust Company. The 1909 board is Alexander Dunbar, secretary Guarantee Title and Trust Company; H. S. Hershberger, vice-president West End Savings Bank and Trust Company; A. D. Sallee, advertising and sales manager J. S. & W. S.

Kuhn; Charles E. Schuetz, cashier Western Savings and Deposit Bank; J. F. W. Eversmann, cashier German National; P. C. Dunlevy, W. H. Siviter, George K. Reed and Edwin B. Wilson.

The January Banker

The January number of the Banker, Published by the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, is at hand. As usual, it contains financial tables of interest, including the reports of the state banks and trust companies under the call of the State Banking Commissioner November 27th. There is also interesting financial comment covering the period since the last issue.

New Bank for Olyphant

A new bank has been organized at Olyphant, Pa., with a capital stock of $100,000. James F. Jordan, Daniel G. Jones, James J. O'Malley, W. J. Frees, J. B. Cummings and others are promoters. Geo. F. Stuckhart will be cashier of the institution.

First National of Washington

Andrew M. Linn has been chosen president; J. A. Ray, vice-president; Joseph C. Baird, cashier, and Joseph Zelt, assistant cashier of the First National of Washington, Pa.

The Pennsylvania Proceedings

The Proceedings of the fourteenth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, held at Bedford Springs, September 8th and 9th, is out in book form. It is one of the handsomest volumes ever gotten out by a state association; most of the portraits being black and white with colored framings. R. J. Stoney, Jr., of Pittsburgh, of the Committee on Publication, is to be congratulated on the make-up.

A portrait of Eli S. Reinhold, president of the association, forms the frontispiece, and pictures of the other officers, former presidents, views of the Bedford Springs Hotel, reproductions of the banquet menu, etc., illustrate the volume in attractive style. Besides the proceedings, the book also contains an account of the social features, the attendance, historical data and constitution, etc., and a group directory and list of members.

Two Banks Move to Lewis Block

The work of removing the buildings along Smithfield Street, between Oliver Avenue and Sixth Avenue, has reached the point where tenants are leaving until the Oliver Building is completed. The Western Savings and Deposit Bank has moved to the Lewis Block and the Lincoln National will move to Smithfield and Liberty, where it will remain until its quarters in the new building are ready for occupancy.

Trust Company Sues Exchange

The Pittsburgh Stock Exchange is made defendant in a suit brought by the Fidelity Title & Trust Company for $3,503.70.

The trust company is the administrator of the estate of James S. McKelvey, who was a member of the exchange. According to the rule, obligations incurred by a member through transactions on the floor of the exchange must be met by the sale of the member's seat if they cannot be settled in any other way. When Mr. McKelvey died he was indebted to H. M. Hooker & Co. for $127.50, and to Robert C. Hall for $4,500.

The seat was sold for $3,650, and the money was used to pay the claims of both creditors. The trust company claims the exchange only had the right to settle the claim of Hooker & Co.

The Allegheny National Bank Building

The Allegheny National Bank Building on Fifth Avenue, near Wood Street, will be sold within a few days for $300,000.

It was learned definitely that the deal for the transfer of the property is practically completed, the first payment by the purchaser being, it is said, the only step necessary to make it effective. While the identity of the buyer is not positively known, it is believed that a business man or firm having interests in the vicinity of the old structure is a party to the transaction.

Bank Changes its Name

It is reported that the Bankers Trust Co. of Chester, Va., has changed its name to the Farmers Loan & Trust Bank.

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, February 11.—Iowa bankers for the most part are in favor of a bill which has been introduced in the Iowa legislature by Representative Fred Hunter of Polk County, providing for an increase in number of state bank examiners from three to twelve. Under the Iowa statute, the cost of state bank inspection falls upon the banks which pay from $10 to $30 apiece according to capitalization. The Hunter bill will increase this amount perhaps threefold in each case so that the fund will be sufficient to pay for the increased cost of inspection. The bill also provides for a more thorough inspection of banks than at present.

Recent Interviews with Bankers

"From interviews I have had with bankers, I do not believe there will be any serious opposition to the Hunter measure from Iowa bankers," said G. E. MacKinnon, of the Mechanics Savings. "For myself I would rather see the number doubled and the salary raised from $1,800 as it now stands to a figure which would make the position more desirable. Our bank examiners in Iowa are thoroughly capable men but they are entitled to at least double the salaries they now get."

Another Bank Guaranty Measure

Another bank guaranty measure has been sprung in the Iowa legislature. This one comes from a republican, Representative Darrah, of Lucas County. Heretofore these bills have been from democratic sources. Mr. Darrah has some novel ideas in his bill and he says he has had it favorably commented upon by many bankers. It provides that when ten or more banks, whose capital must total $500,000 desire to take advantage of state guaranty they shall so notify the auditor of state. The governor shall thereupon name a board of bank commissioners of three men, who must be either actively engaged in banking or financially interested therein. They are to serve for two year terms, and their salary shall be $2,500 per year. This board of bank commissioners shall levy a tax of 1 per cent upon the daily deposits of the banks asking for the guaranty. State and national funds on deposit are to be deducted. This amount makes up the "depositors' guaranty fund." The commissioners may invest this money in government bonds and pro rate the interest back to the banks. The commissioners must visit each bank in Iowa under their control at least twice a year, make a thorough inspection, and may even remove careless or dishonest bank officials or directors.

Des Moines Bankers Not in Favor of Measure

While Representative Darrah thinks that bankers will not be "set" against his measure, Des Moines bankers appear to take an opposite view. While the proposed measure makes it entirely voluntary with the banks as to whether they shall get in on the guaranty proposition, bankers call attention to the amount the larger banks would be forced to pay at a 1 per cent levy on deposits. Take the Iowa National for instance with a deposit of over $7,000,000. To enter the guaranty fold, this bank would be forced to pay $70,000 as its share of the guaranty fund. Moreover on a bank with deposits of say $500,000 and a capital stock of $50,000, the bank would be forced to pay $5,000 which is 10 per cent of the capital stock, a poor method of realizing profits, bankers say. It is safe to predict that few Des Moines bankers will favor with any great enthusiasm any of the bank guaranty measures thus far before the legislature.

The Dobson Bill

The Dobson bill providing that all public funds be placed at interest in the banks of the state at 2 per cent on daily deposits bids fair to receive a knock-out blow before it gets out of the senate

although it passed that body early in the session. But Senator DeArmand, of Davenport, has been looking into the bill and has filed a motion to reconsider. The bill provides that public funds shall not be deposited until the banks give satisfactory bonds to secure them. Neither the treasurer nor his bondsmen are exonerated of responsibility, but the board of supervisors direct where the money shall be deposited. Senator DeArmand declares that Davenport banks would not take the money under such conditions, and says that the banks there now have an arrangement whereby they pay for the treasurer's bond and then pay 2 per cent interest after deducting the amount of the bond.

But Senator DeArmand indicated that if a bill is drawn providing for the furnishing of bonds for treasurers through the boards of supervisors it might obliterate the objectionable feature to the bill as it now stands.

Iowa Bankers Interested

Iowa bankers are more than ordinarily interested in continued reports sent out from Washington to the effect that George M. Reynolds of Chicago is slated to be Secretary of the Treasury under President Taft. But Des Moines bankers doubt whether Mr. Reynolds will accept the honor. Mr. Reynolds is a brother of Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, and was formerly engaged in the banking business in Des Moines, and prior to that time, in the little town of Panora.

The First National of Mason City

The First National at Mason City has been forced to defer its building, this coming season, of a handsome six story structure. It will be necessary before building to demolish a building which stands on the site of the proposed new bank. But a firm which occupies a store room in the building holds a lease until August 1, 1910 and the bank officials have not been able to effect an agreement with the firm. This will postpone the erection of the structure until the fall of 1910.

Iowa Has 300 National Banks

Iowa has just 320 national banks according to the reports of the Comptroller of the Currency while the total paid in capital stock is $20,505,000. Two new national banks have been organized in the state since the beginning of the year. They are the National of Bloomfield and the City National of Council Bluffs. Approval has also been received for the Milford National of Milford.

Will Enter the Real Estate Business

Gus. A. Nelson, assistant cashier of the Iowa National, Des Moines, has resigned that position and will enter the real estate and loan business at Waurika, Okla. The position of assistant cashier has been abolished by the bank and R. L. Chase, Jr., formerly receiving teller, will become paying teller. J. F. Hart becomes receiving teller, and another receiving teller is to be named. Mr. Nelson came to Des Moines in 1904 from Guthrie, Okla., where he was cashier of the Capital National. He was also connected with a bank at Kingfisher.

Banking Notes

A new farmers bank is soon to be organized at Alta with a capital stock of $50,000, which is already in sight. Those interested in the movement are: H. J. Poulson, C. Eriksen, William Fredericks, C. J. Schmitt, L. C. Anderson, A. W. Peterson, C. Lindlie. Alta has two banks now.

Des Moines bank clearings increased $600,000 for the week ending February 6th as compared to the corresponding week last year. The total clearings for the week were $3,136,145.77.

One of the biggest farm realty deals in several weeks was consummated in Marion County when Cashier O. L. Wright, of the Marion County National at Knoxville, purchased 430 acres of the Anderson Martin estate. Mr. Wright paid $64 an acre, the total thus reaching $27,500.

Officers have been elected for the First National at Burt as follows: S. E. McMahon, president; L. C. Smith, vice-president; H. O. Buell, cashier. C. D. Smith, the retiring cashier, has engaged in the banking business at Lemmon, S. D.

Herman and A. E. Raaz who have been operating a private bank at Valley Junction have disposed of it to the First Valley Junction Savings. The consideration was $25,000.

The State Bank of Portsmouth has been reopened in temporary charge of T. J. Korth, of Council Bluffs. There was no evidence of wrong doing and the accounts of the suicide cashier, C. S. Scroggins, were found to be absolutely correct. There were but a few withdrawals of deposits.

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, is at Pasadena, where he will remain until March 1st. He will then go to Los Angeles before returning to Des Moines.

young man, should be acquainted with another man who once sold the southeast corner of State and Madison streets for $4,000. Marshall Field purchased the identical lots not so long ago for two million dollars.

I should like to talk about this wonderful giant among cities in other respects than prosaic real estate values; to elaborate on the changes in its architecture from the old three and four story stone front business buildings, cheap inside and cheaper out, minus elevators, void of heat or decent daylight, to the wonderful and might skyscraper, imposing, convenient, and built with an eye to external beauty as well as to internal comfort; to contrast the little old dark musty English basement brick, or "brown stone front" residences, standing in rows on narrow lots all built so exactly alike that their owners often got into the wrong house late at night, with the dear little cottages and bungalows, plaster houses and more pretentious brick and stone dwellings built by artistic architects in compliance with the demands of a people fast growing aesthetic, now being erected all about the city; to the growth of art as typified in our imposing art institute building, and the ever increasing number of students taught therein; to our ornate and splendid public buildings, our big and little public parks, play grounds and beautiful school buildings. All these are potent signs that we as a people are awakening to the fact that there is something really worth living for greater than the acquisition of money and snobbishness. We are getting to be a real city; better politically, educationally, morally and spiritually; we have made great progress. Greater yet we will be if we all work together with a love of justice and honesty in our hearts and a determination in our minds to build for the honor of our town, ever remembering that it is only by the cultivation of the best in us individually and personally that we become greater as a people and as a city.

W. F. Paull a Candidate

W. F. Paull, organizer and first president of the Seattle Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, has announced his candidacy for membership on the national executive council of the institute. Three members of the national executive council will be elected at the 1909 convention to be held on the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition grounds this summer.

Among the three members whose terms expire this summer is C. Civile, a member of the Los Angeles Chapter, and at present the only Pacific coast man on the executive council. The Pacific Northwest has never had a member on the national council, and Mr. Paull's candidacy will doubtless receive support from all the Northwest chapters.

Mr. Paull has taken a prominent part in the Seattle Chapter ever since he organized it. He went East as its delegate in 1906 to the Atlantic City convention, and again to Detroit in 1907, delivered the invitation to the institute to meet on the exposition grounds in 1909, and his speech in its favor brought support from all over the country. This address was on "The Awakening of China," in which he dealt with the trade and commerce of the Pacific coast and Seattle.

At the next meeting of the Seattle Chapter Mr. Paull's name will be brought up for indorsement. He is trust officer at the Union Savings & Trust Company.

Pittsburgh Chapter News

From all appearances Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, will make a new high record in "Education in Banking" this year. A score or more of members are preparing to take final examinations in practical banking, commercial law, and political economy. Five members have promised to write chapters for the Institute Book on Banking, and have selected the following subjects for their contributions: "Loans and Discounts, including time loans, demand loans and overdrafts;" "Cash on Hand;" "Cashier's Checks Outstanding;" "Reserved for Accrued Interest and Other Liabilities;" and "Letters of Credit."

These chapters will be submitted to the national committee in charge of the work, of which Alexander Wall, of Milwaukee is chairman. Other chapters throughout the country are preparing contributions in the same way and the committee will select the best that is offered for the use in the book.

Several members of Pittsburgh Chapter are also preparing essays on "American Currency Problems" for which the Institute has offered prizes aggregating $350.

Meanwhile the regular educational work of the chapter is being carried on each month. This consists of lectures by professional and business men and a course in "Money and Banking," conducted by Prof. Joseph A. Beck, of the University of Pittsburgh. This class, it is expected, will some day be the nucleus of a school of accounts and finance of the University of Pittsburgh.

The Chicago Chapter Meeting

A general meeting of the Chicago Chapter was held in the chapter rooms Tuesday evening. R. L. Blount, manager of the real estate department of the American Trust and Savings Bank, of this city, delivered an instructive address on the important subject "Real Estate." Mr. Blount's wide experience and ability to present a subject in an interesting manner attracted a large attendance. No subjects for addresses are being overlooked by the Chicago Chapter which will be of interest to the bank clerks covering the field of banking. The banks loan a large amount of money on real estate, and it requires just as level judgment and technical knowledge to loan safely on this collateral as on any of the others.

F. W. Ellsworth, manager of the new business department of the First National and the First Trust and Savings Banks, and ex-president of the Chicago Chapter, also delivered an interesting talk on "The New Business Department." Mr. Ellsworth spoke on the same subject recently before the Bankers Ad Association of Pittsburgh, and those who wish to read his paper in full may read it in the February 6th issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

The Cincinnati Chapter Meeting

The annual meeting of the Cincinnati Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was held at the Munro Hotel, February 9th. Superintendent of Banks of Ohio, B. B. Seymour, George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, of New York, and James Albert Green were the speakers.

Two New Banks for Gary

Two new banks are to be opened at Gary, Ind., early next week, and it is expected that a third bank building will be completed early in the spring.

The Calumet Savings and Trust Company will have a capital of $50,000 and the M. M. Duchich Bank will open its doors with a capital of $25,000. Both buildings are at Eighth Avenue and Massachusetts Street, and are said to be among the finest structures in the city.

Several banks already have opened in the new town, and it is said that they have done considerable toward building up the place.

Minnetonka Banks

Two new Lake Minnetonka banks are preparing to begin active business under the best of conditions. The Wayzata State Bank Building is practically ready to occupy. Henry Snure, the cashier, has arrived at Wayzata with his family to assume his work. The Mound State Bank farther up the lake, will finish its new building when the frost leaves the ground. The foundation is already in. This bank is already in operation in a leased store room. The lake district now has three banks, the oldest being at Excelsior.

The Bank of Honea Path

The bank of Honea Path (S. C.) has elected the following directors: R. M. Shirley, J. F. Shirley, J. D. Hammett, C. Q. West, W. A. Erwin, L. O. Harper and G. M. Greer. R. M. Shirley was chosen president; J. D. Hammett, vice-president; T. R. Finley, cashier, and A. F. Mattison, assistant cashier.

Haverhill, Mass., Banking News

BY W. D. STEARNS.

At the annual meetings of the national banks of Haverhill there were only a few changes in the directors. The vacancy in the board of the Merrimack National, resulting from the resignation of Ubert A. Killam as cashier, after a service of forty years, was not filled. The Haverhill National elected Joseph N. Lovell, of the firm of Towle & Fitzgerald, Boston, as an additional director, and Henry H. Gilman as second vice-president.

The Haverhill Trust Company

P. N. MacDonald, formerly manager of the branch office of the Haverhill Trust Company, has been elected treasurer, filling the vacancy existing since the resignation of Charles J. Halpin, last September.

The Merrimack National

The water commissioners awarded the deposit of the Haverhill water works to the Merrimack

National Bank for the ensuing year, their bid for the account being  $3\frac{3}{4}$  per cent with a bonus of \$7.

The Haverhill National

The new municipal council, in asking for bids for the city's deposits, divided the accounts and called for separate bids for the regular balances and for the funds for the new high school.

The Haverhill National secured both deposits, its bid for the regular account being 3 13-32 per cent, with a bonus of $1.50, and for the high school funds 3 17-32 per cent with a bonus of $3.50. The others bids were:

Merchants National, high school funds, 3 per cent; city deposits,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

Merrimack National, high school funds,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  per cent, plus \$7; city deposits,  $2\frac{1}{4}$  per cent, plus \$7.

Haverhill Trust Company, high school funds,  $3\frac{1}{4}$  per cent, plus \$3.50; city deposits, 3 per cent, plus \$11.

The New Municipal Council

Haverhill's new municipal council, elected under the new charter, is composed of the mayor and four aldermen. Men of financial experience are well represented, the mayor, Edwin H. Moulton, being a director of the Haverhill National. Alderman Albert A. Killam was formerly cashier of the Merrimack National, while James W. Harris, another member of the board, is president of the Haverhill Company Co-operative Bank.

On Trip to Cuba

John E. Gale, president of the Haverhill National has recently started for an extended trip to Cuba.

The Business Outlook

The opening of a factory of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., in this city has created an increased demand for labor. Business is rapidly improving in most lines of the shoe trade with a good outlook for the season.

Edward M. Skinner has been elected president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

How Banks Are Managed in Italy

"Italia Bancaria," for 1908 (a publication at Milan, comparing with the Banking Almanac of London) shows that substantial and well managed private banks exist in Italy, and gives at the present time, besides branches of joint stock banks, the names of several well-established private houses in Genoa and elsewhere. Besides these there are in that city many co-operative credit institutions and a considerable number of exchange brokers and other dealers in money. In Italy, as a whole, not including the three banks of Italy, Naples, and Sicily, which have the power of issuing notes, there are fully 170 joint stock banks whose capital, collectively, amounts to nearly £15,000,000 sterling. Besides these there are more than 650 co-operative institutions with capitals of fully four million pounds. Banking in Italy is gradually developing. Some parts are far wealthier than others, thus there are 21 joint stock banks in Lombardy with capital of more than £7,300,000, practically half the entire capital of the joint stock banks of the whole country. There are 70 co-operative institutions in the same division with capital of £1,400,000.

Peoples' Banks Predominate

The banking power of Italy is very largely in the hands of "Peoples' Banks" and other cooperative institutions. The establishment of the peoples' banks (Banche Popolari) was the work of the well known statesman, Signor Luzzatti, who started his first peoples' bank at Milan in 1865, with a capital of but £28. Italia Bancaria does not state what it is now. But Henry W. Wolff, in his history of peoples' banks, says that some six or seven years since its capital had increased to £336,752, and its reserve fund to £168,376, with more than £1,000,000 deposit. And more than this, it has been "the mother or the nurse... of those hundreds of banks which dot Italian territory from the Alps to the Mediterranean." The growth of these banks continues. A Cassa Rurale may be found in many villages of about 1,000 inhabitants, while in those that are larger, co-operative popular banks carry on all banking operations, discount bills, receive deposits and make remittances either within the country or elsewhere.

Managers of the Banks

In some cases the maximum loan permitted is limited to £20 or some similar amount, in other cases the maximum may be only £4 or even lower. The rate of interest charged is 5½, or perhaps 6 per cent. These terms may seem high, but we must remember that these banks take the place of the usurious money-lender whose exactions are far more severe. One very important feature in the constitution of these banks is the employment of local people as officers. The president, vice-president, and directors are sometimes paid, but the services of the committee for discounts which settles the advances, the most important part of the business, appear to be entirely gratuitous. Useful as the people's banks have been they have not entirely covered the ground. The Casse Rurali, which may be described as co-operative councils of the whole parish, established to assist the working inhabitants, have also been of great service.

Management Is Democratic

The government of the institutions is entirely democratic, the elected council which directs the detail is appointed by the general meeting, who also regulate the admission to membership. "In respect of personal qualifications, it is strict as none other. A man may be poor as a church mouse. That is no bar to his election, more particularly since the casse require not a penny to be paid down for shares. But he must be honest, and sober, and thrifty, and well conducted, and thoroughly trusted by his neighbors. And he must be able to write and read, at any rate rudimentarily."... "The door is closed mercilessly against those who have contracted the habit of drinking," until they have mended their ways they cannot be admitted. The number of Casse Rurali chronicled in Italia Bancaria is very considerable. They extend even into Southern Italy and Sicily. Where they are established the moral condition of the people appears to improve.

Donnell Safe Company

Our Mr. Donnell is a practical safe maker with forty years' experience. He came to Chicago in 1880 and occupied the position of manager for the Hall's Safe & Lock Co. until 1886, when he and Mr. Deane bought the Hall's Safe & Lock Co. out in Chicago. They steadily increased the business of the Hall's Safe & Lock Co., as well as their reputation by putting in work which was built under Donnell's specifications and erected here under his supervision, and two-thirds of the banks are now using work which was planned by Mr. Donnell.

In 1892 the Halls went into the combination of the Herring-Hall-Marvin Co. and others, and Mr. Donnell handled the goods of this concern as long as the Halls were with them, which was only a short time. Mr. Hall resigned from the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co. built a new factory and Donnell has been their selling agent in Chicago ever since, as he knows the Halls know how to make safes. After Mr. Hall left, the Herring-Hall-Marvin Company changed to the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co.

We are in no way connected with the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co. who came to Chicago four or five years ago. They rented a store just a few doors above us and frequently people get in there thinking it is Donnell's place and the Hall's Safe Company's safes.

The Donnell Safe Company have a well equipped manufacturing plant in their building and can do any expert safe work on short notice and do most of this work here in Chicago. Mr. Donnell's patented rail and steel construction has become famous throughout the entire country.

Their insulated vault doors they will guarantee and subject them to a longer test than any of the other manufacturers. Their Manganese safes are the strongest safes in the world.

New Bank for Dike

The Farmers Savings Bank, of Dike, Ia., with a capital stock of $20,000, has been organized. C. E. Thomas, of Grundy Center, is to be president. J. J. Schultz is one of the prime movers.

A New Book by Morley Roberts

The famous author of "Rachel Marr" and of "Lady Penelope" has completed an entirely new work much on the order of "Rachel Marr" and which has been published by L. C. Page & Co., of Boston.

The title of the new work is "David Bran." This new masterpiece by Mr. Roberts is a strong dramatic story and deals with the life of a hero whose welfare is mixed up with that of two women. We have had novels before in which a man has been sorely tried to decide for himself between two women who had claims upon his attention.

In the present instance, the situations are entirely new and are not worked out upon the stupid lines of the ordinary problem novel. Mr. Roberts, always a clever writer, has for the past half dozen years been recognized as one of the masters in his profession. The present volume will add very materially to his reputation and largely widen his field of readers.

The book is beautifully bound in red, embossed in gold and contains a frontispiece in color by Frank T. Merrill. L. C. Page & Company, Boston, publishers.

Deficit Over $80,000,000

Washington, February 10.—It can be positively stated on the best of authority that there is no truth in the assertion now in circulation to the effect that the government will shortly withdraw all its deposits from banks. The conditions will undoubtedly require the withdrawal of some of the deposits in the near future as has been indicated in these dispatches for some time past. Secretary Cortelyou wishes to leave the cash balance strong for his successor, in order that that official may be as well provided with means at the start as is practicable. The balance has been declining very rapidly of late, the free cash to-day being only about $45,000,000, while the total deficit is over $80,000,000.

Shortage of cash has been going on at a rapid rate, and has surprised all officials by the speed with which it has developed since the opening of the year. This is in part the cause of the desire of Congress to hurry revenue legislation. But there is no intention of withdrawing at any near date the $88,000,000 now to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States.

Deposits in Chicago Banks

Several million dollars were added to the deposits of the Chicago banks during January and funds accumulated rapidly at the National banks. There is still talk among the National bankers about reducing or eliminating the interest rate allowed on country balances, in order to stem the tide of money flowing from the interior of this centre, but they have taken no definite steps in that direction as yet. The trust companies are still carrying abnormal surpluses of loanable funds, but this class of banks seems to have fared better than the commercial institutions in the matter of keeping their funds employed. This, however has been accomplished in many cases through the purchase of bonds. Taking everything into consideration, bankers see no immediate improvement in the money market. Rates are still fairly quoted at 4 to 4½ per cent. Higher figures are made only on collaterals of special nature.

Advertising an Investment

Sensible advertising is an investment and not an expense. This is especially true of publicity which looks to establishing future "good will." When one buys or manufactures a supply of stuff for sale this investment should be augmented by the investment of a reasonable amount for advertising to close out as speedily as it may be done. This is a policy of insuring quick sales, and it also reduces the risk if in storage and diminishes the waste if the material is in any way perishable. Wise publicity placed by advice of an expert is seldom charged to expense account.—R. A. Mathews in Advertisers' Aid.

The Cedar Rapids Savings Bank

Plans are being drawn for the Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Savings Bank for the improvement of the entire ninety feet east of the bank on Third Avenue, all of which is owned by the bank. This includes what is known as the Newcomb property.

The plans are being drawn for a building six stories high which will make a building more than twice as large as the present building. The remainder of the property will be a two-story building for business houses.

Next to the postoffice, on Third Street, there will be another large banking room, with all modern equipments.

The new banking rooms of the Cedar Rapids Savings Bank, when the building is completed, will be a great credit to the city as well as a delight to the bank officials, and employees, and its patrons. There will be more than twice the space of the present room, and it is by no means small. A large safety deposit vault will be installed in the rear and there will be several other splendid features. The building will be of the same style and material as the present structure and when completed will be one of the most handsome and imposing buildings in the city. Several store rooms will be provided and there will be an abundance of office rooms on the upper floors.

The plans contemplate the expenditure of $150,000. That seems a large sum but the Cedar Rapids Savings Bank always has had the utmost confidence in the growth of the city—and it may also be said that the city has always had the utmost confidence in the Cedar Rapids Savings Bank. The present six-story building was a pioneer in first-class buildings in this city and it is still a building in which the city is proud. The contemplated investment of so large an amount of money speaks eloquently of the faith which this bank has in the future of the city.

The matter will be pushed as rapidly as possible and it is hoped that work will commence early in the spring.

Twenty-eight National Banks Chartered

The Comptroller of the Currency has made public a statement showing that during the month of January, 1909, 28 national banking associations, with total capital of $2,775,000, were authorized to begin business. Of the number chartered, 15, with capital of $400,000, were banks with individual capital of less than $50,000, and 13, with capital of $2,375,000, banks with individual capital of $50,000 or over.

The number of banks chartered since March 14, 1900, is 4,066, with authorized capital of $244,338,300, of which 2,621, with capital of $68,280,500, were incorporated under the act of that date, and 1,445, with capital of $176,057,800 under the act of 1864. From the date mentioned to January 31st, 535 state banks, with capital of $36,970,800, were converted into national banks, 1,288 state and private banks reorganized as national banks, with capital of $84,042,000, and 2,243 banks, with capital of $123,325,500, organized independently of other banks. As will be seen, the capital of the latter class slightly exceeds the combined capital of the conversions and reorganizations.

The number of national banks organized under various acts is 9,330, as follows: 456, February 25, 1863; 6,243, June 3, 1864; 10, July 12, 1870 (gold banks), and 2,621, March 14, 1900. Two thousand four hundred and twenty-seven national banks have discontinued business, and there were in existence on January 31st, 6,903 banks, with authorized capital, $937,205,275, and circulation outstanding secured by bonds $630,309,637.

The Genesis of a Bank

Cashier Wirt Wright, of the National Stock Yards National, National Stock Yards, Ill., has sent out an attractive booklet containing a thesis upon banking and closing with an apostrophe to Snelson Chesney and the bank which has trebled its deposits under his skillful management. When Mr. Chesney succeeded the late C. G. Knox as president the bank had $945,010.67 in deposits while the latest statement shows $2,685,308.06. This is a record of which to be proud.

A. B. A. Convention

While Secretary Farnsworth was in Chicago this week attending the sessions of the executive committee of the clearing house section, he looked into the matter of setting a convention date for the American Bankers Association which will meet in Chicago this year. An early date having been requested by hundreds of Southern bankers who wish to attend, it probably is certain that the convention will be called to meet in Chicago on September 6th. The Southern bankers wish to have an early session so that they may be home in time for cotton moving season, which is a very important matter with them. Mr. Farnsworth gives it as his opinion that there will be an attendance of not less than 5,000 persons. More than 2,200 registered at the Denver convention and it is regarded as quite as easy to bring 5,000 to Chicago as it is to lure 2,200 to Denver. Local interests are about equally divided as to whether or not the headquarters should be at the new La Salle Hotel or at the Auditorium Annex. It largely is a question of choice between the famous promenade known as "Peacock Alley" and the "Pompeian Room," and similar attractions yet to be established by the new La Salle.

Chicago Rate for Bankers' Balances

Considerable uneasiness has prevailed in the financial district recently because of the continued rumors being printed in the daily press that Chicago banks have about decided to reduce the rate for bankers' balances downwards from 2 per cent. It safely can be said that the bankers of this city have not the least intention of doing this. At present loaning rates there is not much profit in these deposits, but for three-quarters of the year they are much sought for at the present rate of interest. Country bankers having balances in the city of Chicago may rest assured that no reduction is intended.

Central Trust

It is said that there are persons in the city of Chicago lying awake nights trying to determine why it is that the Central Trust Company of Illinois, which carried the deposit account of Booth & Co., had not furnished them with loans. The question at issue is an attempt to decide whether this fortuitous condition whereby the Central Trust shoulders none of the losses, came about as a matter of precaution on the part of Mr. Dawes and his associates; or whether or not

Two Leaders—East and West

E. S. TEFFT

S. W. REYBURN

Mr. Tefft has given good service to the New York Bankers Association in other positions, and last year was elected president. He is cashier of the First National at Syracuse.

Mr. Reyburn, head of the Arkansas Bankers Association, is president of the Union Trust Co. of Little Rock, one of the finest banks in the southwest. He, like Mr. Tefft, is an ardent organization man, and has helped build up his state association to its present high efficiency.

they had advanced information, or, that it "just happened." At all events, the bank is being congratulated widely that it kept out of the mix-up.

F. A. Chamberlain

As a member of the executive committee of the clearing house section, F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, Minneapolis, attended the sessions of that body in Chicago during the week.

Canadian Money Market

Money is so easy in Canada at the present time that the banks are even trying to dissuade brokers from paying off their loans.

A. A. Crane

Vice-President A. A. Crane, of the Northwestern National, at Minneapolis, was in Chicago during the week, stopping over on his way home from a ten days' visit in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. "Business good and weather cold" was a telegram from Chapman.

New Equitable Trust Branch

The Equitable Trust Company of New York Tuesday opened a new branch office at 618 Fifth Avenue, near 50th Street. This is another downtown banking institution to open an uptown office for the convenience of those whose business dealings demand banking facilities in the upper part of the city. Vice-President Lawrence D. Gillespie has a position at the new branch.

S. B. S., A. B. A., Meeting

For the purpose of affording further safeguards and protection to savings depositors all over the country the committee on savings bank laws of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association held a protracted meeting at the headquarters of the association Tuesday in New York. Among the topics discussed were the relative merits of mutual and stock savings banks. The difference in the methods employed by bankers in handling savings deposits is engaging the attention of many thoughtful men.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE new proceedings book covering the 34th annual convention of the American Bankers Association at Denver, has been sent out by Secretary Farnsworth. The volume shows the growth of the association and the business-like conditions which now surround the headquarters' offices in New York. It gives in full the constitution and by-laws with all amendments, a list of officers and members of the association and the names and addresses of all members and guests, who attended the big meeting in Denver. The book contains full page photographs of the officers and small medallions of the same process of each of its former presidents. This is a distinct and valued addition to this much prized volume. All of the engravings were made in Boston which accounts in part for the extremely high forehead borne aloft by the prized secretary of the association.

TREASURER KAUFFMAN is shown in a striking attitude, gazing at the top of Mt. Macoma. Every inhabitant of this famous village sits for his picture in this distinguished position.

THE new proceedings volume has a carefully prepared index so that if the reader would refresh himself by reading the delightful address of B. E. Walker of Toronto, he may find on page 207 without wading through the routine account of the convention. On page 24 may be found the famous contribution of Festus J. Wade, of St. Louis, covering the subject of guaranty of bank deposits which was a much livelier issue in the fall of 1908 than it now.

ON pages 226 and 255 will be found orations on "The Banker and the Nation," by Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, and "Vital Issues," by Alexander Gilbert, the then president of the New York Clearing House. The orations enumerated above when taken with the annual address of Col. Powers, the retiring president of the association, and a talk upon the "Conservation of our Natural Resources" by Congressman Joseph Ransdell, of Louisiana, constitute a group of financial and economic oratory unequalled elsewhere.

THE Denver convention was the greatest ever held by the American Bankers Association because of these great addresses and because of the strong position taken on the vexed banking and political issues of the day. The attendants were never better entertained or better cared for than they were in Denver. It will remain for Chicago sometime later this year to attempt to advance still further the high standard.

SECRETARY FARNSWORTH has enclosed in each volume sent out a request for members of the association to do a little missionary work in the way of securing new additions to the membership. He has great hopes that the many benefits which banks now obtain from the association will induce practically all of the banks in the whole country to come in and help support the growing work. Every loyal member of the American Bankers Association should make this request of Secretary Farnsworth a personal matter.

COL. FARNSWORTH will have to square it with Col. Hinsch, of Cincinnati, for selling his big bank the "Fifty-third National" this new proceedings book.

SECRETARY RINAMAN has been checking up, accurately, the membership of the Illinois Bankers Association. It shows 1,155 "live ones." Checking this against Stumpf & Hay's directory for Illinois develops that there are practically four hundred banks in Illinois nonmembers, or a total number of banks in the state of fifteen hundred and fifty-five. When Mr. Rinaman speaks of "members" he has reference to those banks whose dues are paid up and banks heretofore members with dues in arrears are not taken into consideration.

ILLINOIS has not had a "nonresident" membership provision but this week Mr. Baker, of the National Bank of Commerce, of St. Louis, sent in his dues and asked for membership. Mr. Rinaman took him into the fold and a "provision" will be made for all nonresidents who may wish to come in.

EVERY bank in Illinois, not on the list is being told, in a neat letter, that "Your bank is one of the few in this state not now a member of this association. You may not know that at the convention held in Chicago in October, 1908, I was elected secretary and now give my entire time and attention to the interests of the members, with an office at Rooms No. 1030-32 Rookery Building. Furthermore, such matters as burglary insurance, fidelity bonds and time-lock cleaning and guaranty are being handled for our members in such a way as to save each of them a sum of money equal to if not more than the annual dues of five dollars. In some instances, the new contract for time-lock cleaning and guaranty has alone made a saving of more than that amount."

IF you really wish to know how bank vaults ought to be constructed to be secure look at the picture on the top-left-hand-corner of the back cover of this issue.

WE are the only banking paper in which you can run an ad at the yearly rate on an "open book account." Bankers like it, and so do we. Look at the chance it gives to a man or company to advertise only when conditions are right. This is a letter from the famous "Market Chart Company" of this city. It says: "Our reason for discontinuing our advertisement is that the markets are very dull—but as soon as business picks up the CHICAGO BANKER will receive an ad from us. This paper has paid us better than any we ever have used."

THE remarkable showing made by the First National of Pittsburgh in its current statement is an expression of confidence on the part of the community in the new management of the institution. Deposits now total $19,255,429.20, which is an increase of $1,640,836.91 since November 27th last, and an increase of $3,332,799.46 since the corresponding call of last year, dated February 14th, 1908. James S. Kuhn is president; William S. Kuhn and J. W. Dawson Speer are vice-presidents; F. H. Richard is cashier; and the assistant cashiers are Thomas C. Griggs, Alexander Murdoch and William McK. Reed.

NO article recently published in the CHICAGO BANKER has brought out more favorable comment than that by H. P. Taylor & Co., of Pittsburgh, concerning the banking situation at that point. Mr. Taylor in writing further on the general subject says: "We made an exhaustive study of the situation and feel that an analysis, such as we have tried to give, should go far towards explaining to our own and outside communities, one of the great difficulties under which we have been laboring. Our banks have shown marvelous recuperation in the past fifteen months, and when the country at large is ready to buy our commodities freely, Pittsburgh will enter upon its period of greatest prosperity, with banking conditions in the most satisfactory shape in ten years."

PITTSBURGH is a natural money center on account of its being the point of "greatest rail and river tonnage" of any city in the world. This place at the top of the list is given to Pittsburgh by our department of commerce at Washington. In the good old days every iron firm wanted its own bank and so did most of the coal firms. This led to too many small banks and this in turn to expensive consolidation. The future is quite another story.

THE non-advertising bank has its point of view as is shown in a letter to this paper from C. B. Hazlewood, advertising manager of the Union Trust Company of this city. Mr. Hazlewood writes that: "We take pleasure in enclosing herewith our check for $5 which will cover our subscription for another year from February 1st. As a general proposition, a banking paper issued in Chicago and circulating largely among bankers who do business with Chicago bankers, deserves, we believe, our support, and were we soliciting country bank balances surely would place an advertisement, first of all, in your medium."

THE Cedar Rapids National, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has sent out a neat booklet giving a history of the bank with many views of its handsome new building. The deft touch of Kent C. Ferman is to be noted. The paper is buff, pictures margined widely, and the history paragraphs short, snappy and truthful without being boastful.

TO have paid dividends for twenty or more years and built up an earned surplus equal to capital is stronger when simply, and succinctly stated, than when "done in red." Truly the booklet is a model.

CASHIER.

Savings Bank Centennial in 1910

The bankers of the whole country have been looking into the savings bank situation as never before. This new zeal for history and statistics was born in part, from the political agitation of last fall for guaranty of bank deposits. In other part it came from the postal bank legislation demanded of Congress by the republican platform and backed up by Taft and Roosevelt and by Postmaster-General von L. Meyer. The Washington correspondents have had to supply their papers, not only with the latest developments, but with history, statistics, logic (either side) and gossip.

Philadelphia Leads

Out of all this has come the information that the first savings bank in the United States was "The Philadelphia Savings Fund Society," organized in 1816 and still in existence. The second was established in Boston the same year, and the third in New York in 1819. The first savings bank in France was established in Paris in 1818, and the first in Germany at Berlin in the same year.

Mr Whitebread, a London merchant celebrated for his philanthropy, was the first to propose postal savings banks, and as early as 1806, four years previous to the establishment of Mr. Duncan's bank at Rushwell, he laid before a committee of the British parliament the advantages of permitting working people to deposit their savings for safe keeping with the government through the postoffices, but he did not go so far as to advocate the payment of interest. It remained for the great Gladstone to carry Mr. Whitebread's plan into effect twenty-five years later, with an amendment providing for the payment of interest on deposits. On May 17, 1861, parliament passed the Gladstone act, which went into effect the September following, and at the end of the first year the deposits amounted to £1,694,727, which is equivalent to nearly $8,500,000.

Comptroller's Interesting Contribution

The latest report of the Comptroller of the Currency, for 1908, gives a very interesting table showing the postal savings banks of the world, and we find that 39,266,922 persons availed themselves of the privilege offered by postal savings banks in twenty-seven countries, depositing a total of £2,024,807,191, which is an average of $51.57 per depositor.

Another table shows that 101,231,647 individuals out of a total population of 892,275,000, representing thirty-six different nations, have intrusted the enormous sum of $12,958,766,707 of their savings to all kinds of savings banks, and that the average amount on deposit is $420.47 and that the average deposit per inhabitant of those thirty-six countries is $11.55.

The largest deposits are in the United States, where we have $3,660,553,945 in our savings banks belonging to 8,795,848 depositors. Germany comes next with $3,016,710,512 belonging to nearly eighteen million depositors, and the United Kingdom with $1,020,272,833 belonging to twelve and a half million depositors. The United States ranks first as to the average account, Canada ranks second and Hungary third.

Switzerland stands first as to the largest deposit per capita of the population, which is $62.26, as compared with $41.84 in the United States.

Where They First Began

The thrifty Scot gets the credit for installing

Bankers in study of the postal bank situation have developed the history of the savings institutions into a concrete story. Born in Scotland in 1810 :: :: :: :: ::

the first real savings bank, and the centennial anniversary of the oldest savings bank in the world will occur in May, 1910, and will be properly celebrated in Scotland, where the first institution on the present system was established by Rev. Henry Duncan, D. D., minister of the Presbyterian Church at Ruthwell, Dumfriesshire.

This was before Secretary Wm. Hanhart went into the business or even thought of the future great work of the Savings Bank Section of the A. B. A. Dr. Duncan's was the first regular banking institution to accept deposits and pay interest upon them. He got the idea from the writings of John Bone, a Scotch social economist, and several years later himself wrote "An Essay on Parish Savings Banks," in which he presented arguments in favor of the present system, and described the success of his own endeavors to benefit the working people of his parish by offering them 5 per cent interest upon all the money they would save from their wages. He demonstrated the moral as well as the material advantages of promoting thrift and economy in that way. Less money was wasted at the public houses and less was needed to support the indigent poor. The citizens of Dumfries erected a monument to the memory of Dr. Duncan after his death in 1846.

The Second Savings Bank

The second savings bank upon the present plan was opened in Edinburgh December 1, 1813, by James H. Forbes of the local bankinghouse of Sir William Forbes & Co., who paid interest on the deposits of the working people at the rate of 4 per cent per annum for one year, after which the rate was increased to 5 per cent.

Following this, savings banks on the Duncan plan were started in nearly all the manufacturing cities of the United Kingdom for the benefit of wage-earners until in 1816 there were seventy-four in Great Britain and four in Ireland.

Early English Banks

The first recognition of savings banks by any government was the passage by the British parliament in 1817 of "an act to encourage the establishment of banks of savings," which empowered the managers of the Bank of England to receive and pay interest upon the funds of savings banks and also authorized their investment in debentures bearing interest at the rate of £4 11s 8d per £100, which is a shade under 5 per cent per annum.

Dr. Duncan was by no means the first man to propose such a bank. In 1771 Francis Mazeret published a pamphlet recommending that the vestrymen of each parish in England take charge of the savings of the people, but said nothing about paying interest upon them. A bill passed the house of commons to this effect, but it failed to secure the approval of the lords.

In 1778 a benevolent enterprise was started at Hamburg, Germany; in 1787 a similar one at Berne, and in 1785 at Zurich to guarantee the safety of the earnings of factory operatives, but the plan was more like that of our mutual benefit societies than our savings banks.

Called Frugality Banks

In 1797 Jeremy Bentham published a pamphlet advocating "frugality banks" under the supervision of the government.

In 1798 "The Friendly Society for the Benefit of the Women and Children of Middlesex" was organized by Mrs. Priscilla Wakefield, which among other things, received deposits from working people for safe-keeping, and in 1804 began to loan the money at 6 per cent interest under the direction of Mr. Eardley Wilmot and Mr. Spurling, two Quaker gentlemen. It is not positively known, but it is believed, that Mrs. Wakefield was also a Quaker.

In 1799 Rev. Joseph Smith, rector of the parish church at Wendover, Bucks County, England, offered to take charge of the savings of his parishioners and pay interest upon them the following Christmas day. Many farmers and working people in the parish took advantage of the offer, and Mr. Smith had several hundred pounds in his charge for years thereafter. It is not known how he recouped himself, but it is assumed that he loaned the money on his own responsibility.

In 1806 "The Provident Institution" of London was established and offered the public a form of annuities similar to the present endowment policies of our insurance companies, and it is still doing the same business. A wage-earner can deposit his savings, which are allowed to accumulate at compound interest, and after a certain period can draw the interest in the form of an annuity, but the principal must remain undisturbed.

In 1808 a benevolent society of women at Bath, England, began to pay interest upon the savings of domestic servants which were deposited with them.

Clearing House Committee in Chicago

The executive committee of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, met in part in Chicago on Monday. Among those present were President E. C. McDougal, of Buffalo and E. R. Fancher, chairman, of Cleveland. Two sessions were held. The committee has under special consideration the question of uniformity in bank collections.

The committee further gave consideration to bank examinations by examiners employed directly by clearing house associations. Chicago has led in this important departure, and although the example has been followed by several other cities the practice is not as general as it should be. The visiting members were tendered a luncheon at the Midday Club. Comment upon Jos. T. Talbert's recent paper on clearing house examinations seemed to favor adopting it as a practical outline of the attainable and desirable thing in that line.

Concerning the National Debt

"The United States cannot afford to have a growing debt. Germany and Russia furnish sufficient warnings. Potential wealth is a fine basis for boasting, but real wealth is the amount saved above the expenditures called for in the annual budget. There never was a more pernicious fallacy than that a national debt is desirable. Japan's war debt was the price it paid for national existence; Holland's expenditures for fighting the sea are imperative, but the United States has no valid excuse at this time for the extension of its national debt."

—Fisk & Robinson.

This Bank has been in continuous existence since 1810—nearly one hundred years. It has always given effective service to its clients and has never failed in their protection. Conservatively managed banks and persons having business in Pittsburgh are cordially invited to open accounts.

Availability of Bonds as a Panic Asset

In the past there have been many interesting articles written on the desirability of bond investment as a secondary reserve for national and other commercial banks. In view of the recent panic and its results, it now again becomes interesting to discuss this matter and to examine whether or not these reserves have served their purpose; and at the same time to consider the new phases of investments of this class brought about by legislation since the panic of 1907. We may preface any special remarks as to the desirability of any specific classes of bonds, by general observations of interest. Bonds as a reserve are desirable to banks for use in the following ways:

First: They may be sold and converted into cash for immediate needs.

Second: When of certain classes and at certain times they may be pledged as security for the deposits of the government.

Third: As collateral for loans from other banks, institutions, and individuals.

Fourth: As the basis for borrowing from foreign banks.

Continuing a special examination as to their desirability for these specific purposes, and as to their relative values inter se, and compared with other assets, we find,

Convertibility into Cash

During the panic of 1907, there were bids in the market for nearly all of the railroad bonds which were legal investments for savings banks in New York and Massachusetts, and many bonds of this class, particularly old underlying issues, came into the open market. These bonds were picked up chiefly by investment dealers with good clientele and at fair discounts. There also continued to be a demand for the well known issues of bonds of large systems which were of sufficient age to be well known and well distributed. There was also some market for such semi-speculative issues as are occasionally very active in the listed market, but at very large discounts from average prices. On new issues, not well distributed, and largely in the hands of syndicates, the market disappeared altogether, and there were no apparent bids. The market for public utility and industrial bonds, with the exception of a few old issues and the bonds of the United States Steel Corporation, was extremely weak and it was most difficult to secure bids. In municipal bonds there was always a fair demand, and all well known issues were readily taken at fair discounts from average prices, although comparatively few desirable issues were put on the market. As to underwritings and securities of unfinished projects there was no market. As a general conclusion, it may be stated therefore that marketability, combined with the smallest loss, was in inverse ratio to the average return on the security sold.

Security for Government Deposits

The Government for a year prior to the breaking out of the panic had been increasing its deposits with the national banks, and during the sixty days prior thereto, had made every effort to relieve the situation by further deposits. These deposits were of course simply loans by the Government. As the situation became more critical, the scrutiny of collateral demanded by the Government became less critical. The Government accepting in descending scale, first, its own bonds, second, the bonds of its dependencies; third, high class municipal bonds, and fourth, railroad securities, which were legal for New York and New England Savings Banks.

By Wm. Foley of the Wm. R. Compton Bond and Mortgage Co. of St. Louis, Missouri. :: :: :: ::

Many of these bonds and especially the municipal and railroad bonds were borrowed by the national banks, either from trust companies, insurance companies or individuals, at a cost of from one and one half to two per cent, and even three per cent premiums. It is a peculiar anachronism in national banking, that an institution which would look upon an item of bills payable in its statement with horror and revulsion, will cheerfully create a bonds payable without hesitation. Therefore, from the standpoint of government deposits, a fair bond account seems to be not only an available but a desirable and profitable asset. The municipal and very high class railroad bonds seem to be the most desirable holdings for this purpose, since they would be available when most needed, and at other times would yield the best returns.

Collateral as Loans from Other Banks, etc.

The bond, whether municipal, railroad or other, is absolutely impersonal; that is to say, the equation of personal credit is not present; and the holder of any bond does not hesitate to sell, pledge or hypothecate as may best serve his interests. Likewise the large issues of bonds are well known to all banks which might be in a position to lend money during times of stress, and it is apparent to any banker that an institution which could offer bonds of any well known city or railroad as collateral would receive recognition and discounts at more beneficial rates than one offering personal obligations and bills receivable, except where secured by the direct pledge of commodities. In fact, in times of stress, banks are inclined not to consider bills receivable readily as security for loans, both on account of the difficulty of determining the responsibility of the makers and of the inconvertibility of the security itself. As collateral for use with other banks, the railroad bond, provided it was well known, well distributed among investors, and enjoyed a good market would be most readily accepted; after which would come the municipal obligation of well known communities, varying directly in desirability to the size, reputation, and location of the obligor. The next in order would be well known public utility bonds and the obligations of prosperous industrial companies; while unknown public utility bonds and underwriting propositions would be of no more value than unknown bills receivable.

Collateral for Foreign Borrowing

For use in borrowing money from foreign banking houses, bonds are only of interest to the institutions of sufficient size and importance to maintain balances with foreign banks, and to do an international business. For such institutions it is not difficult to make a continuing arrangement for the acceptance of secured drafts in reasonable amounts. The bank of Europe will expect the deposit of bills against shipments of commodities, in its own hands; or of securities, subject to confirmation, for its account, with a correspondent agreed upon, before accepting such time drafts as the borrowing bank may draw. Where drafts are drawn against securities, called finance bills as opposed to commodity bills, the foreign bank will generally insist upon well known and listed bonds of good reputation. Special arrangements may be made, however, for drafts against municipal bonds of large cities and communities.

Therefore for use in foreign borrowing the listed railroad bond is of the greatest service, and the higher class the bond, the more readily will it serve. While this topic is under discussion, it is interesting to note that prior to the panic of 1907, American banks were heavy borrowers in the European market against securities, and that in turn the foreign discounting banks were borrowers from the central banks of issue; and during the panic itself the imports of gold were secured through these channels from borrowings, and not from credit balances; so that in fact, despite our objections and fears of a central bank of issue in America during the panic, nearly every large bank in particular and the country as a whole secured relief from the central banks of Europe.

The Effect of Recent Legislation on Bond Reserve

After much agitation for remedial legislation, the mountain of necessity has produced the mouse of the emergency currency bill. In a few words, the emergency currency bill provides that national banks may form currency associations, which must be composed of at least ten banks having a combined capital and surplus of five million dollars and each of which banks must already have a circulation secured by United States bonds, an amount equal to or greater than forty per cent of its capital stock; and in addition an unimpaired surplus of twenty per cent. These currency associations may deposit with the Secretary of the Treasury any acceptable securities, including railroad bonds and commercial paper, as security for additional circulation, to the amount of 75 per cent of the cash value of the securities deposited. Against the deposit of municipal bonds the currency association may receive additional circulation to ninety per cent of the cash value.

Provision is also made by the emergency currency bill for the issuance of additional circulation by individual banks against municipal bonds to ninety per cent of their value. These municipal bonds must be of a state, county or municipality which has been in existence for ten years, and has not defaulted in ten years, and of which the funded debt does not exceed ten per cent of the assessed valuation of its taxable property.

Therefore as to recent legislation the municipal bond is given a new use. This legislation should tend to improve the market on municipal bonds in times of financial stress, and is a practical guarantee that national banks, which are the owners or holders of municipal bonds of the requirements named, may secure additional circulation when needed, thereby supplying the immediate want, and also preventing the sale of the securities at panic prices.

Have Bond Reserves Served their Purposes?

It would appear that the bond reserve has been of the greatest advantage and value to banks in panic times. From an examination of actual conditions, we learn that no bank has failed or suspended in recent years, which at the time was an owner of the better class of railroad or of municipal bonds. It is probably true that the sale or hypothecation of securities of these classes has enabled many institutions to provide for unexpected demands, and even to save them from suspension. The bank that owns a mortgage on a finished earning railroad, or the obligation of a decent municipality has always got something that some one else wants, and which can be converted into cash in a number of ways if the necessity arises.

The truest and best test for a banker in buying bonds is for him to ask himself whether or not he would be willing to publish the name of the security in his statement. If bankers would buy only such bonds as they would be proud to publish, and avoid all issues which are in any way speculative, or in which the banker has a personal interest, all bank holdings would be desirable, which would also mean that they would be convertible and serviceable.

It is the conclusion of the writer that a properly chosen holding of really good, seasoned, well known bonds, is, next to cash, the truest, best and most serviceable asset an institution can have. It is his further conclusion that such holding should consist about equally of good railroad bonds and high grade municipal bonds.

Governor Judson Harmon has disapproved the proposed plan of dividing the state into depository districts so as to provide for a general distribution of the state's surplus funds. He has had a conference with a number of bankers who discussed the competitive system with him. This will soon be in force. The proposition for districts provided that there should be a calculation of the capital of the banks in the various congressional bailiwicks and that the state treasurer should apportion to each on that basis a certain amount of the money available for deposit. The governor's objection to this plan is that it will strengthen the tendency to make combinations and hold down the interest rate to be paid the state. The cry that the funds will go into the centers of capital under an open bidding has no terrors for him.

"We want to get all for our money that we can," said he. "No bank can secure more than the law allows, and besides, it must give us security for every cent."

Inspection of the bill of Senator Lawyer providing for an amendment to the depository law develops the fact that there is a clause that might lead to this combination against high interest rates. It is provided that when two or more banks bid the same amount, and they are higher than the others, that the money bid for must be divided between them. Quite easy it would be to make a "frame up" under that clause. Five banks could make a collusive agreement whereby one was to bid low and the rest a shade higher. All the bids might be lower than elsewhere in the state, but the money would have to be given to the four highest in this scheme. The defect is that the state treasurer is given no option.

The officers of the institution are John Sherwin, president; Thomas H. Wilson, vice-president; A. B. Marshall, second vice-president; Fred J. Woodworth, third vice-president; Chas. E. Farnsworth, cashier; John R. Geary, Joseph R. Kraus, John H. Caswell, Geo. N. Sherwin, Horace R. Sanborn and B. A. Bruce, assistant cashiers.

The Columbus National Banks

The ten national banks of Columbus show deposits, according to the statements just published, $23,910,106 against $22,534,538 at the date of the last statement, November 27, 1908. Excluding the Central National, which was not in existence at that date, the deposits show an increase of $842,000. Compared with the call of November, 1907, the nine national banks have gained $2,100,000 in deposits. The showing is one of which the banks may well be proud and the call for a statement from the state banks and trust companies, which is now being published will show that these institutions also have gained largely.

Trust Companies Hit

Trust companies or other banking institutions incorporated under the Thomas banking laws cannot deal in real estate or act as agents for insurance companies is the gist of the very important opinion rendered by Attorney-General U. G.

Denman to B. B. Seymour, state superintendent of banks. This opinion, however, does not apply to such banks or trust companies as were organized prior to the passage of the Thomas act, as that law does not affect them until April 1, 1910.

Under the Thomas law banks are incorporated for a specific purpose, that of doing a banking business. The opinion says that there are incorporations organized for the purpose of conducting real estate business as well as acting as agents or solicitors for insurance companies, but under the law now it does not apply to banks.

The decision means that all financial institutions coming under the Thomas banking act or which have been organized since the law was passed will have to cease doing the business mentioned, for the law does not grant them that power.

Appointed Trustee

Joseph Rawson, vice-president of the First National of Cincinnati, who has been acting as trustee for the Dayton and Michigan bonds for some years, has just been formally appointed by the Court. The late L. B. Harrison was the trustee, and shortly before his death transferred the trusteeship to Mr. Rawson. Recently it was decided that this transfer was not entirely legal, and proper court procedure has been taken before Judge Brown, at Dayton, who appoints Mr. Rawson. The bonds amount to $2,728,000, and are due in 1911. The C., H. and D. Road guarantees the interest.

Negligent Directors

Directors of national banks who are negligent are financially responsible for the acts of a dishonest official whose deeds they might have checked through watchfulness. This was the decision of the Circuit Court in the case against the Directors of the Galion National, which was wrecked by cashier Otho Hayes, now in the penitentiary with Edward Flickinger, of the Galion Wheel Company, who assisted him in getting away with $160,000 of the bank's funds. In the Common Pleas Court Judge Dillon held that they were responsible for the loss because they permitted fraudulent loans to be made. The Circuit Court sustained that view.

Opposes Postal Savings Banks

EDITOR CHICAGO BANKER.—The postal savings bank is a foreign institution originated by the monarchs of Europe to bolster their thrones. They need the people's savings to help support their extravagant governments and maintain immense armies which impoverish the masses. But we have no kings or their subjects here; then why the necessary of this innovation? Our conditions are so entirely different their examples are of little value to us.

These men who would lead us to foreign ways do not comprehend that the centralization of so much money in the control of a political band would honeycomb the government and would likely be converted to a dangerous party weapon. In the Carter bill we find: "The postmaster-general shall, as herein provided, deposit postal savings depository funds in national banks designated by him." If a political saint could be found who would distribute these "depository funds" without regard to party affiliation, does any one believe he would hold his office long? I believe should this scheme become law fair minded men will do with it as they did with the old United States bank.

And here allow me to ask, what is the matter with the present "antiquated" banking system, anyway? It seems to be too solid and too sound to suit some people, and there is a cry for a new and easy way to issue currency wherein the public may be defrauded.

F. E. HOYT.

Fond du Lac, Wis., February 11, 1909.

New Guaranty Banks in Oklahoma

Guthrie, Okla., February 16.—State Bank Commissioner A. M. Young believes he should be encouraged and heartily supported by the state bankers in his determination to see that the spirit of the guaranty banking law is carried out along the lines of chartering state banks, granting charters to deserving applicants and turning down unworthy ones. The bank commissioner's office for the past few weeks has been flooded with requests to charter state banks with small capital stock in large towns. A number of national banks seeing the popularity of the guaranty bank law, are endeavoring to secure charters for state banks which it is reasonable to suppose are to be used as feeders for the national banks.

Some have asked for charters to operate state banks in buildings over their national banks. One has requested the commissioner to grant a charter for a state bank to be conducted in a post-office.

But to requests, where the motive was questionable to the bank commissioners, he has turned a deaf ear and for such a stand he should be commended. The time has come when the state banks must stand together for the spirit of the bank deposit guaranty law as well as the letter.

The enemies of the law are seeking industriously to undermine and impair it. Not only should the state bankers stand shoulder to shoulder against any effort to injure the law but all persons who have money to place in banks should stand by the state bankers who are conscientious in their support of this measure that is founded on justice to the depositors, and not by the banker who seeks to impair the law that is making Oklahoma the richest state in the union, besides bringing security and absolute safety to those who have placed their money in the vaults of a bank for safe keeping.

Back from Japan

William H. Acuff, president of the Washington Mill Company, who represented the Spokane Chamber of Commerce at the trade congress in Japan in December and January said on his return at a meeting of the board of trustees, February 9th, that there will be no war between this country and Japan, adding that the Japanese people do not want war and that it is idle for Americans to speculate upon such an event.

Philadelphia Banking News

By J. IRVING COOPER

A commission for planning a new banking house for the Kensington Trust Company, of Philadelphia, at Kensington and Allegheny avenues, has been given to Heacock & Hokanson, who won it in competition. The building will be a one-story structure, with a mezzanine floor, and will cost about $25,000.

This will be the second banking house erected in the northeast, work now being well advanced upon the new home for the Textile National, at Kensington Avenue and Huntingdon Street. It will cost about $40,000.

Want to Kill Tax on Savings

Savings fund officers, including G. C. Purves and C. Stuart Patterson, of Philadelphia, were before the ways and means committee of the Pennsylvania house of representatives in support of the Salus bill to remove the tax of 4 mills now on money placed at interest by the savings funds having no capital stock. They do not resist the tax on net earnings, but say the other is unjust. They argue that their deposits are from the wage-earners, and there is no profit to any but depositors after payment of expenses, including taxes. The savings banks officials contend that if this tax is removed it will be possible to pay a higher interest return to depositors.

Philadelphia National Banks

Statements of the Philadelphia national banks in response to the call of the Comptroller of the Currency asking for reports as of February 5th, show that the institutions have generally made substantial additions to surplus and undivided profit accounts in comparison with the last previous call, that of November 27, 1908. The loan item also shows a considerable increase, but the deposits remain practically on the same plane as that of last November.

The Franklin National

The Franklin National of Philadelphia shows deposits of $31,142,679, as against $31,825,519 on November 27th last. The bank's loan account increased from $19,305,692 to $21,819,739, and the surplus and undivided profits increased from $2,402,024 to $2,451,944. This statement is very nearly typical of all the institutions.

The Girard National

Deposits of the Girard National of Philadelphia, are $39,472,904, as against $39,512,214 on November 27th. The surplus and undivided profit item is $3,965,072, an increase of $90,489, while the outstanding loans increased about $5,000,000.

Opposed to Postal Banks

Opposed to postal savings banks, on the ground that the inauguration of a system giving depositors government assurance would militate against banking institutions, Group Two, of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, Friday placed itself on record against the Carter bill, in favor of which Postmaster-General George Von L. Meyer spoke a week ago at the annual banquet of the Philadelphia Bankers Association.

Group Two of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association covers Delaware, Montgomery, Chester, Bucks, Berks and Schuylkill counties, and includes 107 bank and trust company members.

Montgomery Evan, president of the Norristown Trust Company, was elected chairman of Group Two, for the ensuing year, to succeed Eli S. Reinhold, of Mahanoy City, Edward E. Shields, of West Chester, was re-elected secretary, with salary doubled.

Philadelphia State Funds

Philadelphia financial institutions on January 31st held on deposit state funds to the aggregate amount of $1,745,834, of which more than a third was in the Farmers and Mechanics' National, fiscal agent for the commonwealth.

E. J. Cadell a Speaker

E. James Cadell, of Philadelphia, was a speaker at the meeting of the Newark Credit Men's Association. He assured his auditors that the outlook for better business and more prosperous times was good.

No Change in List of Directors

No changes were made in the board of directors of the Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit & Insurance Company at the annual meeting of the stockholders.

New Bank Probable

It is rumored that a new banking institution is to be established in New Liberty Hall, corner of Tenth and South streets.

Want to Move Philadelphia Stock Exchange

Another movement is taking form to get the Philadelphia Stock Exchange removed from Third Street to the vicinity of Broad and Chestnut streets.

Joseph Wayne, Jr., on Visit to Florida

Joseph Wayne, Jr., cashier of the Girard National of Philadelphia, has gone for a month's trip to Florida and West Indies.

Elected a Member of Exchange

Henry K. Kurtz, of Kurtz Brothers, has been elected a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange.

The Commercial National

The Commercial National of Columbus, Ohio, has decided to enlarge its present quarters and will, in addition to the banking room it now occupies at the corner of Long and High streets, extend to the storeroom now occupied by the druggist next door south. This will give it the additional equipment required by its increasing business.

New Bank for Roseboro

A movement is on foot for the organization of a new bank at Roseboro, N. C., with $10,000 capital. A. M. Hall and R. P. Howell are interested.

The new building for the Burton & Co. State Bank, of Kellogg, Ia., will soon be ready for occupation.

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Twin City bankers favor the bill introduced in the Minnesota legislature that banks and trust companies shall pay examination fees to the state twice a year. It is supplemental to the Thorpe bill providing for the creation of the office of a bank examiner for each legislative district and a superintendent of banking. The Allen bill indorsement shows that the bankers are willing to take on greater expense that the bank examination system may be improved on. The Thorpe bill provides for examination twice a year and the latter bill removes the objection that the Thorpe bill might put the state to greater expense. The bankers impose on themselves a double fee. The Minnesota banks now pay about 21 per cent of the personal taxes paid to the state.

A bill has been prepared to place the banks on a gross earnings basis the same as public utilities. The bankers may agree to a higher rate, as it is said they now pay higher than most forms of property, in cases as high as 9 per cent. All the banking bills were taken up on Wednesday by the house banking committee of the legislature.

St. Paul National Banks

The St. Paul national banks in their report for February 5th show a gain of \$4,000,000 in deposits over the report for six months ago. As compared with the November statements the deposits are off. From November 12, 1906, to February 5, 1909, the Second National shows the largest percentage of earnings according to the size of the banks. Based on dividends paid in the period and the increase in surplus and profits the percentages are as follows: Second National, 57  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent; Scandinavian American, 51 per cent; First National, 36  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent; German American, 32  $\frac{4}{5}$  per cent; Merchants National, 31  $\frac{2}{5}$  per cent; Capital National, 20  $\frac{4}{5}$  per cent; American National, 20 per cent.

The gain in resources between the July and February calls is as follows: National German American, $1,351,450; First National, $854,541; Merchants National, $926,554; Capital National, $560,660; American National, $218,726. Between the November and February calls there is a large loss. The Capital National shows a gain in deposits in the last quarter, amounting to $72,297. The First National is the only one to show a gain in surplus and profits, of $8,834. The deposits of the banks on the last call are: German American, $10,582,415; Merchants, $10,336,863; First, $9,761,321; Capital, $4,299,043; Second, $3,040,867; American, $1,468,873.

Minneapolis Banks

Seventeen banks in Minneapolis show large gains in deposits in the year between February 14, 1908, and February 5, 1909. They show gains in resources, and with four exceptions, gains in the capital, surplus and profits column. The resources of the six largest banks are as follows: Northwestern National, $30,215,079; First National, $23,398,916; Security National, $19,382,854; Farmers & Mechanics, $12,587,663; Hennepin County Savings, $4,570,000; German American, $2,304,007. The deposits are as follows: Northwestern, 24,544,611; First, $17,869,734; Security, $16,684,050; F. & M., $11,741,541; Hennepin County, $4,326,540; German American, $2,025,313.

Minneapolis Chapter Play

The Minneapolis chapter of bank clerks bought the Lyric theatre out for two nights this week to get funds with which to institute chapter rooms. "The Man on the Box" was the play and the Lyric stock company the players. To eke out the gate receipts the clerks got together a clever program for which the cartoons were drawn by a clerk. The chapter wants a permanent room for its meeting place with opportunity to lounge there when off duty, and to read financial papers files. The hard work which the clerks did to make the theatrical production a success from a money standpoint indicates a high grade interest in the work of the chapter.

St. Paul Chapter Meeting

The St. Paul bank clerks had a meeting Tuesday evening which was addressed by Alderman Leavitt Corning on "Advertising" and David Morgan of the Bethel association on "Problems of the Day." John McGillick, of the American National Bank, was put down for some stories and George Collier, of the Capital National, for piano playing. The chapter is considering the establishment of a course in banking in connection with the St. Paul Institute of Arts and Sciences, the St. Paul College of Law, or the Y. M. C. A. President Jack Pearson feels that the chapter has men qualified to conduct such a course.

Washburn Introduces Bill

Representative Washburn has introduced a bill in the Minnesota legislature making it a misdemeanor for anyone to publish derogatory statements affecting banks, which are directly injurious to the financial condition of such institutions.

Joint Group Meeting Expected

The first group of the Minnesota Bankers Association and the seventh group of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will have another joint meeting, this time at Winona. The annual meeting took place last summer at La Crosse and Winona has been chosen for the gathering next summer. The executive council of the first district has issued an invitation to the seventh Wisconsin district, and naturally expects the invitation to be accepted. The date will be set later.

Personal Mention

Joseph Lockey, president of the American National, a pioneer banker of St. Paul, shows an improvement in his condition. He has been confined to his home since January 30th with heart trouble. J. E. Bell, president of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, who was seriously ill when he left for California for his annual winter trip, has regained his health. George F. Orde, cashier of the First National at Minneapolis, has been curling at Winnipeg. Mr. Orde is president of the Minneapolis curling club. At the same time, D. Mackerchar, assistant cashier and an enthusiastic curler, has been spending his vacation in the warm climate of Texas. I. F. Cotton, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, and W. A. Farr, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, have taken possession of the State Bank at Robbinsdale, a suburb of Minneapolis. Officers will be elected later.

Spokane, Wash., February 17.—Increases in deposits amounting to $4,810,417.24 and gains of $1,870,506.54 in loans and discounts, and $2,109,606.13 in cash on hand and due from banks are the features of the reports issued by the national banks in Spokane in response to a call from the comptroller of currency for statements of their condition at the close of business February 5th.

Spokane's Newest Directory

Spokane's newest directory contains 48,640 names, which, on the accepted calculation of two and a half for each, gives the city a population of 121,600 as against 43,065 directory names and a calculated population of 107,625 at the beginning of 1908. The gain is 13 per cent during the year. The school enrollment more than corroborates the increase shown by the directory, 12,944 names being listed for the second semester beginning February 1st, as against a total enrollment of 11,133 a year ago. This is a gain of 16 per cent. Commenting on this The Spokesman-Review says in an editorial:

"Barring the unexpected, a steady increase of 10 per cent is a conservative expectation. Spokane is the largest railroad center west of the Missouri river; the resources and climate of the Inland Empire are well exploited in the public mind, and the influx of emigration, with the development of irrigation, water power, mining, lumbering, dairying and poultry growing, manufacturing, railroad building and the innumerable incidental industries that necessarily must grow up along these basic resources, will, in all probability, give the Inland Empire and its metropolis a growth of wealth and population quite as surprising as the achievements of the past."

Increases its Capital Stock

Graham B. Dennis, a director of the Exchange National and capitalist, announces that the Warehouse Realty Company, of which he is president, has increased its capital from $150,000 to $1,000,000, the money being used to improve its property in the eastern part of Spokane. The first will be a six-story building on east Sprague Avenue. The structure will be built on 30-foot concrete piers and spur tracks from the several transcontinental railroads will run under the building. The floors will be subdivided into compartments to be used by small manufacturing concerns. The site is 1,484 feet in length, in addition to which Mr. Dennis owns 1,000 feet east of it.

Applies for Admission

Julius Bohm, general agent for the Pacific Coast territory, announces that the Columbia National Life Insurance Company, of which Arthur E. Childs of Boston is president, has applied for admission to the state of Washington. Mr. Bohm said in Spokane:

"Every dollar of premiums collected will be invested in Washington securities. Our company is seven years old, has $5,000,000 assets, more than $600,000 surplus, and a capital paid up of $1,000,000. Our insurance is strictly nonparticipating, accident and health."

The State Board of Finance

The state board of finance has bought at 4 per cent the $80,000 school bonds issued at Wenatchee, Wash., to build a high school and a ward school. During the last year the state board of finance has purchased the bonds of Cashmere, Wenatchee and Quincy, which bonded for the installation of water systems.

Old National Bank's Team

Bowlers on the Old National Bank's team, who have won most of the games in the city bowling league, will go to Seattle in May to participate in the annual tourney under the auspices of the Western bowling congress. The crack rollers are W. J. Kommers, assistant cashier; W. J. Smithson, Everett Lavendal, Joe Bailey, R. F. Bigelow and C. Koerner. The Old National's clerks have remarkable records as athletes. They have taken the championship of the bankers' baseball league three seasons, and have never been crowded for the bowling championship. Bailey is tennis champion of the Spokane Amateur Athletic club and Smithson is a member of the leaders' corps in gymnasium work. Lavendal is one of the regular forwards on Cook's gymnasium basket ball team and Kommers has also taught gymnasium work. Koerner was the star pitcher of the S. A. A. C. team two years ago, when it was in the city league.

An Off Year with the Legislature

E. E. Crabtree in closing his report at the Denver convention as vice-president for the state of Illinois, made this significant remark: "No bank legislation has been enacted as it is an off year with the legislature."

An almost audible smile traversed a part of the vast audience for the reason that it is very well known that most years are "off years" for the Illinois legislature when you are speaking of banking legislation. This state has not kept pace with her rapidly advancing neighbors, for practically the entire Mississippi valley, except Illinois and Iowa, has put banking under state supervision and partially, if not entirely, eliminated private banking.

The younger generation of bankers in Illinois hope that before many years they will have a complete banking statute for this state which shall regulate, inspect, and supervise all banking as it is regulated, inspected, and supervised in the progressive, contiguous states. A financial paper like the CHICAGO BANKER can no more print in detail, all the reasons why these reforms have been adopted, than a self-respecting daily paper can print in full the evidence in most divorce trials at court.

Leading banks and trust companies are not at complete business liberty in the matter and for business reasons chiefly occupy neutral ground. But the world moves and so does all banking reform. The great state of Minnesota waged a three-year fight before it succeeded in eradicating private banking from that growing commonwealth.

Having gone thus far in the proper direction, its state legislature is now considering a bill for the complete establishment, with full authority, of a state banking department and a full staff of bank examiners, who will work for a salary and not for fees. Under this new act, the superintendent of banking in Minnesota will be appointed by the governor for a three-year term and the act, as drawn, contemplates that he must be a practical banker "of not less than five years' active experience and shall not, during the term of his office, hold any other public or private position." Neither will any bank examiner in Minnesota be allowed to "accept fees, presents or employment from banks or corporations." The chief examiner will be under a heavy bond. All important business of his office must be transacted under a seal. His authority will extend over state banks, savings banks, trust companies, and building-loan associations within the state. He will not have authority over private banks for there are none in the state any more. He or his assistants are to examine all institutions not less than twice a year and he will have full authority to "investigate the character and value of the assets of all corporations under his supervision." He is to be the judge of their "systems of accounting as well as their methods of operation." All these must be "in accordance with the law and with sound banking principles." He will have authority to put officers, directors, trustees, and employees, as well as customers or depositors under oath for examination if necessary.

His power to issue subpoenas will be equal to that of any court, in fact, all courts of the state are directed to enforce obedience to his subpoena. His power and jurisdiction extend over books, accounts and documents, as well as over individuals connected with the banks and trust companies. A severe penalty is to be imposed against those who refuse to obey his instructions or testify falsely under oath. The punishment includes a fine and imprisonment.

A distinct recognition of the organized banking fraternity has been included in section 9 of the new bill. Each congressional district is to have an examiner and more than one if the superintendent find it necessary. These examiners are to be appointed by the superintendent of banks but his selections are confined to "such names as are placed in nomination by the executive committee of the district group organization of the Minnesota bankers association." This is a most important provision. The group officers are directed that they "shall not propose the name of any man who has not had at least three years' active experience in banking business." Further than that, "all candidates for appointment shall furnish evidence of their qualifications as expert accountants and as to their general fitness for the duties of the position." These examiners shall have no other business connections nor any other public nor private duties while in the service of the state.

Examiners may be transferred from one district to another, however, by the state superintendent. He also will have the power to examine any national bank located within the state upon the same terms and conditions and "with the same thoroughness" that he examines state institutions. The passage of this new banking bill, taken in connection with those previously passed, will put Minnesota in the very forefront as an exponent of strictly modern, perfect and up-to-date methods of supervising and regulating her banking institutions.

Legislation hostile to banks is threatened in Iowa and the state where the flying wedge in banker politics originated is prepared for the contest. On the legislative committee upon which so much depends are D. H. McKee, of Davenport; Sears McHenry, of Denison, and H. T. Blackburn, of Des Moines. The committee is working strenuously to pass the bills of lading act, but there are a few vagrants before the legislature "regulating" banks and school treasurers for which the hammer is out. Taxation is a ripe subject in Iowa, always. The state association has entrusted that field of activity to E. M. Scott, of Cedar Rapids, George E. Pearsall, of Des Moines, and H. S. Howard, of Oskaloosa.

They are, above all else, practical men who govern the banks of Iowa. In most states bankers content themselves with passing resolutions in group or state meetings, condemning the postal bank. In a few states letter-writing has been the form the opposition has taken. In Iowa E. C. Lane, of Guthrie Center, set a new style. He got at least 90 per cent of his depositors to sign a petition to Congress against all postal bank enactments, and all Iowa is following suit. This, probably, is the most effective form opposition has yet taken.

The wind did its level best to call attention to the miles of bunting and thousands of flags with which loyal and admiring Chicagoans celebrated the memory of the Great Emancipator. It was a howling success.

Just as Washington gets up a Japanese war scare when it wants to pass a battleship appropriation, the civic reform societies of Chicago threaten in a timely way to send a sheriff or some other official to Joliet for "graft" on the eve of filling the mails with letters asking "support." Must work or it wouldn't be kept up by those who make their living reforming other people.

They have a "Bank of England" down in Arkansas, but its discount rates do not affect stock values and it rarely imports gold.

The new Secretary of the Treasury will not fail to earn his salary. The outlook is not clear. Not all of the depositary banks had paid up the January call for deposits when the second one was sent out. The outgoing treasurer is seeking to build up his cash before March 4th. It doesn't look like more than $65,000,000 free cash for the new secretary to begin business on.

Other calls upon deposits or the issue of gold bonds seem to be the likely alternatives. The national monetary commission is getting blamed for the situation.

Holyoke Savings Banks

The prospect of any of the Holyoke, Mass., savings banks taking out an agency for the savings bank insurance does not seem to be especially bright. There was a rumor at one time that the Mechanics' Bank might be induced to take up the matter, and while it is believed that if the plan was different that the directors might be favorable, yet under the present arrangement it is not probable that they will care to take it up. The present plan does not make it any object for a bank to take up the plan, the only good which they would be apt to get out of it being one of advertisement, with the possibility that those who took out insurance might become depositors in the bank. Acting as an agent with only money allowed for practically the actual expense of forwarding premiums to the bank of which they were the agent would be apt to be rather exorbitant pay for the advertisement received.

It is understood that the bank itself cannot put in a guaranty fund so as to become an office for the insurance, but that the guaranty fund at present must come from outside the institution. It is generally believed that later a different arrangement may be made, and perhaps a central state insurance office established which will make it a better proposition for the savings banks to take up the insurance department. As the people become more familiar with the plan it is also probable that there will be a larger demand for such departments or agencies in the different cities of the state, and arrangements may be made by the state so that they can be provided. The whole question, as the recent speaker stated, rests on the fact whether the workingmen of the state are far enough advanced in their reasoning powers so that they will voluntarily go and make application for an insurance policy without having to be dragged there by the collar by some insurance solicitor.

Michigan Banking News

By W. T. FOSTER

A meeting of those interested in the new bank at Hubbell was in session when officers for that institution were elected as follows:

President, Henry Opal; vice-president, Joseph Ethier, Sr.; second vice-president, D. K. Macdonald; cashier, Selden B. Crary, at present cashier of the Calumet State Bank at Laurnum. The directors are as follows: Henry Opal, Joseph Ethier, Sr., D. K. Macdonald, Selden B. Crary, A. L. Burgan, Joseph LeBlanc, Sr., M. E. O'Brien, Louis Thurmes, Alexander Levin, E. X. Gillet and Dr. George W. Orr.

Temporary quarters will be rented next week and those interested propose erecting a fine new bank in the spring, a lot having been secured on Duncan Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the village. The bank will have a capital of $25,000, with a surplus of $25,000. All the stock has been subscribed, the greater portion being held by local merchants.

New Form Adopted by C. H. S., A. B. A.

Detroit banks, members of the Detroit Clearing House Association, are receiving circular letters from Fred E. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, describing a system of letters and numbers to be used on drafts and checks. These letters are being sent to the clearing house members of the 25 largest clearing house organizations in the country. The new form has been adopted by the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association. It is claimed that the use of the new form will be a decided advantage to the banks.

Fines Provided for Banks in New Amendments

That a penalty of $500 be provided against the bank for any violation of the present provision of the law requiring that the savings and commercial business be kept separate.

When the capital stock of a bank which is solvent and in fair standing is found by the commissioner after a thorough and careful examination, to be impaired, he shall estimate and assess upon its stockholders the amount of such impairment in proportion to their respective holdings, and order the same to be paid into the bank before a stated date, which shall not be less than 60 days from the date of assessment.

That the commissioner be empowered and authorized to enforce the collection of such assessment, and, if necessary, to sell at public or private sale the stock of a defaulting stockholder.

Automatic Receivership

That if the order of the commissioner as to the replacement of impaired capital is not complied with, or if the bank has violated any provision of the bank act, or is conducting its business in an unsafe or unauthorized manner, the commissioner shall lay such facts before the attorney-general and with his concurrence a receiver shall be asked for by petition to the court.

The commissioner shall in the meantime take possession of the bank. At any time thereafter when it shall appear to the court that by reorganization or otherwise, the debts and expenses can be paid, the court, on the suggestion of the commissioner, shall turn the bank over to its stockholders.

The committee further recommends that a section be added to the banking law, forbidding the use by any private or unincorporated banker of any business title indicating that the business is that of an incorporated bank and requiring that on signs, stationery, etc., the words "private banker" or "private bankers," shall appear.

The new legislation is largely based on the experiences of recent insolvent banks, and the bills are drawn by Hal H. Smith, secretary and attorney for the Michigan Bankers Association.

The committee that made the recommendations is composed of C. J. Monroe, M. W. O'Brien, William Livingstone, Frank W. Blair, Henry Idema, Daniel W. Briggs, J. Edward Roe and Hal H. Smith.

The Adrian State Savings Bank

The Adrian State Savings Bank has increased its capital stock from $60,000 to $120,000.

Lansing Has $2,000,000 Bank

For the first time in the city's history, Lansing is now able to boast of a $2,000,000 bank.

In response to the recent call of the Comptroller of the Currency, the City National Bank issued a statement which shows the total resources to be $2,278,845.62. The statement issued last November showed the amount to be approximately $300,000 less than these figures.

On May 4, 1901, the City National issued a statement which placed the institution in the $1,000,000 class. To double its resources in eight years must be considered a really remarkable gain, and the officials have every reason to feel proud of the showing they have made. The deposits as shown by the statement amount to $1,924,926.64.

A city is judged by the prosperity of its banks, and the fact that one bank doubled its business in less than eight years is only indicative of the fact that Lansing is taking rapid strides in the business world.

The Clarks State Bank

It is reported that the Clarks State Bank, owned by the stockholders in the Platte Valley State Bank, of Central City, has changed owners, being sold to F. E. Slusser and others of Wood River. The institution has been in charge of John McLean since it was established. Mr. McLean will continue as cashier of the institution.

The Lake City State Bank

The Lake City State Bank has filed articles of organization with a capital of $20,000.

Marvin H. Lewis Discusses the Importance of Credit in the Business World before the Louisville Chapter

Mr. Lewis, who is at the head of a stock and bond brokerage house in Louisville, began his address by relating an anecdote showing the ignorance of some people concerning banks and banking methods, then asked the question: "What is a bank?" which he answered by stating that "it is an institution which collects capital for the purpose of building up a credit, that, under proper restrictions, should be used to redound to the material good of the community as well as of the bank itself.

"Credit is not capital. It is the authority to use capital that belongs to some one else. While the capital loaned is part of the wealth of the lender, its use rests with the borrower. This transfer of capital is generally to hands more competent, or more willing to employ it efficiently.

"The actual money of a community is not increased by credit, but it is called into a more complete state of productive activity. Here is where the bank proves of greatest service. Small sums, previously lying idle, become aggregated in the banker's hands. Taught by experience what proportion of the amount is likely to be wanted in a given time, he is able to lend the far greater part of the remainder to producers and dealers; adding to what?—not to capital in existence, but to that in employment, thereby making a corresponding addition to the aggregate productive funds of the community.

"Credit, therefore, represents purchasing power. Those having credit and who avail themselves of it to purchase goods create just as much demand for the goods, and tend quite as much to raise their price, as if they made an equal amount of purchases with actual money. The borrower who receives his loan in money exerts no purchasing power over and above that conferred by the money. The forms of credit which create additional purchasing power are those in which no money passes at the time, and very often not at all, the transaction simply being included with a mass of others in an account, and nothing paid other than a balance. Hence, checks, notes, and bills of exchange, which play such an important part in the commercial life of to-day. By means of such instruments of credit the vast business of the world is largely carried forward.

"Lest some one should misapprehend what is to follow, it may be well to state now, when we come to consider the influence of credit on business, that the real value of money, or commodities, is determined by the cost of production. Ultimately money will exchange for other commodities, or vice versa, only to such an amount as can be produced at the same cost with itself. Prices, on the other hand, may temporarily vary widely from the standard of cost of production. Now, money acts upon prices in no other way than by being tendered in exchange for commodities, and the same is true of credits, no matter what form it takes. If we were to hoard our money, business would come to a stand still, or else people would do a small volume of trading by exchange of other commodities.

"But money is usually kept in circulation, and we reckon our transactions in dollars and cents. Nevertheless, it is a most common occurrence to make purchases with money not in our possession. We give a check to pay for commodities that enter into our daily business life. We do not really pay for them with money, but with its equivalent—our book credit at the bank. We also buy goods on faith and agree to pay for them at some future time. Suppose a merchant buys on credit in England. When it is time to settle the debt the usual method is to purchase sterling exchange to cover the amount." The speaker then explained the nature of a foreign bill of exchange and the methods of settlement of indebtedness between nations, as a concrete illustration of the fact that in foreign trades as well as home trade a book credit serves to economize the use of money.

"It thus becomes evident that we make purchases and establish credits in various ways. In other words, our purchasing power as a people is composed of all the money in our possession, or due us, and all the credit we can command. It is rarely that we exercise this full power, but it is ours, and to the extent that we use it just to that extent does it affect prices. If we decide that cotton, sugar, and Union Pacific common stock are cheap, in view of the state of their respective markets, and governing conditions generally, and wish to invest all of our ready money, and in addition what credit we can command, to buy with in the three, or any one of them, it is quite evident that we must produce a greater effect on the price of these commodities than if we had limited our purchases to the actual money in hand, or a portion of same. It not infrequently happens that other buyers are also attracted and their buying advances prices to a speculative extreme. Then there comes a time when prices cease to advance. Early buyers for the most part have already sold, or taken their profits, and others attempt to do so. Those still interested become uneasy. It transpires that there is no longer a rush to buy, but an eagerness to sell, and a rapid decline in prices ensues. Often heavy losses are sustained.

"It is possible, of course, that such things could happen in communities where credit is unknown, but it is extremely unlikely that there could be anything approaching a general advance in commodities without the aid of credit. . . . We certainly could not buy much of one thing without limiting our purchases of another. But if our credit be good, we may draw upon an unlimited fund, and it would be possible for a speculation thus supported to be going on in any number of commodities without in the least disturbing the prices of others. It might, as a matter of fact, extend to all commodities at once." The speaker illustrated this point by the general speculation antedating the panic of 1907, which was the logical result of that speculation.

"It follows, therefore, that the more credit a man has, the larger his purchasing power, and that the use he makes of his credit depends upon his expectation of profit; that in proportion as he uses it, just to that extent is the influence felt upon prices.

"But it is not always true that contraction of credit must have been preceded by an irrational and extraordinary extension of it." The panic of May 9th, 1901, which occurred at a time when general business was good and fundamental conditions appeared to be sound, was cited as an illustration. The sensational rise in Northern Pacific created a lack of confidence in the ability of brokerage houses, and individuals, to meet their engagements, and the contraction of credit on that account forced the reckless selling of other stocks and bonds at great sacrifice. "It was the same old story of lack of confidence, and it is safe to say that if this panic had not been checked and quick recovery in prices taken place, there would scarcely have been a solvent banking institution or brokerage firm in New York on the day following.

"From what has been said it follows that credit is the very life blood of the business world. Hence, a successful banker is one that not only has the ability to attract capital, but one who possesses a thorough knowledge of credits. . . . It is equally important that he should be posted in regard to securities dealt in on his local market and have more or less general knowledge of the securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange. . . . There are about $17,000,000,000 par value of American railroad securities outstanding, to say nothing of bank stocks, industrial stocks and bonds and those issued by public utility corporations. They enter into the credits of our banks and trust companies everywhere, for they are evidences of value, representing an interest in a corporate business. Hence, it is absolutely necessary for a banker who wishes to do business intelligently to have a knowledge of their market values and intrinsic worth.

"Banking is a great and growing business. A recent report of the Comptroller of the Currency estimates the banking power of the United States at $17,642,274,000, an amount exceeding the world's banking power in 1890, and an increase of 242 per cent since that year for this country alone. The banking power of foreign countries in the same time is said to have increased 159 per cent, and the combined banking power of the world, now estimated at $45,750,300,000, has risen 186 per cent. In such a growing business there is, of necessity, room at the top.

"There are few avocations that offer better opportunities to the young man than banking, always provided that young man has intelligence, perseverance and honesty which command success. Banking is a peculiar business. Its requirements are such that men must have proper training and experience. And to get this requires both time and brains. The receiving teller may greet the depositor affably, may check up his deposit slip correctly and quickly, and make the necessary entries: the paying teller, the discount clerk, the individual and general bookkeepers and the other employees may likewise attend to their respective duties efficiently, but it does not follow that these men will one day be qualified for the position of cashier or president. ### Baltimore Chapter Meeting

"Give us a national clearing house bank to be owned by all the banks—not by the government or by one bank."

This was the plea made Saturday night by Charles H. Treat, treasurer of the United States, in an address before the Baltimore Chapter of the American Institute of Banking.

The bank, Mr. Treat declared, should have a capital of 200 million dollars to 500 million dollars and should be allowed to issue national bank currency and be a government depository and a reserve agent for all banks doing business with it. It should have the right to buy and sell foreign exchange and the privilege of rediscounting the bankable paper of its shareholders at a rate of interest not exceeding 4 per cent, of which 25 per cent would be left as a margin as is now done by the clearing house bank association on its loans.

"This clearing house bank would furnish a market for the balances of urban banks, to be invested in commercial paper at convenient seasons in the year," said Mr. Treat.

"It also would give an opportunity for the city banks to invest their money more in commercial paper and less on the stock exchange. This method would give elasticity to our credits as well as an ample supply of currency and there would be no scarcities or famines in currency thereafter."

Mr. Treat declared the national banking system richly deserved credit instead of the persistent attacks made upon it. The system was not too expensive, he insisted. Rather, it gave a fair return on investment and protected the government's credit.

Mr. Treat said it would be a dangerous fallacy to permit national bank notes to be counted as reserve and said that this would inaugurate such a wild expansion as would make the greenback craze seem infantile.

Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma also addressed the meeting.

Spokane Chapter Meeting

At the regular meeting of the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the members held a debate, taking for their question, "Resolved: That Senator Carter's proposed Postal Savings Bank Law, if enacted, would promote the best interests of the country." CHICAGO

Trust Companies Reduce Interest Rate

In New York and in several sections of the state informal movements are in progress with a view to reducing interest rates paid on deposits by bank and trust companies. Tangible results have been accomplished in Rochester, Buffalo, and Albany, while in New York, although there has been no concerted action, there has been considerable scaling down of payments by various institutions since the law required the trust companies to reserve in their vaults $150 of every $1,000 deposits.

Heretofore as high as 4 per cent has been allowed by more than one trust company on certain accounts, while 3 per cent has not been uncommon. It would not be an exaggeration to say that the general practice has been to grant from 2½ to 3 per cent on the average run of accounts. The evils arising from competition for deposits, involving the payment of unreasonably high rates, are recognized alike by the banking authorities and by the officers of banks and trust companies, but no hopes are held out that the practice can be abolished forthwith. There is, however, a widespread desire to limit rates to amounts consistent with conservative banking, and as stated, some progress has already been made along these lines.

Bids for Ohio State Funds

Columbus, Ohio, February 15.—D. S. Creamer to-day furnished abundant evidence that the charges he made during the last campaign that the state was not receiving sufficient interest for its funds deposited in state banks were true. At noon the treasurer, Auditor of State Fullington and Attorney-General U. G. Denman began the opening and tabulation of the bids for the use of that large surplus now deposited in banks through the state. The work was only completed late in the night, and no action was taken as to whom the money will be loaned. In all there were more than 350 banking institutions which signified their willingness to handle the state funds by entering the competition.

Holds Up Bank for Cash to Wed

Barnesville, Ohio, February 15.—Pointing a revolver at Cashier Frank Harrison in the First National of Barnesville, a stranger demanded $41 to-day, and got it. Police to-night arrested George Barlow, at Cambridge. Barlow said he was on his way to Coalton to be married.

Steals $3,800 at First National

Milwaukee, Wis., February 15.—Grabbing a hand satchel containing $3,800 belonging to a big department store, a daring thief to-day made his way out of the First National, East Water and Wisconsin streets, with the loot, and escaped detection.

For safety an almost fifty per cent reserve has been carried. Mr. Pratt has kept his bank clear from engaging in any local business in competition with his depositors. Some banks have made woeful mistakes in this. S. H. Sierson is president.

An All-Western Casualty Company

An all-western casualty company, to be known as the Midland Casualty Company, has been completely organized in Chicago under an Illinois charter. The company is not a stock-selling venture but a straight-for-business compact. The following well known men have been elected to the board of directors: H. P. Albaugh, president Albaugh-Dover Co.; Wm. G. Agar, manager and secretary Agar Packing Co., Des Moines and Chicago, president Iowa Glue Co.; R. S. Bates, secretary Midland Casualty Co.; F. S. ## The "Busiest" Man in Minneapolis

Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, who devoted his energies as a bank clerk toward the formation of the first chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and later as a banker got after the express companies for doing a banking business without a charter, gives a good deal of time in these days to civic matters. He is on the board of charities and corrections, which controls the work house, poor farm, etc. He goes up to the work house regularly twice a month and inspects the workings. Now he has taken strong hold of the Publicity club work and is one of a committee of twenty-one citizens which is going to try to get pure water for Minneapolis. The water system is all right and, except at seasons of the year, the water supply seems to be pure, but the majority of the people pay a double water tax because they buy spring or distilled water for table use. The committee will see a filtration, or other pure water system put into operation as soon as possible.

John J. Mitchell

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust & Savings Bank of this city, has gone to California until May.

Amendment to Regulate Banking

Sacramento, Cal., February 16.—To correct what the holdover committee on banking considers a dangerous condition that can not be reached at present, Senator Leavitt, one of the framers of the new banking act, has introduced a constitutional amendment empowering the legislature to classify cities and towns by population for the purpose of regulating the banking business. Under the present law a bank can be started for the transaction of a savings and commercial business on a capital of $25,000. While this provision meets the requirements of small communities, it is regarded as dangerous in large cities. If the constitution is amended a larger minimum capital will be required of banks in large cities.

L. S. McDonald's "Checkerberry"

The Cochrane Publishing Co. of New York has put out a fine juvenile by Lucretia S. McDonald. #### A Bill against Loan Sharks

Senator Casey of Kansas City has introduced a bill which he said he believed would make the loan shark business less profitable in the large cities. It provides that no assignment of wages shall be good unless the wages have been earned and the dates of labor and the amount due are specifically set out in the assignment.

"This bill," Casey said, "will hold the loan sharks in our city a little. They buy assignments of wages, and you never can get them paid, because the interest counts up so fast. These men would take an assignment of your right eye and go out and collect it. If this bill becomes a law it will stop their pet practice which is to collect $1 down and $1 a week forever."

The Continental Bank and Trust Company

Announcement has been made that the Continental Bank and Trust Company, which has been operated as a banking institution in Sherman, Tex., for about two years as a branch of the Continental Bank and Trust Company of Fort Worth, is no longer connected with that institution, but will hereafter be operated as a state bank, chartered under the laws of Texas with a paid-up capital stock of $75,000. The directors of the institution are C. A. Andrews, William Vinson, H. L. Sheehey, Dr. G. S. Ellis, J. L. Bradley and C. A. Sanford of Sherman, and J. G.

Wilkerson of Fort Worth. The officers are: J. G. Wilkerson of Fort Worth, president, Dr. G. S. Ellis and C. A. Andrews of Sherman, vice-presidents; C. A. Sanford, cashier, and W. E. Hutt, assistant cashier. The institution will be known as the Continental State Bank, and all of the officers and directors are well known capitalists representing many thousands of dollars more than the capital stock of the bank.

St. Louis Clearing House Banks

The condensed statement of the St. Louis Clearing House banks prepared from the reports submitted in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency February 5th, shows a pronounced increase in almost all branches of the banking business. Cash resources of all the banks increased in the same period from $117,408,013 to $124,917,885, or $7,509,871, and loans increased from $56,076,591 to $62,572,135. The new bank will open Monday at 545 Delaware Street in the rooms once occupied by the National Bank of Commerce.

St. Louis Money Market

Transactions at the St. Louis banks and trust companies continue in good volume. There is no change of note in the general situation. Funds with all the banks continue plentiful, and borrowers are not at all aggressive in their demands. Not much betterment in rates is looked for before spring agricultural needs begin to be felt. Collections are quite satisfactory, and general business is picking up right along. Rates remain unchanged between 4 and 5½ per cent.

New Bank for Lufkin

"Lufkin (Tex.) is to have another bank within 30 days," is the statement made by one of Lufkin's most prominent business men. #### Oklahoma's Commissioner to be Strict

To prevent the organization of state banks in greater numbers than the needs of a community require, the state bank commissioner of Oklahoma will refuse to issue certificates permitting a bank to open for business unless he is satisfied that the bank has proper amount of capital stock.

A bill is pending in the legislature fixing the minimum capitalization of banks on a population basis, and is intended to discourage attempts at speculative banking under the guaranty law. It will be the policy of the bank commissioner to forbid a reduction in the capital stock of national banks that become state banks.

Kansas City Banks

High record deposits are shown in the statements of Kansas City national banks in the statements published in response to the call of the Comptroller of the Currency. The total lacks less than half a million dollars of being a round 100 millions. It is more than 4 millions greater than the previous high record on August 22, 1907, just before the financial disturbance at the end of that year. The total deposits now are 6¾ millions greater than were shown in the last preceding statements, published November 27, 1908.

Turns Down Bank Guaranty

The Texas house committee on banks and banking Saturday night reported adversely on the three state bank deposit guaranty bills that were before it, thereby ignoring the influence of William J. Bryan and the whole state administration, which was brought to bear on behalf of one of the measures.

The administration bank guaranty bill was drafted by T. B. Love, state commissioner of insurance, and contained certain provisions which were suggested by Mr. Bryan when he last visited Texas. The supporters of the bill will endeavor to have it brought before the house on a minority report.

N. B. Van Slyke Dead

Madison, Wis., February 15.—N. B. Van Slyke, veteran Madison banker, died at 6:30 o'clock last night of pneumonia after an illness of three days. Mr. Van Slyke came to Madison at an early period. In 1856 when the city of Madison was incorporated, Mr. Van Slyke was chosen alderman of the Second ward. He was regent of the university and for twelve years, chairman of the executive committee. ### A National Banker's Opinion

"I think Comptroller of Currency Murray has adopted some very worthy reforms in his department," said a Detroit national banker Monday morning. "Especially commendable is the rule that the new national bank examiner-at-large will have the duty of going to any national bank which may be found in an unsatisfactory condition or until such a result is definitely in sight. This is very much after the same plan the state banking department of Michigan outlines in some of the proposed new legislation for this state. The aim is to permit the department to take hold of a bank and stay with it until it can be turned back to its owners in good condition."

The Mutual Building and Savings Association

A gratifying increase in assets, membership and shares of stock in force, is shown in the annual statement of the Mutual Building and Savings Association of Milwaukee, which has been filed with the secretary of state. The report shows that the total assets of the association are $173,587.20, with liabilities of a like sum, an increase of $33,576.16 for the year 1908. The total receipts for the year were $103,153.24. The association has a reserve fund of over $7,000. The membership contains 400 names and there are 5,000 shares of stock issued. Bank deposits aggregate $160,000. A dividend of 6 per cent was declared in December.

The association is a Milwaukee institution entirely, loaning its money on Milwaukee real estate only. The object of the association is to provide money for persons to buy or build houses on the monthly payment plan. In 1908 $59,340 was loaned on Milwaukee real estate. The association has been in existence for sixteen years. Officers for this year are: President, Francis J. Rickert; vice-president, Adolph Bleyer; secretary, Joseph M. Crowley, treasurer, W. A. Arnold.

The New Orleans Money Market

New York Banking and News Letter

By J. R. MORGAN

By a vote of three to two the up-state public service commission in Albany has granted the application of the Erie railroad to issue $30,000,000 of thirty-year 5 per cent collateral trust bonds substantially on the basis on which the road originally asked the issue. This issue of bonds will enable the Erie to refund its maturing three-year notes, dated March 31, 1908, and if 90 per cent of the holders of its general lien bonds and its general mortgage convertible bonds consent, to take up the interest coupons maturing during the next five years to the extent of $11,380,000.

Assessments upon Bank Stocks

The legislature of New York during the past week passed through both houses a bill providing that assessments made by New York City's Board of Taxes and Assessments from 1901 to 1907 upon bank stocks in the city shall be reopened, and that after the owners of these shall have had opportunity to make the regular statement of grievances the board shall have full power to cancel, reduce, or confirm the tax assessments.

About $15,000,000 in taxes to the city of New York are involved in the bill. The taxes are levied, but owners have objected in court because no opportunity was given them to apply for reduction or cancellation. The reopening of the assessments provides for carrying out this formality.

First National of Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

The First National of Mt. Pleasant, Pa., is the oldest national bank in Westmoreland County, and was organized February 20, 1864, just forty-five years ago to-day. The bank was organized with a capital of $50,000, its capital now being $100,000. The First National has paid no interest

ity. The presidents have been, C. S. Overholt, serving 12 years, John Sherrick 3 years, Henry W. Stoner 26 years, John D. Hitchman, the present incumbent, nearly 4 years.

The cashiers have been: John Sherrick, Henry Jordan, Geo. W. Stoner, John D. Hitchman, passed through all the financial stringencies, paying in full all demands made upon it. The present board of directors are: W. B. Neel, Jos. R. Stauffer, J. C. Crownover, Geo. W. Stoner, James S. Hitchman, Samuel N. Warden, John D. Hitchman, Isaac Sherrick, and James S. Brad-

Its first officers were C. S. Overholt, president; John Sherrick, cashier; Henry Jordan, bookkeeper. Directors: C. S. Overholt, John Sherrick, W. B. Neel, Henry W. Stoner, A. Horbaugh, W. D. Mullin, J. B. Jordan, James McConoughey, John D. McCaleb. Four of the aforesaid are living, namely: C. S. Overholt, J. B. Jordan, W. B. Neel, Henry W. Stoner, their ages ranging from 83 to 93 years. W. B. Neel is yet an active member of the board of directors and seldom misses a meeting, he has served continually for 44 years. Henry W. Stoner served as a director for 42 years and was president for 26 years. He resigned two years ago on account of general debil-again Geo. W. Stoner, present incumbent. The first year the cashier was paid a salary of $400.00, the president served several years without salary. In 1870 the capital was increased to $75,000.00, in 1872 to $100,000.00, in 1875 to $150,000.00, in 1888 the directors deemed the capital too large, they reduced it to $100,000.00, its present capital. The largest dividend paid annually was 12 per cent, the lowest, 6 per cent; it has averaged over 10 per cent.

At the end of the first year's business, the statement showed, capital $50,000.00, deposits $49,364.28; the last statement, in round figures, capital, surplus and undivided profits, $200,000.00, deposits $411,000.00. It has always been conducted along safe and conservative lines, and has dock. Recently in connection with the Citizens Savings & Trust Company, they erected one of the finest, modern bank buildings in western Pennsylvania a half-tone of which is shown on this page.

The history of the bank would not be complete without giving due credit to the late W. J. Hitchman, who was for over 25 years a director and the active power in outlining its policies. He was ably assisted by such conservative men as Samuel Warden, William Snyder, W. D. Mullin and Dr. J. H. Clark, all of whom are deceased, and W. B. Neel and Henry W. Stoner, heretofore spoken of. The deceased directors mentioned served as directors for periods of 15 to 25 years, terms of service more extended than usual.

Echo des Sports, Paris, says in its December number: "A fact to be signalized is the increasing development of the six-cylinder engine. Today there is only one well-known firm (in France) abstaining, but it will have to go in line with the others, for one cannot fight against such a unanimous tide of opinion as that which is manifest in favor of the six-cylinder."

That shows the trend of things abroad.

In this country many makers are either producing or planning to produce sixes. However, there is only one company either in this country or abroad that produces sixes exclusively — The Winton Motor Carriage Co. The fact that this great institution has put all its faith upon sixes testifies eloquently how superior a car must be the self-starting, sweet-running

Banking News, Milwaukee—Wisconsin District

Senator Walter C. Owen of Maiden Rock has in readiness for introduction a bill for the guaranty of state bank deposits that is expected to meet favorable consideration. It already has been presented to several members of the upper and lower house and those in favor of the Oklahoma brand of legislation say that it meets their approval.

Senator Owen's bill places the percentage of deposits to be placed in a safety fund at 1 per cent of deposits, the same as the rate in Oklahoma. This rate, however, is to be in effect only two years, approximately, or until such time as the fund of each bank reaches 2 per cent of deposits. Thereafter the banks are supposed to put aside 1-10 of 1 per cent each year to add to the original 2 per cent fund. The Owen bill provides that each bank shall maintain its own fund, instead of depositing it with a state commission, the assumption being that the state bank department will be able to keep strict watch on this fund as it does of the percentage of capital, surplus, deposits, etc., at the present time.

According to the terms of Mr. Owen's bill the state bank department is to draw a pro rata amount from each state bank's safety fund whenever any one of its members fails, the guaranty fund of each bank being always subject to the state's draft.

One clause of Mr. Owen's bill is of special interest. It provides that the state shall refuse a certificate to any bank seeking to organize in a community, when in the opinion of the department, the business of the community does not warrant the establishment of the bank seeking a charter. Another phase of the measure is that the safety fund feature shall not apply to any bank which pays interest of a higher rate than 3 per cent to depositors.

Wisconsin Wants Paid Secretary

The executive council of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is planning to follow the lead of associations of Minnesota, Illinois and other states and secure the services of a paid secretary, and if this step is taken, George D. Bartlett, who recently resigned as cashier of the Citizens' State Bank, at Stanley, will be asked to take the position. Mr. Bartlett is an active worker in the state association and a few years ago divided the organization into groups. He is now secretary of Group One. He is the founder of the insurance department of the association and is now secretary of this branch. Mr. Bartlett has shown great ability in bringing bank robbers to justice and took a leading hand in rounding up the yeggmen who recently burglarized banks at Warrens, Ladysmith and Holcombe.

Fourteen Millions to be Spent on New City

A new city, like Gary, Ind., is to be built by the United States Steel Corporation around a plant to be erected at a point on the St. Louis River, within three miles of Superior.

The blast furnaces are to be located on the Minnesota side of the river, but auxiliary plants are to be located on the Wisconsin side of the river.

The Steel Corporation has purchased and cleared 1,600 acres of land on the Wisconsin side. The sum of $14,500,000 has been set aside, plans have been drawn, and the same construction crew which put in the steel plant at Gary has been ordered to Superior to begin work when spring opens.

The State Bank of Prairie Farm

Milwaukee National Banks

The call by the Comptroller for a statement at the close of business February 5th, found Milwaukee national banks in a most satisfactory condition as compared with the corresponding statement February 14, 1908, and considerably better than that made on November 27th, last. The six national banks in Milwaukee show an aggregate increase in loans and discounts, deposits, surplus and undivided profits and aggregate resources of many thousands, in each, over the totals of a year ago. While it is fully realized that a year ago the country was in the midst of a great financial depression, the improvement in conditions shown since November last, is taken as most satisfactory considering all things, and indicates a steady, although slow, improvement in general trade conditions. The state banks also make satisfactory showings.

The Suring State Bank

A charter authorizing the Suring State Bank of Suring, Oconto county, with a capital of $15,000, to commence business was issued by the commissioner of banking, M. C. Bergh. The officers of the bank are F. J. Martin, president; W. J. Thielke, cashier.

Back from the East

Oliver C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, of Milwaukee, has returned to Milwaukee from a business trip to various Eastern points. Mr. Fuller is optimistic over the improvement that has taken place in Eastern business centers.

Capital Stock Increased

The capital stock of the Commercial & Savings Bank of Racine, has been increased from $100,000 to $400,000.

Sheboygan State Banks

Sheboygan's four state banks held a total of $5,055,647 deposits February 5th, according to statements made in answer to a call from the state banking department.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank

In and Around Pittsburgh

By LATIMER T. LAWTON

Reports from the national banks of Pittsburgh under the call of the Comptroller of the Currency for condition at the close of business February 5th show the wonderful improvement that has taken place within a year.

Deposits of 29 banks are $172,568,566, an increase of a little more than $11,000,000 as compared with the corresponding statement of last year, and about $1,500,000 more than under the call of last November. Seventy days intervened between these last calls, and in that time the surplus and profits of the banks increased about $80,000 in the face of the fact that the majority of these institutions have declared and paid the usual dividends for the quarter.

The First National of Pittsburgh

The First National of Pittsburgh reports the largest increase in deposits of any Pittsburgh institution in the last year and since the statement of November 27, 1908. Total deposits are now $19,255,429, an increase in less than three months of $1,640,836, and in less than a year of $3,332,799.

This expansion of business is an expression of confidence in the new management, with James S. Kuhn as president and William S. Kuhn as vice-president. These two are well known in New York financial circles. President James S. Kuhn is a director and a member of the executive committee of the rehabilitated Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. The bank possesses an influential board of directors. The other officers are: Cashier, F. H. Richard; assistant cashiers, T. C. Griggs, Alexander Murdoch and William McK. Reed.

Enterprise Bank Bookkeeper Released

His term of imprisonment shortened by President Roosevelt, Charles Menzemer, former bookkeeper of the looted Enterprise National, has been released from the Western Penitentiary. Accompanied by James W. Drape, who labored hard for his release, and Rev. H. L. Smith of the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church, Menzemer entered a closed carriage and was driven to his home in Bellevue. He refused to give any interviews.

He will remain at home for a few days and then enter the real estate office of Mr. Drape.

Edward P. McMillan, former general bookkeeper at the bank, will leave the penitentiary July 7th, his sentence also having been commuted by the President.

The Bank of Pittsburgh

The Bank of Pittsburgh, National Association, has issued its statement in a very handsome folder in colors. It calls attention to the long history of this bank, it being the oldest west of the mountains and shows total deposits of $17,095,782, an increase of $450,000 since the last statement and a gain of nearly $6,000,000 in five years as follows:

|                   |                   |
|-------------------|-------------------|
| January 22, 1904  | .....$11,240,472 |

Iowa Banking News

By W. C. JARNAGIN

Des Moines, February 18.—Des Moines national banks have made a clear gain of $2,000,000 in deposits since November 27th. This fact is shown by the reports of the four institutions in the statements prepared in response to the call from the comptroller issued last week. The showing is considered as remarkable and at the same time as especially pleasing when contrasted to the conditions that prevailed a year ago.

Frank Roberts of the Iowa banking department states that there will be no call from the state and savings banks at this time but Des Moines bankers in these institutions state that similar conditions prevail in all of the banks of Des Moines.

"It is a showing of which bankers have reason to be proud," said Vice-President MacKinnon of the Mechanics Savings. "I believe that the next statements of the state and savings banks in Des Moines will break all records."

The gain as shown by the reports of the four national banks is as follows: Des Moines National, $640,000; Iowa National, $620,000; Citizen's National, $440,000; Valley National $300,000.

The gain is the largest that the Des Moines National ever reported between calls. The Valley National also reports that the showing is better than was ever before made by the institution. The Iowa National and Citizen's National are decidedly well pleased with the showing in each case.

Sioux City Banks

Sioux City national banks also make a remarkable showing. The eight banking institutions of Sioux City, national and state and savings are $1,255,218.12 ahead of the deposits, the last call. The total is $12,654,847.29. The increase on deposits in the banks in the larger cities applies to banks in all of the centers of the state. It is due largely bankers say, to an increase of balances in the country banks over the state. At this time of year, there is not the demand for money locally from the country banks and the city banks reap the benefits. This year Iowa's favorite corn crop has been financed earlier than usual. A less amount of corn has been fed and a greater amount sold and therefore a larger percentage of it has been deposited in the banks. Again, merchants report much liquidation of debts throughout the state because of the sale of crops and stock, which is always lively at this season. The influx of money into the cash drawers of the merchants can have nothing but a helpful effect upon the banks.

Iowa Legislative News

Another week has passed of the Iowa legislative session. But strange to say not a bill has been introduced this week particularly affecting bankers. But the question of taxation of mortgages is interesting bankers who are taking an active part in the committee hearing upon this question. The ways and means committees of the two houses met in joint session to consider the taxation of mortgages question at which several banks were represented by attorneys and W. H. Wilson, attorney for the Davenport Savings, spoke against the bill. The essential paragraph to the bill is as follows:

"A tax of 50 cents is hereby imposed upon each hundred dollars or fraction thereof of the principal debt or obligation which is or in any contingency may be secured by any mortgage of real property situated within the state which mortgage is recorded or registered on or after April 30, 1909. Provided that if any such mortgage shall describe any real estate situated outside the state such tax shall be imposed upon such proportion of the whole debt secured thereby as the value of the real estate described therein situated in this state bears to the value of the whole real estate described herein."

Exempting All Mortgages

There is a following section of the law exempting all mortgages from any other taxation and providing that no mortgage is valid until the tax is paid. A delegation of tax ferrets spoke against the bill and Mr. Wilson asserted that in his opinion the state is starting in a wrong direction. He argued for a low rate annual tax upon moneys and credits as a better law than the one proposed. The committee took no action but will meet again. Senator Jackson of Sioux City, the booster for the bill, displayed letters from Minnesota and elsewhere showing that the tax on mortgages has for the most part been satisfactory.

Postal Savings Bank Amendments

Iowans are interested in the outcome before Congress of Senator Cummins' postal savings bank amendments. According to gossip which has reached Iowa from Washington, friends of the Carter postal savings bill believe that the Cummins' amendment to strike out the provisions exempting postal savings from garnishment or other legal processes will seriously hamper the real purposes of the measure. This would, they say, cripple its benefits to the poor man and wage earner since they will be expected to deposit in these postal banks their entire substance and to make them subject to garnishment would result in sending many of them to the poorhouse. The Cummins' amendment making the postal savings funds subject to taxation is also rigorously opposed on similar grounds. The Cummins' amendment, providing that the postal funds may be deposited in state and savings banks as well as national institutions is finding favor.

the people of Iowa relative to investment opportunities in Iowa. Articles of incorporation have been drawn up and it is proposed to make the club a power in financial circles.

The Merchants National

The Saturday Record of Cedar Rapids makes the following editorial comment upon the fine showing of the Merchants National of that city: "The Merchants National, in its statement of February 5th, published elsewhere in The Record, shows that it is near the five million dollar mark. In fact, had the call come two days later, it would have shown resources within almost touching distance of that figure. The Merchants National, with its capital of $200,000, surplus of $200,000 and deposits of $4,198,000, is one of Iowa's strongest national banks, holding rank among the first three of the state, and as such it well reflects the prosperous and active life of the city of Cedar Rapids."

Banking Notes

The bankers of Des Moines are always ready to do their part for a worthy cause. A tuberculosis colony has been established near Des Moines and $1,000 has been put down as the amount necessary to conduct it until spring. The Des Moines bankers at once assumed one-third of this amount and will furnish $300.

Charles P. Hunter of Laurel has been elected as a director in the Laurel Savings at Laurel. Senator F. L. Maytag is president of the bank, L. R. Maytag vice-president and A. L. Moser cashier.

Cashier Hjerleid of Decorah, who was named as national bank examiner to succeed the late E.

B. Shaw, who died at Carroll, cannot accept the appointment after all. Hjerleid was appointed after a fight in which politics played an important part, but he has issued a statement to the effect that because of an ailment which is affecting his hearing, he cannot take the position. He has been at Washington.

Sioux City officers have captured three men whom they believe dynamited the bank of Hadan, Neb., in January, securing $1,939 in cash. Hadan is a few miles removed from Norfolk.

H. V. Chase has been made assistant cashier of the First National at Alta while J. E. McLaughlin is promoted to his position as head bookkeeper.

Liberty Center is to have a new bank and a new building for it. The building will be one story, brick, modern equipment and will cost when complete $3,000. J. I. Mills of the Farmers Bank is in charge of the construction.

Louis Slimmer of Waverly and W. R. Ray of Allison, two Northeastern Iowa bankers, were in the city last week visiting at the legislature.

The board of supervisors of Wapello county at Ottumwa has voted to issue bonds of $96,000 to raise the county from its indebtedness. They will bear 4 per cent and will cover from six to ten years.

The First Savings at Sutherland announces a handsome new structure.

Although the week closing February 13th was one day short because of Lincoln's birthday, which has been made a legal holiday in Iowa, bank clearings in Des Moines exceeded those of the corresponding week last year by $401,430.50. The total was $2,716,265.61.

Evolves Bank Guaranty Deposit Bill

The members of the committee that was appointed to frame a uniform bank guaranty measure for Nebraska, have completed their work and have made a draft of the bill and it was submitted to the two general committees on banking at the meeting Thursday afternoon. The bill as framed by the subcommittee with the assistance of Judge Albert, provides for an immediate payment and a guaranty fund of 2 per cent of the deposits. Instead of an entire revision of the banking laws such as have been recommended in the bills of both Wilson and Volpp, the subcommittee has framed a measure that will add a simple guaranty clause to the present law. A number of changes had to be made in the law as it exists at present so that the guaranty feature could be added, but the laws in general have not been altered. The measure permits the national banks to take advantage of the provisions of the law.

The bill as it has been trimmed and pruned by Judge Albert and the committee is of a much less bulk than the former measure and all of the superfluous provisions are said to have been removed from the measure.

The belief that Judge Albert would get no money for his work on the bill has been disproved by the decision of Attorney-General Thompson, who has decided that the judge is an employee of one of the houses and as such will be paid in the same manner as any other employee. The only doubt in the case is that the houses have not yet approved his appointment.

California Banking News

By WILLIAM J. HOLLISTER

Homer S. King, president of the bank of California, was re-elected president of the San Francisco Clearing House Association at the annual meeting of that body. Ignatz Steinhart of the Anglo-California Bank was elected vice-president, and William H. High of the International Banking Corporation secretary. Homer S. King, C. K. McIntosh, F. L. Lipman, James K. Lynch and Alden Anderson were elected to membership in the clearing house committee.

The London-Paris National

The London-Paris National of San Francisco has issued a statement of its financial condition at the close of business on Friday, February 5th, showing its resources to be on that day $14,145,476.04; deposits, $9,140,748.81; surplus and undivided profits, $852,056.20. Compared with the previous statement of November 27, 1908, the bank has increased its total resources during that brief period $1,275,622.47; deposits, $468,891.71; surplus and undivided profits, $91,154.45. Its circulation has increased during the same period from $449,400 to $1,250,000.

Meeting of Committee on Banking

At the meeting of the committee on banking last Thursday to discuss Curtin's bank tax amendment, the bankers declared that it seeks to impose excessive burdens upon financial institutions and would lead to panics. Senator Wright agreed with the bankers. The chief speaker was Frank B. Anderson of the Bank of California, chairman of the committee on taxation, appointed by the San Francisco clearing house. He said that a tax of 1 per cent on bank capital and surplus, as recommended by the hold-over taxation committee, was excessive. "It would cause a readjustment of business conditions that would be revolutionary," he declared, "and such hardship as came from the change would fall not upon the banks but on the public." The bankers were unanimous in the opinion that a tax on capital and surplus would tend to promote wildcat banking methods, and they agreed that if any tax were imposed it should not be more than one-half of 1 per cent. They also attacked the proposed law on the ground that some of its provisions were contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

Three Banks Liable to Become Nationals

The latest bank to announce its intention to become a national institution is the Central Trust Co., of San Francisco. The officers of the bank have issued a letter to its stockholders calling a special meeting for Tuesday for the purpose of considering the changing of the amount of capital stock to $1,000,000 and to allot $500,000 to reserve. Although the apparent main reason is to put the bank in a position to conform to the new laws, the real reason is to place the bank in a position to become a national institution without going to an extra amount of trouble and delay. On account of new state legislation the Central Trust Co. will in all probability become a national bank. The French-American Bank has also announced its intention of getting under the wing of the Comptroller of the Currency, and it was stated recently that the City and County Bank, if it finds the new laws unfavorable, will also nationalize. At the present time there are only a few large commercial banks left in San Francisco that are not under the supervision of the United States Government.

The Home Savings Bank

The directors of the Home Savings Bank of Los Angeles have called a meeting of stockholders for April 3d, for the purpose of increasing the capital stock from $200,000 to $500,000.

al directors are J. J. Keegan and George W. Lorenz.

The American Savings Bank

Boyle Workman has been elected vice-president of the American Savings Bank of Los Angeles and William Rhodes Hervey was elected president to succeed W. F. Hotsford.

The Citizens Savings Bank

There is a strong probability that inside of 30 days the Citizens Savings Bank, of Long Beach, which went into the hands of a receiver during the financial crisis, will reopen for business. This probability is based upon a compromise agreement offered by a committee representing the stockholders of the bank and a committee representing the depositors at a conference held Tuesday.

The Citizens Bank of Visalia

Stockholders of the Citizens Bank of Visalia have elected the following directors for the ensuing year: M. E. Power, Nathan Levy, John F. Jordan, Adolph D. Sweet, Hugh M. Mooney, Simon Levy and Dr. M. L. Pettit. The directors met later and re-elected the following officers: President, Nathan Levy, vice-president, Adolph D. Sweet; cashier, Simon Levy.

Six Bills Introduced

Six of the bills proposed by the Michigan Bankers Association, to become part of the banking laws of Michigan, were introduced in the state legislature Wednesday by Rep. Kline. The bills are: That the circulating of rumors derogatory to the condition of a bank constitutes a felony; that in the case of the death of one of two joint depositors the deposit shall be paid to the survivor; that the salary of the state banking commissioner be increased to $5,000 and his deputy $2,000; that the United Home Protectors' Fraternity enabling act be repealed; that savings and commercial departments shall be kept separate and that the word "private" shall appear in the title of all private banks.

The Mohawk German Banking and Savings Co.

The Mohawk German Banking and Savings Company, with a capital of $25,000, is a new state charter institution which will do business in the Mohawk district of Cincinnati. It was chartered at Columbus by former Mayor Edward J. Dempsey, Myers Y. Cooper, Louis P. Ficks, J. Herman Dierkes and Alexander Landesco. Landesco will manage the new institution, it is said.

The Penny Saved

The penny saved was put in the bank, the old broken teapot having gone out of style. Here it presently overheard two voices talking.

"I want to borrow fifty million dollars to finance a candle trust!" said one voice.

"Glad to accommodate you!" said the other.

And the next the penny saved knew, it was going out into the channels of trade.

When the man to whom it belonged fell into sore need (he was a candle-maker and the trust crushed him out) and came to the bank for his money, he was courteously informed that the institution had passed into the hands of a receiver and recommended to call again in a year or two and get his share of the assets, should there prove to be any.—Puck.

The Crete, Ill., State Bank

The Crete, Ill., State Bank is in the hands of a receiver, William H. Rohe.

The state examiner, W. G. Howes, has found that president Ernest W. Balgeman and cashier W. F. Koelling are indebted for large amounts. A bill filed against Balgeman and the stockholders declares that the bank is insolvent.

The resources of the bank are stated to be $76,288; liabilities the same. Balgeman made an effort a year ago to be elected to the legislature and is said to have spent a large sum.

Two Bankers Elected to Board

Two bankers have been re-elected on the board of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company of Minneapolis. F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, and A. A. Crane, vice-president of the Northwestern National bank, were returned. C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the First National, and E. W. Decker, vice-president of the Northwestern National, are on the board also.

Wisconsin Bankers Association

Checks purporting to be signed by Roessler & Hass Manufacturing Company, per F. Z. Hass, in favor of C. S. Barnes, on the Citizens State Bank, Richmond, Indiana, are forgeries. There is no such firm or bank in that city. A check of this kind was recently cashed in Tigerton, Wisconsin.—M. A. Graettinger, Secretary.

The City Bank and Trust Company

B. F. Head has been elected president; S. P. King, vice-president, and R. C. Head, secretary and treasurer of the new City Bank & Trust Co. of Birmingham, Ala. The directors are Thomas Boggess, E. G. Cole, W. E. Spink, R. A. Brown and T. J. Carson.

Albert Baldwin, Jr.

Albert Baldwin, Jr., the newly elected president of the New Orleans National, is an illustration of what a man may accomplish by sticking close to work.

He began his business career as an order boy in the Baldwin hardware establishment and climbed all the way to the presidency of the big Camp Street concern. Work and painstaking care, as well as ability—these promoted him as much as parental influence and favorable environment. While he is a rich man's son, the new bank president is essentially what he made of himself.

"Albert rides no hobbies that I know of, unless we consider exercise a fad," remarked a close friend of the banker. "He's a club man to the extent of holding membership to most of the big clubs in town, but he is what I call a model home man—a man who prefers his family and the comforts of domesticity to those outside. No, he's not an auto crank; in fact, I do not think he cares a whit for a buzz wagon. He is the embodiment of good humor, likes a joke, and while quiet in demeanor, is brave. He started in the Baldwin store when 16 years of age and has been doing things ever since.

"He sticks to his post when other business men go away on long vacations; is exacting in details, but bighearted and considerate to employees about or under him. He is now 43 years old, but don't look it."

Mr. Baldwin is no novice in banking. For 15 years he was a director of the New Orleans National; for several years he was its vice-president. As president of the New Orleans Water Supply Company he has for years been close in touch with its patrons. He is vice-president of the Gullet Gin Company of Amite, La., secretary of the Salmen Brick and Lumber Company and otherwise identified with commercial interests.

He was one of the New Orleans financiers who conceived the Clearing House certificates which some months ago enabled Louisiana bankers to tide over a crisis. His business judgment is generally sound.

"With all his sense of humor and good nature Albert does not like nonsense," continued the friend quoted above. "He likes a good game of baseball and occasionally goes to the park. I cannot say that he is a yachtman, although he now and then enjoys the sport as a relaxation from business."

With Mr. Baldwin at the head of the New Orleans National it is predicted that it will make more headway than ever, because, while he is conservative, he does not believe in following a path marked out by business rivals.

Every Small Canadian Town to Have a Bank

Consul F. M. Ryder says the rule that there is no limit to number of branches for a chartered bank, means many new ones in near future, and great demand for money in Canadian towns. Concerning the establishment of numerous branch banks in small places in the Dominion of Canada and the resultant increase in the amount of business, Consul Frederick M. Ryder, of Rimouski, Quebec, reports:

There were on December 1, 1908, no less than 1,916 branch banks doing business in Canada, thirteen having been established during the month of November. These branches represent the thirty chartered banks of the Dominion having head offices in commercial centers; of these Toronto has eleven, Montreal seven, Quebec three, Halifax two, while Ottawa, Hamilton, Winnipeg, St. John, St. Stephen, Oshawa, and Sherbrooke have one each.

These chartered banks also maintain sixteen branches in the United States, twenty-four in Cuba and the West Indies, three in London, one in Paris, and one in Mexico City, making a total of 1,961 branches. At the present rate of increase, it will not be long before every town of 1,500, or even many of less population will have its banking institutions, for there appears to be no limit to the number of branches a chartered bank may establish. One of these, for instance, with a capital and surplus of $25,000,000 has 135 branches, while another with $5,000,000 of capital and reserve, has eighty-one.

There is no doubt that these branch banks, located in small towns, are of material assistance in facilitating the business of the country merchant, lumber manufacturers with limited capital, and commercial interests generally. There appears to be greater demand for advances and loans on good security than the deposits in many of these branches would warrant, in which case the matter is referred to the head office, and, if deemed advisable, sufficient funds are transferred and placed at the disposal of the branch manager for the accommodation of his client.

One scarcely realizes the volume of business transacted by these branch banks scattered in the apparently obscure towns of Canada, and the amounts of money thus gathered and forwarded to the parent institution materially increase the funds at its disposal and enlarge its influence in the trade centers of the Dominion. Every one of these branches maintains a savings department, where interest is paid quarterly at 3 per cent per annum on daily balances. These, in addition to the post-office and government savings banks, have educated the Canadian people to acquire the saving habit, while the benefits naturally accruing from such thrift are plainly visible in every direction.

The capital stock of the Union Trust Company of Spokane has been increased to $500,000.

Central Trust Expansion

The Central Trust Company of Illinois, unheralded by rumors, and just as Charles G. Dawes does most of his important business, took over by purchase on Wednesday morning the entire business and assets of the Royal Trust Company of this city. President Hill of the Maine Bankers has been industrious in whipping this far New England recruit into conventional shape. Those states have been slow to join in the grand work accomplished by the state associations, but now are falling into line, owing to such men as Mr. Hill. Vermont organized last week. Mr. Hill is cashier of the Bath National.

Carnegie Steel Company, responded to the toast, "George Washington." Dr. John A. Brashear of the University of Pittsburgh had as his subject, "Pittsburgh's Place in the Development of Science," and Arthur A. Hamerschlag, director of the Carnegie Technical Schools, spoke on "Vocational Education."

The officers elected were:

Chairman, J. M. Young, of the Second National of Pittsburgh; vice chairman, D. H. Rhodes of the National Bank of McKeesport; secretary, John E. Haines; treasurer, A. M. Johnson, Freeport, and executive committee, D. C. Wills, president of the Citizens National of Bellevue; Thomas H. Lewis of the Anchor Savings Bank of Pittsburgh, J. S. Brooks, Pittsburgh; George A. Todd, Braddock, and Kerfoot Daily, Charleroi. H. S. Zimmerman was named as a delegate for the executive committee of the American Bankers Association; H. M. Landis and R. J. Stoney, Jr., as delegates to the American Bankers Association, and D. McK. Lloyd, Pittsburgh, and J. V. Ritts, Butler, recommended as delegates-at-large.

W. B. Irvine of Wheeling, president of the West Virginia Bankers Association, was one of the many out-of-town guests taking part in the business session and entering into the spirit of the occasion.

Maryland Convention Dates

The fourteenth annual convention of the Maryland Bankers Association will be held at the Blue Mountain House, Blue Mountain, Maryland, on June 22d, 23d, and 24th. The selection of time and place has been but recently made and arrangements are being perfected for the program, which will be announced later. A number of prominent speakers will address the organization, and the meeting will close with the annual banquet.

Chicago Banking

During the week New York and Washington gossip was busy with the name of Edwin A. Potter, president of the American Trust & Savings Bank, as the man sought for to head the treasury department. Mr. Taft wants a Chicago man. Some of these learned prognosticators aver that the only reason that Taft eliminated Herrick of Ohio was that the President-elect wished above all things to put the treasury in charge of a Chicago man associated with the banking system of Chicago, which is regarded as the strongest in the country. Mr. Potter is regarded with great favor, but whether or not he would accept was about the only question raised.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

IT was the Knife and Fork club of Kansas City which tempted J. A. S. Pollard from his seclusion at Ft. Madison to make one of his famous speeches. Quoting from an editorial of a large Kansas City paper, bankers will be glad to know that "he caught the entire assemblage and was given an ovation at the conclusion of his speech." Mr. Pollard himself said that it had been so long since he made a public address that he had not supposed he could do it without having a fit. He is to speak this year at the Missouri state convention and it is hoped in several other places. He has an accumulation of invitations, however, which probably cannot be worked off during his lifetime.

FRIENDS and admirers of the brilliant banker-orator will be glad to know that he has recovered his former health completely. The long rest which he took from public speaking and from writing for publications as well has brought good results. These paragraphs are not intended as tips to state secretaries to flood Mr. Pollard with any further invitations. Already he has more under promise than he will have time to fulfill.

JAS. T. BRADLEY, who became cashier of the National Bank of Commerce at Kansas City, when the famous Dr. Woods redeemed his likewise famous bank from "pawn," has reason to be very proud of the condition shown in his bank statement for February 5th. The deposits at that time amounted to almost $28,000,000 with less than $14,000,000 in loans and a similar amount in cash and sight exchange. Experienced bankers will be able to interpret this statement, showing as it does, an entire new order of things. The National Bank of Commerce always has been popular in the West and Southwest and a host of new accounts followed Mr. Bradley from his field of operations as a former national examiner.

THE following terse paragraph concludes the statement issued by the National Bank of Commerce at Hattiesburg, Mississippi:

"The South with its minerals, lumber, and cotton worth in excess of a billion dollars per annum, has but to feed itself to be enabled to marshal the financial forces of the world. Let each citizen make the trade balance in his favor personally, thereby doing his part towards creating trade balances favorable to the community."

C. N. EVANS, cashier of the Southern National at Wilmington, N. C., is very proud of certain conditions surrounding the great progress made by his institution. The bank was established in September, 1905, and has acquired no business through the absorption of other banks. It has paid $32,000 in dividends and likewise has charged off all premiums on U. S. bonds, and is very proud that it has no money tied up in real estate or invested in industrial bonds. In these four years, with a capital of $200,000, it has acquired a surplus of $100,000, undivided profits of $33,000 and has deposits of $1,386,822.93.

THE FIRST NATIONAL at El Reno, Oklahoma, has deposits of $414,714.63 and E. B. Cockrell, cashier, is calling attention to the fact that this is a 30 per cent increase in the deposits in less than six months. This growth is in part to be attributed to the rapid advance of the entire Oklahoma country.

THE February statement of the Ottumwa National is one of the handsomest issued by any bank. It comes upon buff tint, deckle-edge paper, embossed in natural color and printed in purple. It is a free expression of the poetical nature of L. E. Stevens who presides at the cashier's desk of the Ottumwa National.

JOS. WAYNE, JR., of Philadelphia, continues the use of a fine steel engraving of their famous bank building on the front cover of his statement and a steel medallion of Stephen Girard on the back cover. This is the most famous bank building in the United States, having been built expressly for the first bank of the United States in 1795. Stephen Girard purchased the building in 1815 and occupied it until his death in 1831. The Girard bank was chartered in 1832 and became a national in 1864. The deposits are $40,000,000.

IT seems hardly fair, during the absence of W. T. Fenton, in Europe, that D. C. Wills, should spring upon an unsuspecting public in advertising the Diamond National of Pittsburgh, a phrase which might easily be mistaken for one of Mr. Fenton's famous fabrications. Here is what Mr. Wills has to say and it is up to Mr. Fenton to go him one better. The Wills' paragraph reads:

"Discriminating people who require the services of an ably managed bank, pursuing a policy of progressive conservatism, are invited to transact their banking business with the Diamond National."

THE latest statement made by the Hamilton National of this city shows on the front cover a handsome medallion of Alexander Hamilton, on the reverse cover, a fine engraving of the splendid bank building occupied by the Hamilton National. The deposits account totals over $8,000,000 and it looks good to see the name of W. T. Perkins at the top of the vice-presidency column.

THE Northern Trust Company of this city is making a feature of travelers' cheques and bankers' money orders. They will pay full commission to bankers and brokers selling the same and have a very interesting proposition to make. Thos. C. King, cashier, will be glad to answer all inquiries. No bank in America has a higher financial standing than the Northern Trust Company Bank of Chicago.

THE FIRST NATIONAL and the First Trust and Savings Banks of this city, practically one corporation, show joint deposits of more than $150,000,000. If anyone thinks this is a small bank or that it takes less than J. B. Forgan's whole time to look after this immense institution, he hasn't made a good guess. The First National corner is about the busiest piece of financial frontage in the whole country. There isn't any branch of conservative financial service which is not offered to the public at that point.

THE clean and rapid advances made by the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago on good old-fashioned lines are attracting the attention of the banking world. Although a comparatively young institution this bank shows deposits of more than $32,000,000 and its growth has been steady and consistent. It furnishes a list of directors that would be hard to duplicate and impossible to surpass. Almost every branch of financial and commercial life is represented upon the board by a recognized leader.

THE Seaboard National of New York, shows deposits of $34,000,000 in its latest statement.

THE Dominion National of Bristol, Va.-Tenn., shows along with its statement of condition a report of the examination of the bank made by the Audit Company of New York of which F. W. La Frenz is president. Not anything could be more complete in the way of publicity than these joint reports made by the Audit Company and a certificate signed by the examining committee of the board of directors.

THE first report of the Illinois State Trust Company Bank at East St. Louis, under the presidency of F. T. Joyner, shows deposits of $2,095,060.03. This bank purchased the business and assets of the First National in 1907 and last year took over the business and deposits of the City National, both of East St. Louis. It has a strong board of directors and is at the helm of the banking situation in that part of Illinois.

EARLE PEASE, cashier of the First National at Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, furnishes some interesting comparisons showing that the total assets of his bank have grown in three years from $383,000 to $757,000. This condition of things ought to be entirely satisfactory to the board of directors.

THE Union Trust Company of this city in its latest statement shows the largest deposits in the history of the bank. They exceed $13,000,000.

W. I. PRINCE, cashier of the City National of Duluth, makes a good showing with deposits of $2,456,036.13.

THE American National of Indianapolis is using a splendid engraving of its remodeled post-office building upon the front cover of its statement folders. A handsomer banking building could not have been designed than that which resulted from the made-over government building.

THE First National of Fort Wayne, Indiana, of which J. H. Bass is president and H. R. Freeman, cashier, was the first national bank established in the state of Indiana and the 11th to be established in the United States. This year it celebrated its 46th year of successful operation under the national banking act.

HENRY B. BARTOW, cashier of the Farmers' & Mechanics' National of Philadelphia, reports deposits of $14,680,590.81 for his institution.

THE Des Moines National on the back cover prints in outline, a map of the state of Iowa showing Des Moines to be the natural geographical as well as financial center of that great commonwealth which boasts more banks than any other state in the union. Above the map in bold type are the words "Our direct field" and underneath it "The State of Iowa." It certainly makes a strong talking point for the city of Des Moines and probably accounts in part for the nearly $5,000,000 deposits which this bank shows and which has been more than doubled in the past four years. Arthur Reynolds is president.

THE First National of Milwaukee was established in 1853 as the Farmers' & Millers' Bank. It became the First National in 1863 and ever since has been a feature of the financial life of Milwaukee and of the great state of Wisconsin. The deposits are approaching $17,000,000.

THE service rendered by this bank in the handling of drafts, especially those drawn against shipments of grain and provisions, is satisfying a large list of regular customers. May we not have the privilege of serving you? Remittances made on day of payment in Boston, New York or Philadelphia funds, as desired, at the following rates: Under $100, 15c; $100 to $500, 25c; over $500, 1-20th of 1 per cent.—The Haverhill National.

The Necessity for Thorough Bank Examination

By Edward P. Moxey

The subject of bank examination is one which has been much discussed and about which much has been written. Nearly every report of the Comptroller of the Currency to Congress, and nearly every copy of a banking journal, contains some reference to this most important subject. The more the subject is considered by the banker, the merchant, the manufacturer, the lawyer, the capitalist and all those who have dealings with financial institutions, the more are they convinced of the importance of bank examination. We are considering not a new subject, but one with which most of you are already familiar.

We might summarize a few of the reasons for considering the subject an important one, as follows:

First. Risk attending a business in which the commodity dealt in is money, or that which is payable in money.

Second. Required by the United States government for national banks.

Third. Required by nearly every state in the union for their financial institutions.

Fourth. Recognized by the progressive banker as an absolute necessity.

In every business the risk of loss through peculation of employees exists, varying according to the opportunities offered to those who, for various reasons, may be dishonestly inclined.

In the vast majority of cases it is the cash drawer which suffers; the theft of merchandise being attended with too much risk, owing to the danger of its identification if not disposed of, and the chance of detection arising from its conversion into money.

I have in mind a good illustration of this which I think will make my meaning clearer to you.

One of the largest department stores in a certain city estimates its loss of merchandise, through theft of employees, to be in the neighborhood of $4,000 per annum. In the same city a retail merchant doing an annual business of approximately one-tenth of one per cent of that done by the department store sustained a loss of $7,000 per annum for three years, through embezzlement of cash by his trusted cashier and bookkeeper. I tell you, gentlemen, that the chance for fraud always exists to a greater extent in those cases in which the responsibility in the keeping of records and the custody of money is not divided.

The banking business, handling as it does vast sums of money daily, offers greater opportunities for the abstraction of its merchandise (namely, money) than any other known business. If this is so, as we cannot doubt, an examination of some kind is imperative.

Salmon P. Chase, the framer of the national bank act, realized the necessity for government supervision of national banks, through examinations made by national bank examiners, and embodied that feature in the act authorizing the organization of national banks, passed by Congress in February, 1863.

To-day we find upon the statute books of nearly every state in the union, provision made for the examination of banks organized under state laws. Many states have extended this supervision to cover trust companies, private bankers, mortgage loans companies, building societies, insurance companies and other institutions of a financial nature.

If the importance of the subject of bank examination were not shown by what has been said, all doubt must vanish when we consider that the progressive, up to date banker recognizes, in addition to government or state requirements for bank examination, the absolute necessity for the examination of his bank by the expert bank examiner employed by the directors for that purpose.

The country, as a whole, should pay tribute to the high character of bank officers and employees, when one contemplates the minute percentage of loss sustained by the banking public as compared with the vast volume of business transacted by our financial institutions.

Realizing then the importance of bank examination we might very well ask ourselves what are the benefits to be derived by a bank from having its books and accounts examined by a bank examiner. These benefits may be stated as follows:

First. Insures efficiency of the clerical force.

Second. Minimizes errors.

Third. Lessens chances for fraud.

The knowledge that one's work is likely to be inspected tends to make one more careful in the performance of that work. The exercise of care makes better work, and soon becomes a habit which constantly increases the efficiency of the worker. The character of a man's work is always an indication of his efficiency. The more efficient a man becomes the more valuable is he to the institution which he serves, and when the officers are looking among the staff for a suitable person to fill a higher and more important position, their choice usually falls on the man who has been careful, and conscientious, and who has shown a marked degree of efficiency in work. Bank examination furnishes the incentive for an increase in efficiency and is therefore highly to be desired.

Along with an increase in efficiency there is the diminution of the chance for clerical errors. Errors are usually the result of inefficiency or carelessness.

I have in mind a case of a large bank where the force of an entire department worked until late at night in the endeavor to locate an error of $5,000, in the day's work. When this was finally discovered it proved to be an item for $5,000 added to a remittance letter after the same had been footed without a corresponding change being made in the total. The person directly responsible for this error was a young chap whose thoughts were not centered upon his work. Gentlemen, this is only one illustration out of what you all know to be a large number. Bank examination, by locating errors and by fixing responsibility for same, tends to render them of less frequent occurrence.

Not all errors, however, are made unintentionally. There may be those who have been unfaithful to the trust reposed in them, and who have applied the funds and moneys of the bank to their own use. This stamp of man lives in constant dread of detection, for, by an unexpected examination of his books, should he be a clerk or bookkeeper; or by a verification of the securities owned by the institution or held by it as collateral for loans, of which he may be the custodian; or by a count of the money on hand, should he be a teller, he realizes that detection is inevitable and the penitentiary almost a certainty. It is hardly necessary, in view of what I have already said, for me to comment further on the benefit of bank examination, as the best means of detection of fraud and as preventive of same.

Realizing the importance of bank examination and the many benefits derived therefrom, let us now consider the various kinds of examinations we find employed. These may be summarized as follows:

First. Those made by the board of directors or committee thereof.

Second. Those made by the clerical force of the bank.

Third. Those made by the government and state bank examiners.

Fourth. Those made by the clearing house.

Fifth. Those made by the public accountant.

The by-laws of many of our banks provide for an examination by the board of directors, or by an examining committee thereof, or by a special committee appointed for that purpose. This form of examination may be efficient in some exceptional cases, but in the vast majority of instances it is quite the reverse. The reasons for this are obvious.

The man usually selected by the stockholders of a bank for the very important office of director, is one who is well known in the community and who is usually engaged in active business. Such a man is selected on account of his influence and for the benefit to be derived by the bank through his connection with it. The more influential he is, the more desirable does he become as a director, from the standpoint of business getting. But usually one in such a position is entirely engrossed with the cares and responsibilities of his own affairs and can, as a consequence, devote very little time indeed to the exacting work required in making a thorough examination.

Exceedingly few bank directors, other than the officers who take an active part in the management of the institution, are qualified by experience or training as bank examiners. What knowledge of accounting they possess is usually acquired through familiarity with the methods employed in the recording of the transactions of their own business, which is an entirely different thing from the accounting system employed by a financial institution. It is true he can count money and examine such securities as may be placed before him. He, no doubt, can add up a discount tickler and see whether the aggregate agrees with the total of the notes on hand, as shown by the general ledger; but he cannot test the correctness of the very books and accounts in which a shortage is usually concealed.

While preparing a bank case for trial I was much amused by reading in the minutes of the meetings of the board of directors, a report of a committee of the board on the result of their examination of the bank. As far as I recall the wording was somewhat to this effect:

Your examining committee begs leave to report, as follows: We met at the banking house on Thursday last, after the close of business, and counted all the cash in the possession of the several tellers and that in the vaults of the bank, and found the same to agree with the amount called for by the books. We examined all the loans and discounts, with the collateral securing the same, also the stocks, bonds and securities owned by the bank, and found the same to be correct. We also examined all the books and accounts of the bank, and found the same correct in every particular. The income and expense accounts for the past six months were carefully audited by us, and are correct. We completed our examination and adjourned at six-thirty P. M.

And the report might have added—in time for supper in the board room.

Another form of examination which is advocated by some bankers, is that made by the clerical force of the bank.

James G. Cannon, vice-president of the Fourth National of New York, in an article written a number of years ago for the Bankers' Magazine, says:

"The only true way for an officer to examine his bank, it seems to me is by employing his own clerks to make the examination. This can readily be done in nearly every bank, and it has been tried with great success in banks of different sizes. The officers should expect to pay for an examination, and in this way they will secure the best efforts of the parties doing the work and at the same time enable their clerks to earn a little extra money, which is always acceptable. The officers can generally select a committee from among the clerks not employed in the departments to be examined, and it can vary in number according to the size of the bank. Select one of the best men as chairman; pay him twice the amount paid each of the other members, and throw the burden of the responsibility upon him to see that the examination is properly conducted. Make all of your arrangements beforehand very carefully, and inform the members of the committee in time for them to get their work in proper shape."

Those however who have had the opportunity to observe carefully the results of such examinations, and the manner in which they are conducted, do not share his opinion.

The theory upon which an examination made by the clerical force is based, is most admirable; but in practice it is quite the reverse. The idea of using the clerks of one department of a bank to examine another department is all right, as regards its tendency to increase the efficiency of the force through the knowledge thus acquired. Undoubtedly too, the clerks of one department are prone to delight in disclosing errors made on the part of their brothers in some other department. But it is not folly to suppose that a clerk, no matter how competent he may be in the department in which he is usually employed, can, upon being transferred to another department, for the purpose of examining into the affairs, disclose in its books and accounts errors and irregularities made by those thoroughly familiar with the minute details of the department under investigation. An examination to be of any value whatever must be made by those thoroughly familiar with all the details of every department.

If the question were asked of every bank officer and bank clerk present, "what book in the bank, when kept by a dishonest officer or clerk, do you consider the most dangerous one?", no doubt every book would be named except the one which experience has shown to occupy this unenviable position. The individual ledger, when not kept under the duplex system, is without doubt the book offering the greatest possibilities for the concealing of a shortage.

One of the largest defalcations ever perpetrated by a bank clerk was hidden in that book. The loss to the bank was over $600,000.00 and not a dollar of the money of the bank was handled by the defaulting clerk. The only verification of this book that can be made is through the calling in and balancing, under one date, of practically all of the pass books of depositors; but even then, unless proper precautions are taken, this work is worse than useless.

As previously stated, the national bank act, under which the national banks of our country are organized, makes provision for their examination by persons duly appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, "who shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the affairs of the association, and, in doing so, to examine any of the officers and agents thereof on oath."

In an article entitled "Bank Examinations" by Adam A. Ross, Jr., which appeared in the Journal of Accountancy for January, 1906, Mr. Ross states:

"The work of the national examiner is special in its nature and is done on behalf of the Comptroller of the Currency, to whom alone he is responsible. He does not act, directly at least, on behalf of the shareholders or the management of the bank, nor are his findings communicated to them except on such occasions as the Comptroller may call attention to some infringement of the banking regulations. It is true that his work embraces the counting and inspection of the bank's cash, loans, collaterals, investments, etc., as submitted to him, and also to some extent the balancing of many of the general accounts of the bank, including the individual deposit ledgers, stock ledger, etc., and considerable work that is in the line of auditing; but in addition thereto he has to keep the Comptroller advised of the amount and character of the bank's resources and liabilities, the borrowings, if any, of the directors, the loans, if any, in excess of the limit prescribed by law, its organization and method of conducting its affairs, the plan, to some extent, of its accounts and the means taken for their internal checking and verification; and generally, the securing of such information as will enable the Comptroller to judge of the bank's soundness and to know whether or not it is being conducted in compliance with the laws under which it is being allowed to operate. The careful performance of these very necessary and important duties within the brief period usually allowed for his work must fully occupy his time and leave small opportunity for real auditing. Now and again these hard-working servants of the government come in for considerable criticism on account of their failure to detect defalcations that have been more or less cleverly concealed for a period of years, but it will be acknowledged by those familiar with the onerous character of their work that on the whole they are rendering, within their limitations, good service to the government and to the banking community. The blame for many of the disastrous bank defalcations and failures should rather be laid at the doors of those bank directors, who for one reason or another, fail to recognize that one of the important duties of their trusteeship is not only to keep advised of the condition of their trusts as shown by the records prepared within their own institutions, but further to have those records inspected and their integrity tested by independent and disinterested professional examiners."

Mr. Ross's statement as to the limitations of the national examiner applies also in the case of the state examiner. In many cases however we find that politics plays a very important part in the appointment of the officials whose duty it is to examine state institutions; and as a result, many incompetent persons are appointed for that exacting position.

In a notorious case a state financial institution was robbed of over two million dollars in a period of two years, during which time it was not examined by the state authorities. This disclosure revealed the fact that a large number of similar institutions had not been examined during the same period, and many for a still longer one. What kind of protection was offered, by conduct of this character, to the depositors in the financial institutions of the state in question?

Recent disclosures as to the laxity of some official examiners in the performance of their duty have called forth many amusing comments on the part of the press. Among these was one which appeared in "Life" January 21st last. I quote in full:

"The modern bank was about to be examined. 'Sorry to keep you waiting,' said the assistant janitor to the examiner, 'but the president has to have a few days to call in some collateral that he had to use to negotiate a loan in order that his wife could wear a string of pearls this year and beat some one else.'

'Don't mention it,' said the bank examiner. 'I am in no immediate hurry. Still, perhaps I could see the cashier?'

MAUSOLEUM

The above mausoleum is one of our simple, well constructed designs which can be erected at a comparatively low cost with six to eight crypts. How much less barbarous this method is than burying in the ground.

'You must give him a little time,' said the assistant janitor, in a gently reproachful tone. 'You must remember that you sent no notice that you were coming, and of course he will have to hustle around and get from some other bank the money he had to borrow recently to buy his boy a racing car. It was only a paltry twenty thousand, but —'

'Well, I might go in and sit with the paying tellers a little.' 'Wouldn't have you associate with them for the world. You know we are paying them about ten or twelve dollars a week now, and as they have large families to support, they are really shabby, and not fit company for a gentleman.'

'How about the office runner?'

'He would be all right if he were here, but he's down at the race track. Come around early next week and we'll have things fixed up so that you can send in a report to Washington that will be something really worth while. You'll have to excuse me now, as I must dust out the safe deposit boxes where we keep securities left here by our customers for safe-keeping.'

Realizing that something more than the official examination was necessary, for the mutual protection of the members of the Chicago Clearing House Association, following the disclosures connected with the closing of the Chicago National, the Equitable Trust Company, and the Home Savings Bank, directly under the control of John R. Walsh, that association has adopted the policy of having examinations made by its own examiners, independently of, and in addition to, those made by the official examiners, both national and state.

Following the lead of Chicago in this matter the clearing houses in a number of the large cities of our country have adopted the same policy, which has resulted in the enforcement, by the clearing house, of better methods and more conservative policies on the part of some of their members.

Last, but not least by any means, there is the examination made by the qualified public accountant on behalf of the stockholders or directors. Many boards realize that the examinations I have mentioned do not, by any means, furnish an adequate protection against dishonesty or carelessness on the part of the working force of the institution. Therefore, the public accountant, who must be one thoroughly qualified for the work, is employed by them to make a complete and detailed examination of the books, records, and accounts of every department of the bank.

We will now take up for consideration, in a brief way, the qualifications which must be possessed by any one who wishes to be considered a competent bank examiner. These qualifications can be classed under the following heads:

- First. He must possess a pleasing personality.
- Second. He must be an accountant of vast experience.
- Third. He must have had an extended business training.
- Fourth. He must be thoroughly versed in all minute details of the banking business.
- Fifth. He must be well posted on all financial subjects.
- Sixth. He must be a man of keen judgment, and sterling character.

We might say of the bank examiner as they say of the poet: "He must be born and not made"; for not every person possesses the inherent qualities which serve as the basis on which to make the competent bank examiner. Personality plays an important part in the qualities of the examiner. A gentleman of my acquaintance creates a most unfavorable impression, while examining a bank, on account of an unfortunate trait in acting as though he considered every

Broker Not Responsible

Stock brokers cannot be convicted of embezzlement when their clients are financially worsted in legitimate trades. So held Judge Hume of Chicago when he discharged Thomas Davies, a broker, who was arrested on the charge of embezzlement after he made two unsuccessful deals for his client, Mrs. Helen R. G. Hannan, a daughter of John Hannan, a diamond expert of Detroit.

"Every stock broker in Chicago might be arrested if a broker is compelled to guarantee winnings for his client," said Judge Hume. "Every broker might be arrested under the circumstances brought out in this case. Therefore I find Mr. Davies not guilty." As the evidence showed, Mrs. Hannan gave Mr. Davies $1,756 in November, 1906, to invest in stocks and the money was lost.

The European-American Bank has made application at Albany for permission to change its name to "The Security Bank."

Lincoln's Head on Pennies

Abraham Lincoln's head is to appear on new one-cent pieces which will be coined in about a month. President Roosevelt has approved the plan presented to him by Mr. Leach, director of the mint. The representation of Lincoln that will be used is that contained on a bronze medal recently executed by Victor B. Brenner of New York.

Deposits Increased $14,500,000

An increase in seventy days of over $14,500,000 in deposits in the forty-six banks in the city of Chicago is shown in the statement of those institutions compiled by State Auditor McCullough from reports submitted on February 6th. The statement also shows the per cent of reserve to deposits to be 41.38.

On 10 bids received the County Commissioners have made three Massillon banks depositaries of the Stark County funds, which at times reach $800,000. The successful banks are the Merchants National, the First National and Savings Bank. Canton banks previously have held the money.

The Cleveland Money Market

Cleveland bankers say the outlook is very good for easy money for some time to come. The banks just now are overloaded with money, and there apparently is not much of a demand for money. The rate is decreasing, and a constantly increasing number of loans are being made at 5 per cent. Bankers look for this condition to be maintained until business is going again at the old gait of two or three years ago.

The Cincinnati Real Estate Exchange

The members of the Cincinnati Real Estate Exchange are much interested in the taxation bills introduced in the Ohio senate on Thursday. One of them, No. 99, is the legislation wanted by the brokers. It was introduced by Mr. Rathburn, of Meigs County. The other is said to emanate from Cleveland brokers. This is No. 96, and was by Senator Matthews. It differs only slightly from the one planned by Cincinnatians. It provides for three against the five members of the appraisement board wanted by the local agents. The Cleveland bill does not include the election of these upon a separate ballot, as is urged by Cincinnati brokers.

Supreme Court of Ohio Decision

The supreme court of Ohio held, in the recent case of Blake vs. Hamilton Dime Savings Bank, that the certification by a bank that a check is good is equivalent to its acceptance and raises an implication that it is drawn upon sufficient funds in the hands of the drawee; that they have been set apart for its satisfaction, and that they will be so applied whenever the check is so presented for payment. The court said that the transfer of a certified check is an assignment of money to meet it, and the bank making the certification is liable therefor to the holder. The drawer or indorser of a certified check cannot, the court said, after its delivery revoke it or stop payment upon it by notice to the drawee not to pay, and a bank that has received a certified check for deposit, and has credited the depositor with the amount of it, is a bona fide holder for value, and may enforce payment of it, notwithstanding it may, before payment to the depositor, have received notice that the check was fraudulently obtained.

The Cincinnati Banks

Cincinnati banks make a fine showing in their last official statements. Compilations made from the last statements of the national and state charter institutions show that the national banks have assets of $105,649,512, which covers nine banks, and the 25 state charter institutions have assets aggregating $61,739,909, making total banking assets of $167,389,421. Combining the items of the national and state banks, they have $18,702,100 of capital, $15,608,808 of surplus, $26,809,940 cash reserve, deposits of $122,607,249, and loans amounting to $83,963,848.

Returns from Chicago Meeting

George Guckenberger, president of the Atlas National of Cleveland, has returned from Chicago, where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association. ## The Jewett Bank

The Cincinnati Money Market

The Cincinnati money market here continues easy, with supplies of loanable funds quite liberal. Collateral loans are negotiated at 3½ to 4 per cent on call and generally 4½ per cent on time. Mercantile borrowing is still of relatively small proportions.

Indianapolis and Indiana Banking News

By CHARLES REMINGTON

Governor Marshall sent a special message to the senate Saturday announcing that the state is almost bankrupt and that unless something is done at once to relieve the situation the treasury will be entirely emptied before the end of March. Accompanying the governor's message was a copy of a letter which he received from John C. Billheimer, state auditor, setting forth the condition of the treasury. In his message the governor says:

"Unless you enact some legislation which will compel the county treasurers to make advance payments upon the revenue which will not be due as now provided by law until the semiannual settlement in June the treasury of the state will be bankrupt before the end of March. This would necessitate either the closing of all state institutions, both penal and eleemosynary, or some scheme to be devised by the state board of finance to borrow money. I understand there is a bill before you to require county treasurers to make advancements prior to the semiannual settlement. I am reluctantly compelled to say to you that I see no other way to prevent a bankrupt treasury than for you to pass this bill."

The Duluth Clearing House

Duluth banks have organized a Clearing House Association, to include the First National, the City National, the Northern National, and the American Exchange banks. The move has been contemplated for some time, owing to the increasing business of the Duluth banks and the country banks that do business through the Duluth institutions.

A. L. Ordean, president of the First National, is president of the association: W. G. Hegardt, cashier of the American Exchange Bank, first vice-president; W. I. Prince, cashier of the City National, second vice-president; J. W. Lyder, fr., cashier of the Northern National, secretary and treasurer, and Isaac S. Moore, assistant cashier of the American Exchange Bank, manager. The committee of the Clearing House Association will consist of the president, vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer of the association.

W. H. Wirth

W. H. Wirth, who for many years has occupied a very responsible position with the Third National, and now with the Fifth-Third National of Cincinnati, has tendered his resignation, to take effect March 1st, in order to engage in the bond and stock brokerage business, with an office in the Union Savings Bank and Trust Company Building.

The Commercial Bank

The Commercial Bank of Saratobia, Miss., with a capital of $15,000, has been chartered by D. D. Salmon, I. E. Salmon and others.

The Aredale Bank

It is reported that W. J. Mullin, cashier of the Aredale, Ia., Bank, has resigned.

A. E. Fletcher

Fletcher has resigned his position of second vice-president of the Union National to accept the presidency of the Morris National, now being organized with a capital of $500,000 and surplus of $100,000. The location of the new bank will be at the southeast corner of Second and Walnut streets. The board of directors, while not yet complete, will include Samuel W. Whan, of Samuel W. Whan & Co.; H. Vance Peters, of James M. Vance & Co.; F. A. von Boyneburgk, coal operator; H. G. Peddle, George E. Spotz, Arthur Dunn, of Scranton; William S. Taylor, vice-president Fentress Coal & Coke Co, and Albert E. Fletcher.

Bankers must Go to Penitentiary

Ex-Judge Abner Smith and Gustav F. Sorrow, under a decision of the supreme court at Springfield, must go to the penitentiary. They were convicted of wrecking the Bank of America of Chicago ten days after it had been opened for business, the stockholders losing $175,000.

Lippincott's for March

"A Knight-Errant in Broadway" is the long story in March Lippincott's Magazine, written by Rupert Sargent Holland. Mr. Holland is the successful writer of several widely known books, among them being "The Pirate of Alastair" and "The Count at Harvard." Will Levington Comfort, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, John Kendrick Bangs and others contribute poems and short stories.

Lincoln on Money

"Lincoln," said Senator Tillman recently, "had no great admiration for mere financial success.

"'Financial success,' Lincoln once said, 'is purely metallic. The man who gains it has four metallic attributes—gold in his palm, silver on his tongue, brass in his face and iron in his heart.'"—Washington Star.

Vermont

On Wednesday of last week the bankers of Vermont met in Montpelier to organize a state bankers association. Two years ago Massachusetts came into the fold and there now are hopes for the balance of New England. Col. Farnsworth, of the A. B. A., put the "Green Mountain Boys" through their initiatory degree.

The Boston Money Market

There is no particular change in the Boston money market to note. On call, money is easy to the quick borrowers at  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, and from this level ranges up to 3 per cent. Time money is unchanged, with rates nominally 3 to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent for short dates,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  to 4 per cent for six months, and  $3\frac{3}{4}$  to  $4\frac{1}{4}$  per cent for a year.

Philadelphia Banking News

By J. IRVING COOPER

Several hundred friends of the banking house of Walter C. Louchheim & Co. attended the formal opening of the firm's new headquarters, at 139 and 141 South Broad Street, on Saturday afternoon. The reception lasted from 12 until 3 o'clock, and the firm was generously congratulated on the fine appearance of the new home. It is generally regarded as the finest brokerage headquarters in Philadelphia.

The headquarters have been fitted up in colonial style, and the exterior largely resembles the home of a well-to-do Philadelphian in revolutionary times.

The members of the firm, Messrs. Louchheim and Kahn, received the guests on Saturday.

City of Philadelphia Bonds

Thomas Newhall, 32 South Broad Street, is offering city of Philadelphia bonds, due 1938, at a price to yield 3.72 per cent, and has prepared a chart showing the respective yields, based on prices obtained by the city, of the yearly bond issues since 1890. The chart demonstrates that the average yield for the 18 years is 3.335 per cent. A similar basis for the 4 per cent city bonds of 1938 is about 112.50 per cent.

The Union National Accident Company

The Union National Accident Company, which has taken three floors of the Manhattan Building, Fourth and Walnut streets, as its home offices, has deposited with the state of Pennsylvania the sum of $100,000 in approved interest bearing securities, and in return has received the state's certificate of authority to transact business. The Union company has been organized with the idea of starting as a large, strong corporation, with several hundred stockholders, instead of beginning the casualty business controlled by a few individuals.

The Commercial Trust Company

At the organization meeting of the Commercial Trust Company Horatio G. Lloyd was elected president and Thomas DeWitt Cuyler, vice-president and counsel; J. H. Mason, vice-president and treasurer, and W. A. Obodyke, secretary. The offices of assistant treasurer and assistant secretary were created and John H. Brockie was elected to fill the position.

The Philadelphia Stock Exchange

The proposed removal of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange has excited more than usual interest and discussion. The opposition to the change in location is not largely in evidence, as yet, but those in favor of removal are active, and are making every effort and argument to enlist adherents to the plan of going to Broad Street.

The Stock Exchange Committee will report at a comparatively early day. It has been urged that the removal of banking and other institutions to Broad Street has nullified the objections which were paramount years ago.

As to brokers' opinions, the younger element generally favor removal, and it has been estimated that 75 per cent of the active floor traders are ready to make the change. The older brokers are either opposed to removal or are not ready to make known their views.

The governing committee does not meet until March 1st and the committee will probably report at that time. The whole matter will then go before the Stock Exchange.

The Girard Trust Company

It has been intimated that the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia will make some definite proposition to the Stock Exchange for quarters in a new building on properties recently bought by the trust company and adjoining its building.

Sinking Fund Commissioners

Decision was reached by the sinking fund commissioners to buy $1,000,000 city of Philadelphia bonds with funds which have accumulated.

The Sixth National

John P. Wilson was elected a director of the Sixth National of Philadelphia.

New Rules for Dealing in Bonds

The governing committee of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange have recently adopted the following rules regarding the dealings in interest bearing bonds "at a price and interest:"

"In settlement of contracts in interest paying bonds the interest shall be computed to the day of maturity of contract on regular sales or on sales at three days, at the rate specified in the bond; and on time option contracts, interest specified in the bond shall be computed to include the day of sale, and thereafter at the rate of interest agreed upon. Contracts made after default in payment of interest and during continuation of default, shall be 'flat.' Bonds upon which the interest is in default shall carry all unpaid coupons.

"Registered bonds will not sell ex-interest on the day the books close for payment of interest. In settlement of contracts in interest paying registered bonds when transfer books are closed, interest must be added to the date of the maturity of contract, and a due bill for full amount of interest to be paid by the company, must accompany the bond until the interest is paid. When not signed by the deliverer, said due bills must be guaranteed by a solvent resident member of the Exchange or his firm, and must be paid when due by the party so guaranteeing it.

"On a contract in interest paying bonds, 'seller's or buyer's option,' at a rate agreed upon (as seller or buyer 20, 2 per cent), the interest specified in the bond shall be computed to and including the day of sale; and thereafter interest at the agreed rate shall be computed on the contract price, plus accrued interest. An agreed rate of interest must be computed for actual elapsed days.

"Interest at the rate specified in an interest paying bond must be computed on a basis of a 360-day year, i. e.: Every calendar month is 1-12 of 360 days—30 days. Every period from a date in one month to the same date in the following month is 30 days. Income bonds must be dealt in flat."

Northwest Banks and Bankers

By J. EDWARDS SMITH, Minneapolis, Minn.

Banking legislation is still on in Minnesota. Representative John McGrath has introduced a bill to tax banks on 4 per cent of gross earnings. Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, a banker himself, favors the measure. Under the constitution the bill had to originate in the house or he would have introduced it himself. "The bill may not pass at this session," said Mr. Stephens, "but it will come some day. The people will come to it." The measure is expected to relieve banks of all other taxation except on their real estate, and will tax the gross receipts the same as those of railroads. Mortgage loan companies and trust companies will be affected by the measure. The tax is to be on stock, surplus, undivided profits, and all other property, except real estate, as well as earnings. Under the earnings is included interest received and other income. The law is to be operative January, 1910, if it passes. The provision is made that banks shall make sworn statements of gross and net earnings, and that tax shall become due on January of each year. A penalty of 10 per cent shall attach 30 days after delinquency, with restraint of goods, chattels, etc., in sum sufficient to cover the tax, with interest and penalty.

Two Minneapolis Bankers Chosen

Two of the Minneapolis bankers are on the citizen's pure water committee: Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, and F. A. Gross, president of the German American. They were chosen respectively by the Publicity Club and the North Side Commercial Club. They are two men out of twenty-one for the city, which shows their standing with the two bodies as men of civic affairs Minneapolis people buy spring water to drink, although the water system is a good one. The water is drawn from the Mississippi river at Shingle creek, and is not of the best at certain times of the year. The question has become a burning one. Partisans of the filtration plan and of the artesian well plan as sources of pure water are both active, and the new committee is to work out the best plan. Engineers have made suggestions and yet nothing has been done. The citizens are now to get busy and the two bankers are counted on to make matters hum. They will, too, if their past records are gauges of what they can do.

Released for Lack of Evidence

The heart of Charles Frost, manager of the Interstate Protective Association, is heavy. Yeggman arrested for the robbery of a bank, including the famous James Gaynor, heretofore mentioned in these columns, and "Windy" Rivers, have been released by the county attorney at Olivia for "lack of evidence." The secretary and the interstate association's detective hold entirely different views in regard to the weight of the evidence, and it is probable that they never will agree on the subject. At any rate, after postponements and other law delays, at the hearing the defendants were released. If the released gentlemen will defer further operations in the Northwestern territory for such a term of years as will show them the error of their ways and the advantages of a legitimate business the officials of the association will feel that the delivery of these men is not such a bad thing. They are all classed as pretty high grade men who could make more money in the same time, and safely, as they spend in rigging up "jobs," if they do such things, by exercising their natural talents in what is considered a legitimate business by the public generally.

Minneapolis Savings Banks

Savings banks in Minneapolis note a steady gain in deposits. The indication is that the laboring and wage people have more money. Since November 27th, when the Farmers and Mechanics, and the Hennepin County Savings banks made their last previous report, they have made gains where commercial banks have noted a falling off. The former institution gained $353,000. At the last call, as compared with February, 1908, the Farmers and Mechanics Bank has $300,000 more on the deposit, and the Hennepin County, $325,000 more. The deposits of these banks are respectively, $11,741,000 and $4,326,000.

The Minneapolis Stock Exchange

Eugene M. Stevens is the first president of the new Minneapolis Stock Exchange. He is of Eugene M. Stevens and Company, commercial paper. Edward T. Chapman, of the same firm and a brother of Joseph Chapman, Jr., is the treasurer. W. A. Durst, secretary of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, and George B. Lane, commercial paper, are directors.

I. F. Cotton Elected President

I. F. Cotton, assistant cashier at the Northwestern National, has been elected president of the State Bank of Robbinsdale, into which he bought recently with other capitalists. W. A. Farr, formerly of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was elected cashier and will have active management of the bank. J. Trump, a merchant of Robbinsdale, was elected to the board. Robbinsdale is a suburb of Minneapolis.

Joseph Lockey Improving

Joseph Lockey, president of the American National, is reported as improving from a serious illness. Mr. Lockey will retire on March 1st, and it is expected that the directors will elect Vice-President Ben Baer as president.

Minneapolis Chapter News

The result of the proceeds for the two nights for which the Minneapolis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking bought out the Lyric theater was so satisfactory that permanent quarters for the chapter are assured. From the sale of tickets and advertising in the souvenir program, the chapter netted $718. This is sufficiently large to enable the clerks to drive a fine bargain for chapter rooms. Charles E. Braden of the Gorham-Braden Company gave an address before the Minneapolis Chapter on "Insurance" at the meeting last Tuesday evening.

Elected to Advisory Board

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, has been elected to the advisory board of the Young Men's Christian Association of the University of Minnesota.

National Banks for Los Angeles

The statement of the condition of the ten national banks of Los Angeles at the close of business February 5th shows that the institutions are prospering. Deposits amount to $44,210,061, and compare with a total of $42,123,719 for November 27, 1908, and with $40,249,658 on September 23d. The aggregate of loans at the close of business was $29,380,388, compared with $29,249,747 on November 27th, and with $29,747,463 on September 23d. The banks held $19,324,713 in cash in their vaults. The amount on November 27th was $17,985,882, and on September 23d, $16,629,951.

The statement of the Englewood State Bank of Chicago, made in response to a call of the Auditor of the State, shows that the bank has been keeping up its rapid growth during the past year, in fact at no time has its growth been more consistent. The directors and officers of the bank have reason to feel proud of the showing made.

The resources of the bank are at present considerably over a million dollars, and the statement shows an increase in deposits for the month of January, 1909, of $60,000. While this is an extraordinary increase it speaks well of the present condition of the bank.

Editorial Comment

To Noncontributing Banks

Secretary J. M. Dinwiddie, of the Iowa Bankers, is the dean of all the secretaries but he has not slowed down any, on that account, in his race for first place for his association in point of membership. Probably he is afraid that Keyser, Hughes, Rinaman, Frost, or Graettinger may begin to proselyte? At all events he still is after the outsiders and the delinquents. First the group officers were "jacked up" and then a finely worded letter telling the nonmembers that they long had been on the "free list" and ought to reciprocate, was sent out. After philosophizing, as is his wont, Mr. Dinwiddie states it thus plainly:

"Of course, looking at the profits, simply, you have not 'lost out,' for the benefits have been given you anyway. In other words, the Iowa Bankers Association has not withheld its benefits from any bank, banker, or banking institution, although it has not been favored with membership dues from some whom it has invited to become a member time and time again. You will bear me out in the statement that I have sent you all the literature we have sent anyone; all the cards, circulars, and proceedings, and that nothing has been withheld from you because you were not a member. Now, I am asking of you a favor. I am not altogether lacking in ambition. Aside from having the best association, I am ambitious to have your bank on the list of members this year, if for no longer, although I hope you will become a permanent member. The year ends June 1, 1909. A remittance now would pay dues to that date. We are going to do better by you than that. While we will probably continue working for the good of all, we propose that if you will remit the $5.00 membership fee, we will send to you a membership certificate and we will receipt to you for dues to June 1, 1910. Will you not make this one of your first items of business the day you receive this letter—won't you remit to-day—either to myself or to your group secretary or chairman, the names of whom appear in the last proceedings, a copy of which you have?"

Other states have kept a lot of "dead ones" on the free list for literature, information and lookout cards, but most of them will cease the practice this year. They should stop it. Iowa will stop it. The good fellows should not pay up for the noncontributors.

Bank Commissioner in Missouri

On January 15th, the new Missouri banking law providing for the separation of the banking department from the office of the secretary of state went into full effect. Missouri had been operating its banking department as a sort of annex to the office of the secretary of state since 1895. In ten years, the banking business of the state had increased so rapidly and the banking had become so much of a technical and scientific business that the great John E. Swanger recommended the passage of the new law creating a banking commissioner with full authority.

Illinois continues to supervise her banking in a perfunctory way as a division of the state auditor's office. It pretty generally is believed that this antiquated system is not working one whit better in this state than the similar arrangement which Mr. Swanger condemned in the state of Missouri. When he made his recommendation to the state legislature he was the secretary of state and acting bank commissioner, with full knowledge of the facts. Being an able, broad-minded man he took the first steps himself to divorce the department of state from all connection with the business of banking. Under the new law Missouri will have a bank commissioner with a deputy commissioner and the necessary clerks and stenographers at Jefferson City. The commissioner may appoint eight additional examiners under the new law. There is one weakness in the new Missouri act and the same thing probably is being overlooked in Minnesota.

The present Missouri law does not give the examiner control of liquidating and consolidating banks. Mr. Swanger gives it as his unqualified opinion "that every banking institution of this state, from the time it is brought into being by the charter until its charter is surrendered back to the state, should be under the control and direction of that arm of the state charged with authority of examination and supervision." Of course, this condition can be covered by amendment. It seems to be almost wanton that under the present law, banks are able to consolidate in Missouri without even notifying the secretary of state. They may also liquidate without notification. It does not seem that the interests of depositors and creditors of banking institutions are as fully protected as they might be with this omission in the law.

Missouri, however, can be depended upon to strengthen the hands of her banking commissioner. That officer will yet have full authority to make requirements of banks doing an unsafe, illegal, or unauthorized business. The proposed Minnesota law covers this point completely and any new act proposed in Illinois should include these provisions.

The Commercial West gives it as its opinion that "Private banks are out of style." It advises the great state of Texas to pass the state supervision bill now before its legislature and thus further encourage outside capital to come in. This enterprising paper has discovered through developments in its own state of Minnesota that outside investors are slow to advance money in states where private bankers are their chief competitors and doing business on their depositors' money.

The world's most beautiful exposition, according to a beautiful pamphlet just issued, will be the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific, to be held at Seattle this year, beginning June 1st. The booklet establishes the fact by photographic reproduction that the fair is likely to be ready at the time appointed. Its publicity chief, Welford Beaton, is using a catch phrase, "The fair that will be ready." It ought to establish his reputation as a discerning publicity man. The chief drawback of most world's fairs has been their lack of being prepared, only part of the exhibits, as a rule, being in place upon opening day.

A new postal bank bill has been introduced into congress by Senator Carter and has been modified to meet some of the objections found to his previous bill. Most bankers deny any necessity whatever for such banking facilities and ignore details altogether. If it shall become apparent that we are to have a postal bank whether we want it or not, bankers might do well to seek to control or modify its provisions to make them the least harmful to established conditions.

It now seems probable that Abner Smith and Gustav F. Sorrow, who for a time conducted the Bank of America in Chicago, will be sent to Joliet. They called it the "Bank of America," but between themselves and their friends, they regarded it as an institution designed "to separate people from their money." This in reality, was the only function it ever performed.

Bank directors will be pleased to learn that the supreme court of Illinois has decided that they may recover the bank's funds hereafter from stock brokers if they have been turned over without authority by a speculating cashier. In a general way, the court has held that gambling losses can be recovered.

London City and Midland Bank

The London City & Midland Bank, Ltd., with an authorized capital of $111,000,000 and a paid up capital of $18,995,500, showed at the beginning of January the remarkable aggregation of current deposits and other accounts of $334,872,000.

This is one of the largest deposit accounts of the great London banks and far surpasses the deposits of the large banks in New York City. The National City Bank of New York has deposits of $193,000,000; the National Bank of Commerce $150,450,000; the First National Bank $133,466,000, and the National Park Bank $102,115,000.

H. M. Carpenter, cashier of the Monticello State Bank, was at his desk, yesterday afternoon, for the first time since October 14th. Eighteen weeks is a long time to be ill of an acute disease. Mr. Carpenter had an unusually hard run of typhoid fever. During four weeks of that time he was delirious, and his life hung in the balance. But good medical attention and attentive nursing brought him through. He is still weak, but he expects to be at the bank for a few hours each day from now on, except on such days when the weather may be too bad for him to venture out. He will have to humor himself for several months. Fortunately the bank has been in good hands during his illness. President Farwell, Assistant Cashier Richardson and their subordinates have kept the institution going like a clock.—Monticello (Iowa) Express.

September 13th
Col. Farnsworth and President George M. Reynolds, of the American Bankers Association, after consulting every clearing house bank in Chicago, finally set upon September 13th as the time for the big Chicago convention this year. Headquarters will be at the Auditorium hotel, and the sessions will be held in the Auditorium theater. The date was deferred a week to make sure the New La Salle hotel will be finished. Every room will be available for reservation. The Auditorium can turn over about seven hundred rooms which with the 1,400 in the New La Salle ought to care for all of the early applicants. No bank in Chicago is to reserve any rooms (as a bank) and every one should write direct to the two hotels named. When these are full a committee will take charge of the work of finding rooms.

The Bank of Carteret Closed
Raleigh, N. C., February 22.—The Bank of Carteret, a state bank at Morehead City, has been closed by order of the North Carolina Corporation Commission, it being declared insolvent.

Michigan Banking News

By W. T. FOSTER

Ald. Glinnan, in co-operation with the mayor's office, has been gathering data on forms of regulation for loan offices. He has found ordinances in effect in Ohio that cope with the loan sharks a great deal more effectively than do the existing ordinances in Detroit, and he will on Tuesday night introduce an ordinance along reformative lines.

"The abuses permitted under the loan system in this city are barbarous," said Ald. Glinnan. "Usurious rates are exacted, and an inadequate check is maintained on them."

J. H. Johnson Back from New York

"The segregation of savings deposits and the careful safeguarding of the same."

This is the pith of a resolution adopted by the committee on savings bank laws, of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association, at sessions held in New York, last week, and which meetings were attended by J. H. Johnson, of Detroit, president of the Peninsular Savings Bank and of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association.

Discussing the meeting Mr. Johnson said:

"Unusual interest was shown in the subject of bringing about better care of savings deposits than now seems to exist. Careful investigation on the part of the committee showed 18 states without any law governing savings deposits; 12 states with general charters permitting the combination of commercial and savings business; three states providing for savings only on the mutual or trustee plan; the balance with fairly good regulations.

Those present as members of the committee and by invitation represented practically all types of banking who directly or indirectly receive savings deposits, and their ultimate conclusion as expressed in the resolution appears to be wise and timely. The resolution, in the form it was adopted, will meet with no opposition from the different banking interests since it does not interfere with their present business, except that it would require that a savings deposit, no matter whether it be in a national, a state, a mutual, or a stock savings bank, must be invested under reasonably uniform requirements.

"The force and effect of this will appeal to the depositor and to the business man at once, and will give a stability to the savings deposits of this country that can be brought about in no other way. The form which these investments will take must naturally vary according to the requirements of the locality, yet there should be and must be underlying principles governing these investments. Primarily, they should be invested, if possible, locally to build up the very communities that have saved this money; next, there should be universal restrictions limiting the amount that may be invested in any one class of securities, be it mortgages, bonds, merchandise in warehouse; tax warrants, or collateral loans; and that no savings money should be loaned to an officer or director; that is a commercial proposition; in brief, safety rather than large income should guide.

"If the report of the committee be finally approved by the association and put in force, in the natural course of events the burning question as to whether it is better for all concerned that one institution should be permitted to handle both a commercial and savings business, will be positively demonstrated, because in this as in other things the fittest will ultimately survive."

Bill to Prevent Stock Watering

The administration anti-stock watering bill, prepared by the attorney-general, was introduced Thursday afternoon in the senate by Senator Mapes and in the house by Rep. Henry. It says:

"Steam and electric railroads and other common carrier corporations must, before issuing stocks, bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, secure an order from the railroad commission authorizing such issue, designating the amount thereof and stating that in the opinion of the commission the use of the capital to be secured by the issue of such bonds or other evidences of indebtedness is reasonably required for the purpose of such corporation.

"After receiving an application for permission to issue bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, the commission may for the purpose of enabling it to determine whether it should grant such authority, make such investigation, hold such hearings and examine such witnesses, books, papers, documents or contracts as it may deem of importance in enabling it to reach a determination."

CHAPTER RECORD

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the Associated Chapters A. I. of B. in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Independent Action and Universal Membership

Beginning of the Chapter Movement in America

A large proportion of the banking fraternity and perhaps the majority of the members of the American Institute of Banking know quite well that the chapter movement had its beginnings in a small way, in Minneapolis. The members in those days styled themselves "bank clerks," which was well enough in the kindergarten stage, but soon was regarded as a rather diminutive and unimportant title for a rapidly growing and powerful organization. The chain of chapters which now stretches out over the country embraces certainly the majority of the junior bankers of the country and not a few bank officers who have received their advancement in many cases on account of work done in and benefits received from the chapters of the institute.

The Minneapolis chapter always has been a leader in the work and has produced some of the very best organizers, public speakers, and debaters known to the movement. The Minneapolis boys gave a benefit performance in the Lyric Theatre of their city on February 16th and 17th. The proceeds are to be devoted to the library and clubroom fund. They published for the occasion a very useful and instructive booklet in the shape of a program. The work of getting up this booklet was largely that of L. E. Wakefield, one of the most energetic toilers in the ranks. From this booklet are gleaned the following interesting facts concerning the history of the Minneapolis chapter and something about the chapter movement under the direction and patronage of the American Bankers Association.

To Minneapolis belongs the credit of having the first organization of bank clerks, and her example has been followed by all the large cities of the United States.

The Minneapolis chapter of the American Institute of Banking was organized in the year 1899 through the efforts of Joseph Chapman, Jr., under the name of the Minneapolis Bank Clerks' Association, the purpose of the association being to effect a closer bond among the clerks in the various banks, and for the bettering of themselves along educational lines. In the year 1901, the American Bankers Association in their convention at Richmond, Virginia, made a provision for the establishment of the American Institute of Banking with chapters in all the large cities. The Minneapolis chapter was one of the first to join this movement, which has steadily grown until there is now a chapter in all the large cities. The main work of the organization all along has been of an educational nature. Each year we have lectures by prominent university professors on the subject of banking law, political economy, and other subjects both interesting and instructive to bank men. The Minneapolis chapter has been represented in the conventions of the Minnesota Bankers Association on the basis of one delegate for every twenty-five members, and for three years they have been represented at these conventions by a debating team in debates against members from the St. Paul chapter.

The Minnesota Bankers Association provided a beautiful silver cup as a prize for the winner of two out of these three debates, and the Minneapolis chapter is now the proud possessor of this cup.

There has also been organized in connection with the association of chapters a debating conference composed of chapters in the cities of Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and Minneapolis. During the year 1908, Minneapolis was represented by a team in debates against Milwaukee and Chicago, and so far during 1909, Minneapolis has had one debate with Milwaukee.

L. E. WAKEFIELD
Minneapolis

During the present season, previous to the holidays, we had lectures from H. J. Fletcher, on the subject of bankruptcy. The aim of the chapter since the holidays and for the remaining period of this season is to have lectures by prominent business men. The meeting on February 2d was addressed by William Henry Eustis on the subject of "The Growth of Knowledge." In the near future the chapter will be addressed by Henry Vonder Weyer, cashier of the National German American Bank, St. Paul, on the subject of foreign exchange. We will also have a debate between the local chapter members on the subject of postal savings banks. Later on we have secured promises from the following men for addresses: William Braden of Gorham, Braden & Company, former governor S. R. Van Sant, and F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National Bank. Unless arrangements now in progress fall through, we will close the year with the annual banquet, at which speakers of national reputation will address us.

At the convention of the American Bankers Association held in Richmond, Va., in 1901, an appropriation of ten thousand dollars was made for the purpose of defraying the expenses of organizing and conducting an institute for bank clerks. The action was taken in response to a movement inaugurated by the clerks themselves in several of the larger cities in the United States. This financial assistance, which has been continued annually since then, together with the co-operation of the Bankers Association and the moral support of many of the individuals connected with it, has made it possible for the organization of bank clerks to make the splendid progress which it has. It has grown to be one of the greatest educational organizations in the world, a recognized potential force for the betterment of banking, the object of the institute being to promote the education of bankers in banking.

With the idea of broadening the scope of the movement, representatives from the then independent chapters held a convention in Cleveland, in 1903, at which an effort was made to form a federation of chapters but it was not until 1906 that an actual association of chapters was formed and known as the American Institute of Bank Clerks. This association was under the control of a board of trustees appointed by the American Bankers Association. The marked success of the institute was recognized last year by the American Bankers Association, the greatest financial body in the world, when the institute was made a "section" of the parent organization and its management and control was given over to its members. The membership now numbers nearly ten (10) thousand and is divided into two classes, viz: chapters and fellows. Chapter members are those who belong to the local organizations which are only adapted to cities of considerable size and financial activity. Fellows of the institute consist of former national members, bank officers who are interested in the work and aims of the institute, chapter members who have been president or vice-president of national conventions, presidents of local chapters or those who have passed the standard examinations of the institute.

To reach country bank clerks and officers who can not have the privilege of membership in a city chapter, a correspondence chapter is conducted and an alliance has been formed with the International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa., for the conduct of a complete course of study in banking and banking law. The institute thus offers to every bank man in the United States an educational opportunity of the highest order and at a minimum cost.

Under the supervision of Geo. E. Allen, the educational director, is published the bulletin, the official organ of the institute. This magazine is published monthly and it exhibits the highest type of matter as well as printer's art. The best papers prepared by chapter members on financial or kindred topics are published and a careful reader of this publication alone receives a liberal education in current financial affairs.

Each year a national convention is held by delegates from each chapter and at these conventions and through the columns of the Bulletin has been evolved the splendid organization now known as the American Institute of Banking.

Minneapolis chapter exists for the sole purpose of promoting the educational and social welfare of the bank men of the city. In order that this object may be best accomplished, it is first

New York Chapter Meeting

At a recent meeting of the New York chapter Edward P. Moxey delivered an important address on the subject of "Bank Examination." The educational committee of the New York chapter is doing some fine work with Milton L. Wicks as the chairman.

The Board of Governors of New York chapter by an appropriation, together with the courtesy of the American Bankers Association, in extending to the classes the use of its rooms, has made it possible to provide university courses at about one-third the usual cost. Each member seeking the certificate of the institute pays but five dollars for each subject.

Philadelphia Chapter Hears Masterly Address on Advertising by T. D. MacGregor

In the presentation, at our meeting last Friday evening, of his address entitled "Advertising Results," T. D. MacGregor, of the Bankers' Magazine, New York, gave us one of the best talks which it has been our pleasure to hear. The subject was handled in a masterly and comprehensive manner. It was full of "meat" and many excellent and practical points of value were emphasized. The speaker explained that he was not a banker but represented that class composed of many thousands of customers who had never been behind the counter of a bank. As a student of banking from the outside viewpoint, a hard one for the banker himself to get, Mr. MacGregor showed, however, that such viewpoint was very important for the success of the bank's advertising.

"Presuming to tell Philadelphians anything about advertising," said Mr. MacGregor, "I feel as though I were carrying coals to Newcastle. Philadelphia is quite generally known as the home of good advertising. Here lived the first, and one of the cleverest of American advertising men—Benjamin Franklin. Here was produced an advertisement, which, although it appeared almost one hundred and thirty-three years ago, is 'pulling' yet, as the figures of the immigration bureau show. It was the most effective political advertisement ever written—The Declaration of American Independence. Here was created an advertising medium whose circulation is now world-wide, and the trade mark an emblem of liberty, the Stars and Stripes."

The speaker then discussed the importance of advertising which having become an all-important factor in our daily lives, affected every one in some way or other. Advertising in its modern development, it was shown, is a fascinating subject, the increasing complexity of commerce and daily life making it an absolutely indispensable factor in business and a necessity born of modern conditions and methods in the commercial world. "Nowadays," Mr. MacGregor said, "advertising not only aids in satisfying old wants but it also creates new ones. It makes two blades of grass grow in the business world where only one grew before." The annual expenditure for advertising in the United States, it was stated, is variously estimated at from $300,000,000, to half a billion dollars a year. The advertising in ten representative magazines last year was said to have amounted to almost $8,000,000.

Continuing the speaker said: "There is only one test of all bank advertising, and that is results. Advertising does bring results, but sometimes the results are on the wrong side of the ledger. The right kind of advertising pays, but all advertising is not the right kind.

"The two most important factors of resultful advertising are right mediums and right copy. In the first place, to be effective, your advertising must be seen. That involves the question of mediums and display. Then it must excite and hold interest, convince and lead to favorable action. The daily newspaper is the most valuable advertising medium for any bank seeking local business. There is no better way to reach a large number of persons cheaply and effectively.

"The newspaper is a part of the daily life of the American people. It goes everywhere. Everybody reads it. Every day it comes entirely fresh and new. If he is wise, the advertiser in it makes his message fresh and new daily too.

"The daily newspaper can best give the constant repetition that wears away forgetfulness and forces attention. It enables the advertiser to tell his story quickly and makes it possible for him to reach many whom he could reach to advantage in no other way, as everybody who reads at all reads some newspaper.

"Size of circulation is not the only thing to be considered in choosing an advertising medium. There is a quality as well as a quantity factor which enters into the case. The editorial policy and the character of the news columns of a newspaper have an important bearing upon the advertising value of the medium. A wide-awake paper which is clean, ably edited and progressively managed, is a splendid place for an advertising bank to present its announcements.

"In such a paper your advertisement will be in good company. An honest and fearless newspaper inspires confidence on the part of the readers and this confidence is given likewise to those who advertise in it. If its editorials carry weight and its news matter is well presented, the advertisements in its columns have the best kind of environment for satisfactory results.

"What is 'copy?' The word is a technical term for the text matter of advertisements, but a better definition is that it is the life and soul of advertising. Bank advertisement copy should be original, concise, logical and well written in simple language. It should not consist of glittering generalities, nor of long, involved sentences. The headlines should be interest-exciting, and if possible, should briefly tell the whole story of the advertisement so that hasty or casual readers of the advertisement may receive a distinct impression.

"As a rule copy for the advertisements should be changed with each insertion. But the same typographical style should be maintained throughout so that there may be both continuity and differentiation in the advertisements, the former building up, by constant repetition, a good will and the latter educating the public and inducing people to take definite action.

"The attempt should not be made to cover the whole field of the bank's service in one advertisement, but different phases should be taken up in each of a series of advertisements! One or two strong display lines in an ordinary sized advertisement are enough—the headline and the name of the institution. There ought to be as much personality and human interest as possible in bank advertising. At the same time dignity must be maintained. Humor is always out of place in advertising, although good nature and kindness are not to be tabooed.

"Remember that the good ad. is not the one you quote and talk about, but the one you act upon. Financial advertising copy can not be too strong, concise and original. It is not enough for the writer to know the inside facts about his particular proposition. Indeed, strange as it may seem, you may be too close to your own business to realize its strongest advertising points. It will pay you to cultivate that valuable 'outside' attitude, the viewpoint of the disinterested man or woman—your prospective customer. Don't look at the proposition entirely from your standpoint. Put yourself in the other fellow's place. Emphasize 'you' and 'your' in the copy, not 'we' and 'our.' Get the 'you' habit in your advertising. It is polite, and it is good business, too.

"Having chosen a suitable head, you have the subject of your advertisement. Pick out the talking point or points you wish to develop. Then sit down and write as fast as the ideas come to you. Give real arguments and reasons, not just bald, unsupported statements. Be logical and consistent.

"When you have written yourself out on that particular subject, rewrite your composition. Cut out all unnecessary words. Condense. Boil it down. Use the shortest, simplest, strongest word that come to you. It is better to use short, easy-reading paragraphs. There are several reasons why this wholesale pruning process is a good thing. It saves valuable space, makes easy reading and permits more effective display.

"An illustration increases the value of an ad. if it is a good illustration. It attracts attention and drives home its points. A trademark emblem in advertising is good because it gives something concrete around which a popular conception of the advertising institution can be built. At the same time if it is appropriate it can constantly advertise some feature of the institution's strength or service. A constantly advertised emblem becomes in time a very valuable asset on account of the cumulative force of advertising. Every ad. is a drop in the bucket of prestige. Get a good emblem to represent you, make it known by advertising and then back up your advertising by making good on your promises and by courteous and prompt attention to the wants of your customers."

Thomas Martindale, well known as a lecturer, traveler and merchant, was the second speaker of the evening. He gave an extremely interesting address on "The Call of the Wild." Stereopticon views illustrated his talk which covered some of Mr. Martindale's many experiences in the Maine woods.

Chicago Chapter Meeting

At the meeting of the Chicago Chapter Tuesday evening, E. St. Elmo Lewis, Advertising Manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, of Detroit, delivered an address on the subject of "Bank Advertising." He interestingly told the boys what bankers can learn from other advertisers. Mr. Lewis is one of the best known advertising men in the United States, and is author of "Financial Advertising," "The Credit Man and His Work," and other kindred books.

G. A. Voss, of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, who rendered a vocal solo, and G. A. Herzog, of the Corn Exchange National, who rendered a piano number, completed the program of a very interesting and instructive meeting. The illustrated talk on deep waterways, followed by a smoker, which was scheduled for the evening, was called off.

Banking Lectures

Ralph C. Wilson of the Bankers National of Chicago has just completed a series of lectures on practical banking at the University of Illinois. The regular work in business administration at the university is supplemented each year with talks by practical men of affairs. The course of lectures which Mr. Wilson has just concluded has been one of the most successful ever given. The subjects treated were loans and discounts, collections and the clearing system, and domestic exchange.

Mr. Wilson said that the great function in banking is not in lending money, as commonly supposed, but in lending credit. A large part of the business of the country is carried on by credit. The loans of the banks give rise to a large amount of deposits against which checks are drawn. Bank checks are the real elastic currency and it would be physically impossible to carry on all the business of the country with money. There are three principal classes of bank loans, the credit loan, discounts or the purchase of trade paper, and the collateral loan. These different forms of lending were examined in great detail and the conditions under which they are employed fully explained. An interesting feature of the discussion of loans was the analysis of the function of the note broker and his relation to the banks. The note broker buys commercial paper from the maker and sells it to the banks. In this way it is possible for a section of the country in need of money to borrow from a community where money would be idle because of lax business. The more favorable rate of interest which borrowers can receive is also a very important consideration.

In discussing the clearing system he stated that the check, the perfection of elastic currency, is gradually expanding its usefulness. While it will never entirely displace money, it will undoubtedly further restrict its use through the development of the clearing system. The details of the exchange of checks through the clearing house and the settlement of balances were explained. Theoretically the balances are settled in cash, but as a matter of fact, very little cash is used, the practice of the banks in the Chicago Clearing House being to trade their balances. Aside from routine functions, it was pointed out that the clearing houses have an important influence in preventing bad banking through their system of examinations. This function of clearing houses, it was believed, would be vastly more important in the future, the proposal to organize clearing houses for country banks having met with almost universal approval by bankers.

Mr. Wilson concluded his lectures with a detailed account of domestic exchange. The trade conditions, as the marketing of the crops, which determine the demand for exchange and the movement of money from one section to another were fully explained. Mr. Wilson said that the country check was constantly growing in importance as a means of remittance although there are yet many serious questions concerning its use unanswered.

His lectures were followed with much interest by the students in business administration and have proved a great stimulus. It is a fact that the university instructor, however well prepared, cannot give so much life and color to a practical business question as the successful man fresh from the office or counting room. The university counts itself as fortunate in being able to enlist the interest and secure the service of capable business men in this way.

St. Louis Chapter Entertainment

St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Banking, gave an entertainment and dance at the Knights of Columbus Building, 3549 Olive Street, Friday night, February 26th. Miss Alma Dreifus' soprano solos were the feature of the evening. In addition to Miss Dreifus' songs, the program included a piano solo by Mrs. L. W. Gerling, two selections by the Westminster Quartet, a cello duet by L. William Gerling and Arthur Berger and a recitation by Percival E. Meier. After the musical program there was dancing.

Carter Substitutes New Postal Bill

Washington, February 22.—Senator Carter to-day presented a substitute for the original postal savings bank bill. The substitute creates a board of five trustees, which is to exercise entire supervision over the postal savings bank system. This board is to consist of the postmaster-general, the attorney-general, the secretary of the treasury, and two civilians to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, the civilians to receive $10,000 a year each. The board of trustees is empowered to determine in what banks shall be deposited the funds intrusted to the postal banks, and will have the discretion of selecting either national or state banks or both. The new bill makes no change in the interest rates.

Senator Cummins at once objected to consideration of the substitute until certain amendments he had offered to the original bill had been acted upon. The provision which makes it possible to withdraw for certain purposes deposits of the savings funds in the treasury of the United States was criticised. Senator Cummins said it would be viewed by the people of the West as "simply another method of collecting money so that it will find its way into the money centers and incapacitate it to render the function to our people which it was intended to render."

The reception on Monday evening at the new quarters of the American National, of Houston, Tex., proved to be quite a social event and the elegant appointments brought forth many congratulatory remarks from the guests who visited the institution. The bank had been crowded throughout the entire day and it was with some difficulty that the officials were able to transact necessary business.

But when evening came the public practically took possession of the building and between the hours fixed for the reception hundreds crowded into the new quarters. The banking rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion. Stately palms bowed a welcome while a reception committee composed of directors and their wives saw to it that every attention was paid to those who came to inspect.

The whole interior arrangement of the bank is in keeping with modern improvements in this line. There are reception rooms for customers, private offices for the various officials and the latest improved facilities for carrying on the work of the employees. The vault in the rear of the building is said to be safeguarded by one of the largest and best doors found in any bank in Texas. The vault is in three parts, the one on the right to be used as a record vault, the center one for the safe-keeping of the bank's money and the one on the left to be devoted to safety deposit boxes.

The ladies' reception room is handsomely fitted up for the accommodation of lady customers while there has been an innovation in establishing the office of "ladies' teller," whose duty it will be to pay special attention to lady customers of the institution.

During the evening the officers of the bank received universal congratulations from visitors on the completeness of the bank and the handsome appearance of the finish and fixtures.

Comparison of these statements with those of November 27, 1908, shows an increase in loans and discounts of 1.62 per cent; cash and exchange 7.02 per cent; deposits 6.39 per cent and gross resources 4.36 per cent. Increase over February 14, 1908, are: Loans and discounts 1.51 per cent, cash and exchange 33.39 per cent, deposits 17.20 per cent, and gross resources 11.52 per cent.

Bankers and business men are convinced that as soon as the uncertainty regarding the tariff problem is dispelled the South and the West will begin an era of surpassing prosperity never known before.

The Sour Lake State Bank

The first meeting of the stockholders of the newly organized Sour Lake (Tex.) State Bank was held in the bank building Saturday afternoon. The banking business of R. S. Directors: R. S. Sterling, H. C. Hurley, Gus Mobray, Roy Hankamer, M. J. McLoughlin, Thomas P. Lee, J. B. Robinson, M. Finkelstein, and Frank H. Carpenter.

On the second Tuesday in March a meeting of the directors will be held, at which time a site on which to erect a bank building will be selected. The building will be a two-story brick structure and will have several compartments. Several property owners have volunteered to donate a site. The site can not be determined upon until the oil field, which is being extended, is more definitely defined.

House Passes Kansas Bank Guaranty Bill

The house, by a vote of 94 to 9, passed the Kansas bank deposit guaranty law Saturday afternoon. Just before the bill was passed a new section was inserted which permits trust companies to participate in the fund under practically the same restrictions as the banks. Because of this two votes were lost to the bill.

On the roll call the votes against the guaranty bill were by Boyd, Brighton of Montgomery, Haskins, Hines, Morgan of Hodgeman, Snyder, Stone of Sherman, Stout and White. The house bill has been substituted for the senate bill so that the measure will go back to the senate Tuesday morning as a senate bill.

The senate measure limits the guaranty to interest bearing time certificates for not less than six months and for not more than $3,000 to any one person. There are other amendments to the bill and it is expected that the senate will refuse to concur in the house amendments and ask for a conference to iron out the differences.

For the past ten days various cities have been "inaugurating" W. H. Taft, but by the next issue of THE CHICAGO BANNER, he will actually be in the chair. So far as is known three important policies are known to be receiving the most careful attention from President-elect Taft. They are: Honest and sincere revision of the tariff.

Proper currency legislation to take the place of the makeshift Aldrich-Vreeland bill.

Control of great corporations.

These are the subjects, so far as can be learned, that he discusses with his friends when in Washington. It is expected that he will have something to say on them in his inaugural address, though he is expected to discuss the last two in much fuller detail at the opening of the regular session of Congress next December.

The Necessity for Thorough Bank Examination

clerk in the institution a thief. As a consequence, and properly so, he is thoroughly detested by them, and instead of receiving their hearty co-operation in his work, every obstacle is thrown in his way to impede his progress.

A thorough knowledge of accounts, not only those of financial institutions, but those of other lines as well, must be possessed by the competent bank examiner. This knowledge should be acquired preferably through experience, but the general principles on which all accounting rests, may be acquired from those institutions of a first class character, which offer courses in higher accounting. The more experience a person has had in accounting work the better bank examiner he makes.

Of course the most important thing that makes toward a competent bank examiner is a thorough familiarity with every detail of the banking business. Unless a man knows the various books and records used in each department of a bank it is impossible for him to make a proper examination.

Not many years ago a leading member of Congress prevailed upon the then Comptroller of the Currency to appoint as national bank examiner for his district, a gentleman, whom he praised to the skies as being thoroughly qualified for the position. As a matter of fact that gentleman in question had never been inside of a bank in his life, except to make a deposit, draw a check, or have a note discounted. It is needless to say that his examinations were mere farces, and the story goes, that the cashier of one of the banks he was trying to examine, out of the goodness of his heart, made out for him his report to the Comptroller. Could anything illustrate to better advantage the necessity for a thorough banking training.

Bank examiners, especially those examining banks located in the larger cities, should have a thorough knowledge of all financial subjects. They should be well posted as to the current market value of securities and commodities, also be familiar with the financial rating of the makers of the paper held by the bank, and have a practical knowledge of general commercial law.

Above everything else, he must be a man of keen judgment and sterling character. Of what value is it to a man, if he have all other qualifications and lack the proper judgment in those cases where to think is to act; and where the thought and the action depend directly upon the discerning judgment of the examiner himself.

As to the question of character, little need be said. No one, unless his character be of the best, should occupy such an important position of honor, trust and responsibility.

Bank examinations may be of an extensive or limited character, according to the information desired. We can classify the ground covered in making bank examinations, as follows:

- First. Verification of cash and securities.
- Second. Appraisal of assets.
- Third. Examination of a department of the bank.
- Fourth. Complete examination of the bank in all departments.

Many banks employ public accountants to make sundry tests of the cash on hand and securities held by the bank, several times a year at irregular periods. An examination of this character is both a waste of time and money. If there has been a defalcation, the defaulter is rarely fool enough to have his books call for a larger amount of money than he has on hand.

I recall a case in which a teller, having embezzled some of the funds entrusted to him, concealed his shortage by using the money or checks received from deposits made late in the day, holding out the deposit tickets until after the opening of business next day. If a count had been made of the money in his department, after the close of business on any day, it would have agreed with the amount as shown by the books to be held by him. Of what value would a verification of cash on hand be in cases of this kind.

A shortage of securities also, may be readily concealed by having the records of the bank in accord with the actual securities on hand. The books, fixed in this way, would not show all the securities received as collateral for loans, but only that portion held by the bank.

One of the main features of the official examination lies in the appraisal of assets, as the Comptroller of the Currency and the state authorities are interested, primarily, in the solvency of the institution. For this reason the official bank examiner appraises assets. He does not audit books. He takes a balance sheet off the ledgers, but does not call in and balance the pass books of depositors. He examines the collateral for loans, but does not verify from the borrower the correctness of the amount.

In connection with an examination made for the purpose of testing the solvency of the institution, one of the most important powers possessed by the national examiner, and one which is practically never exercised by him, is the right, "To examine any of the officers and agents thereof on oath." If this power were exercised and the officers and agents realized that they would be prosecuted for perjury for any false statement made to the examiner, there would, in my opinion, be fewer failures of national banks.

Sometimes an accountant is employed, or the clerical force of the bank used, to make a complete examination of one department. This examination, if properly made, is of much importance and is not to be confused with the superficial examination which I have already mentioned.

Take for instance, the banks and bankers ledgers—which show the amounts due to, or due from correspondents. The correctness of these accounts may be verified by statements rendered or received, which serve as the basis for reconciliation reports, disclosing the outstanding items of difference, which must be satisfactorily adjusted.

The individual ledgers may be verified through the calling in and balancing under one date, of all the pass books of depositors, or by rendering to them a statement of their account, with a request for a report on the same.

So every department of a bank may be examined of itself, but it must always be borne in mind that such examination must be absolutely thorough to be of any practical value, and the danger always exists of the switching of shortages between departments.

After all, the only reliable examination is the one embracing all departments of a bank, made as of a given date. An examination of this kind, in addition to furnishing a thorough verification of such department of a bank, prevents the switching of shortages from one department to another, which might readily be done were the examination confined to the affairs of a single department.

In conclusion I want to say a word in reference to the employment of the competent certified public accountant to make bank examinations for the officers and directors.

I have shown that the banker cannot rely on the examination made by the board of directors. Neither can he rely on that made by the clerical force. The official examination of national banks is intrusted to a national bank examiner who examines the institution to the best of his ability and according to rules laid down by the Comptroller of the Currency to whom his reports are made. These reports are seldom if ever seen by bank officers, and unless the examiner chooses to inform them that everything is right they are none the wiser. In state banks, examinations are made by state bank examiners under state laws, but these reports are filed with the banking department of each state, and of course the officers of the bank do not have access to them.

The officers and directors of a bank, however, are held responsible if anything goes wrong, and the blame must rest upon them. Under these circumstances the certified public accountant stands ready and prepared to render his services to the directors and officers of a bank, to whom he makes his report. The bank, employing his services, reaps the benefit of his suggestions for the improvement of its system of accounting, which he is able to give as a result of years of experience and study.

The reputation of the accountant, moreover, depends upon the accuracy of his work. If he allows a fraud to go undetected, because a bad system of bookkeeping made detection unusually difficult, his reputation is damaged. The more perfect he can make the system of accounting the easier he makes his own task, and the higher he builds his reputation for careful work.

The late James H. Eckels, who ranked as one of the foremost bankers of the country, expressed himself on the subject of bank examination, as follows:

"I believe that a bank cannot make a better investment than to have an independent audit made by an expert, both for the benefit of the officers and directors. To such independent audits can be given more time and a more complete analysis of the condition of the bank being examined than under the ordinary examination made by the directors without the aid of an expert."

Hon. Charles G. Dawes, ex-Comptroller of the Currency, and president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, of Chicago, expresses himself upon this subject as follows:

"In reference to the advisability of a periodical examination of the affairs of banks and trust companies, made by experts, for the benefit of the officers and directors of such institutions, I will state, that I deem such a course as most advisable. While in the larger cities the public examiners have as a rule, a compensation sufficient to enable them to make a proper examination, the national bank act in its provision for compensation of examiners, outside of the central reserve cities, in effect places a premium upon hasty and incomplete work. This defect has been recognized by most of the Comptrollers of the Currency, and the attention of Congress invited to it. However, both in the central reserve cities and elsewhere, a periodical examination by experts of the affairs of banking institutions I deem important."

From the standpoint of self interest, if from no other, the examination made by the certified public accountant is highly desirable. A bank can make its appeal to the public with far greater assurance if beneath its statement appears the certificate of a responsible and competent accountant. The deposits of a bank are the business man's cash. He exchanges his money for a bank account because he believes it will be paid. How can a bank claim this confidence unless it leaves no stone unturned to insure the safety of his deposits? The officers, moreover, have a duty to the stockholders. They have placed him in a position of trust to earn them dividends. He must not only invest the funds of the bank wisely, and steadily increase the line of deposits, but every precaution must be taken in order that the losses should be as few and as small as possible. The official is bound to make some losses. The necessity of explanations to stockholders will sometimes be forced upon him. He should see to it that losses arise from causes outside his control, and not through the dishonesty of an employee, which regular examination would have prevented.

The bank that surrounds itself with every safeguard is in the strongest position to command a banking business of the community.

The audit of bank books is being widely adopted by conservative bankers everywhere. It furnishes the best insurance against dishonesty, the best means of improving the administrative service of the bank, and is a strong bid for public confidence and support.

Oshkosh Bank Closes

Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock the National Union Bank of Oshkosh, went out of existence and on next Tuesday morning the City National, its successor, will open the doors and commence business where the other one left off. There will be no interruption in business. The City National is capitalized at $200,000 and has a surplus of $40,000. The officers are: President, George Bauman; vice-president, J. Earl Morgan; cashier, A. T. Hennig. The National Union Bank, which went out of existence to-day, was organized in 1891, having succeeded the Union National, organized in 1871.

Secretary Langson Dead

William J. Langson, secretary and treasurer of the Milwaukee chamber of commerce for forty-four years, died last week, at the residence of his son-in-law, Harry A. Plumb, 1927 State Street, at the age of 71 years. For nearly a week Mr. Langson was in an unconscious condition, following a stroke of paralysis.

The Denmark State Bank

The Denmark State Bank has been organized with a capital of $25,000 at New Denmark, Brown county. Mitchell Joannes is president, H. F. Buchman, vice-president and J. E. Hutchenson, cashier.

The Marshfield State Bank

Carl W. Heyl, of Madison, has been secured as cashier of the Marshfield State Bank and will take charge on March 1st. He is at the present time assistant cashier of the Bank of Wisconsin.

New Bank Building

G. D. Sargent, of Waushara, is having plans and specifications prepared for his bank building at Plainfield.

The Fidelity Savings Bank

The Fidelity Savings Bank of Antigo reports capital of $50,000. Henry Hay is president; Anton Molle, vice-president, and Walter R. Daskam, cashier.

First National of Grantsburg

A. E. Nelson has been elected vice-president of the First National of Grantsburg, in place of Martin Giswold.

To Erect New Building

The Bank of Sheboygan will erect a new bank building.

Bankers Praise Van Slyke

Milwaukee bankers speak in terms of highest praise for the veteran Wisconsin banker. N. B. Van Slyke, whose funeral took place last week at Madison. Bankers state that during his long business career with a record as a banker for half a century, Mr. Van Slyke never was known to deviate in the least from the conservative path of banking, and none of the alluring "ideas" and "reforms" in finance or banking, had any attractions for him. For years he was a member of the executive council of the Wisconsin State Bankers Association and served for a time as its president. He was known among bankers of the country as one of the most sound and conservative bankers.

Mr. Van Slyke was a poet of some ability, and, at the suggestion of several friends, he some time ago compiled and published his poetic efforts, under the title of "Chaff." In these are found poetic references to financial panics; political subjects, satires upon the "silver issue," and some humorous dreams of "holdups," bank robberies, and the like.

Insured Against Sneak Thieves

If Jimmy Morgan, alias James Dailey, and his gang had made a clean "getaway" with the $3,800 stolen from Daniel Sullivan, the Boston store messenger boy, who was robbed in the First National of Milwaukee last Monday morning, the bank and store would not have been loser by the robbery. Insurance against this class of robbery is held by the bank.

In the bank, however, the precautions of the manager, whose employees handle thousands of dollars each day, are multitudinous. The bank usually is insured against every possible loss, from the robbery of a messenger boy, the embezzlement of an employee to the robbery of an express or mail package.

Pioneer's Low Cost Policy

The somewhat remarkable success of The Pioneer Life, of Pekin, Ill., in its savings bank system of life insurance has resulted in the issuance of a new low cost policy. There is an undoubted demand for life insurance at actual cost, and this form eclipses anything heretofore offered by a reliable life company.

This is the cheapest, as well as the simplest safe plan of life insurance there is. The rates are subject to annual reduction to conform to the actual mortality experience of the company, so that, in view of their rapid growth, they offer the opportunity of securing protection at less actual cost than it can be had from any other insurance company. There are other options that make this an ideal policy for men who desire protection at the lowest possible present cost, in which the investment element, surrender values and all the other unnecessary features that add so largely to the expense of "old line" insurance, are entirely eliminated.

New Bank for New Salem

A new bank is to be established at New Salem, N. D., about the first of April, with Philip Blank, W. H. Mann, F. Weigman, Wm. Thiele, Wm. Lehfild and Max Schultze as incorporators.

Samuel Payne has been elected a director of the Merchants National of New York, in place of Joseph Trevor, deceased.

In and Around Pittsburgh By LATIMER T. LAWTON

Preparations are being made by the Lincoln National of Pittsburgh for removing to its temporary home on Liberty Avenue, at the head of Smithfield Street. The building now occupied by the bank will be razed, as it is a part of the property to be occupied by the new Oliver Building. Officers of the Lincoln announce that it will be located at the entrance to the Oliver Building, May 1, 1910. The temporary quarters will be opened Tuesday morning.

The Sterling Trust Company

Articles of incorporation were filed at Dover, Del., for the Sterling Trust Company of Pittsburgh, to transact a general trust business, to deal in bonds, mortgages, etc. Incorporators: Frank M. McKelvey, Everett T. Marshall, John W. Graham, John H. Casper, Rush C. Powelson, all of Pittsburgh; Fred A. Rawlins, Bellevue, Pa.; H. Stidman Rawlins, Avalon, Pa.; Harry W. Davis, Wilmington, Del. Capital stock, $200,000.

Dean of Pittsburgh Exchange Dead

John D. Bailey, for many years dean of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, and one of the best known bankers in the city, died last week, at his residence, 362 California Avenue, Northside. Funeral services were conducted at the residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Bailey was long one of the most familiar figures of the financial district.

Anti-loan Shark Bills

Senator Fox, chairman of the judiciary special committee of the senate, has announced a public hearing on the "anti-loan shark" bills, next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

First National of Leechburg

The progressive First National of Leechburg, one of the strongest of the great banks of the Allegheny valley in its current statement shows a very excellent condition and continued growth. The capital stock of this institution is $50,000 and its surplus and profits is $43,636, while to date the institution has paid $27,000 in dividends. Its deposits have now reached nearly a third of a million, the statement showing them to be $324,557, and the total $468,193, including the $50,000 circulation issued. Captain Alfred Hicks, one of the best known financial men of the valley is president of the bank; R. J. Long is vice-president, and the efficient cashier is C. J. Nieman.

Demand for Mining Stocks

The demand for mining stock is not as pronounced as usual, but trading is such as to show that some Pittsburgh traders are committed to the lower-priced shares when there is an opportunity to buy them at what is generally believed to be the bottom. The absence of information calculated to influence the movement is one of the interesting features of the situation.

New National for Souderton

A new national bank is to be organized at Souderton with a capital of $50,000.

Honor Vindicated

The eighteen months' quest of a young banker after his lost honor ended last week, when Thomas Gordon, a negro, formerly janitor at the First National of Turtle Creek, was brought to Pittsburgh from Florida and placed in jail, charged with larceny.

The banker is T. W. Carroll, who was cashier of the Turtle Creek Bank, a year and a half ago. At that time a package containing $4,500 disappeared, and no trace of the thief could be found. Carroll was suspected and after he had made the loss good he resigned and took up the task of proving himself innocent.

Shortly afterward Gordon disappeared and Carroll suspected he was the thief. The trail led to Ocala, Florida, where it was found the negro has established himself in business. The negro was indicted several months ago.

Ramsey Found Guilty

W. W. Ramsey, former president of the German National of Pittsburgh, has been found guilty in connection with the recent graft exposures. The jury returned a sealed verdict.

Ramsey was accused of bribing Councilman John F. Klein, by giving him $17,500, for which amount Klein was to secure the passage of an ordinance making the bank a depository for city funds.

It was learned that Ramsey's attorneys will ask for a new trial. Under the verdict the dependant is liable to a sentence of fourteen years and a fine of $22,000.

Immediately following the Ramsey verdict Councilman Klein was placed on trial on a charge of soliciting a bribe. Klein pleaded "not guilty" and the selection of a jury was taken up.

Pittsburgh Bond Houses

Bond houses report an excellent demand for bonds of the better grade. Pittsburgh investors have bought liberally of bonds during the past few months, and it is noticeable that when the stock markets are dull the demand for high-grade securities improve at once.

The Akron National

The directors of the new Akron National have elected W. P. Albright president, and selected a site in which to begin business.

The Loganton National

The Loganton National, capital $25,000, has been established. F. R. Harter is president; G. S. Boone, vice-president, and W. A. Morris, cashier.

The Spokane and Eastern Trust Company

Assets of $32,000 in excess of all deposits are shown as the result of an examination of the savings department of the Spokane & Eastern Trust Company by a committee consisting of Robert Fairley, city comptroller; F. P. Greene, county auditor; Zach Stewart, county treasurer, and Dr. George S. Allison. The deposits amount to $778,571, and there was on hand cash to the amount of $82,750, bonds with a par value of $281,424, warrants amounting to $219,718 and first mortgages to the amount of $226,571.

First National of West Salem

The First National of West Salem, Ill., reports capital of $25,000. William Harrison is president; Geo. C. Walser and Joel Bailey, vice-presidents, and J. A. Turner, cashier.

First National of Byesville

W. H. Davis has been elected a director of the First National of Byesville, O.

Des Moines, February 25.—Two successful group meetings, February 22d, launched the convention season for Iowa bankers most successfully. Group Seven met at Cedar Rapids Monday. Group Eleven met at Keokuk. Both meetings were reported as being instructive and well attended.

The session of the Group Seven meeting was held in the club room of the Montrose hotel. The Cedar Rapids Clearing House was the host of the visiting bankers who attended in large numbers. Charles A. Blossom of Belle Plaine gave the chairman's address at 11:30. Secretary O. H. Leonard of Cedar Falls gave his report. Then the bankers enjoyed a banquet. After the banquet, J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National of Minneapolis gave the leading address of the meeting. "Problems of Investing Funds of a Bank" was his subject. E. M. Scott of Cedar Rapids discussed pending legislation. T. J. Eighmey of Waterloo, Ralph Moore of Traer and W. A. Dexter of Toledo spoke on bank examinations. The discussion was general. The Cedar Rapids bankers are "jolly good fellows" as they love to boast and they spared no pains to make the guests feel at home.

Group Eleven Meeting

Mayor W. E. Strimback welcomed the bankers of Group Eleven to Keokuk. William Logan, president of the State Central Savings gave the address of welcome on behalf of the bankers. On behalf of Group Eleven, J. S. McKemey responded.

Theodore Craig, county attorney of Lee county, spoke on "The Postal Savings Bank." The luncheon was served at Hotel Keokuk at 2 o'clock. Dean A. C. Piersel of Iowa Wesleyan University at Mount Pleasant gave the main address of the meeting. "Patriotism" was his subject. The bankers of Group Eleven are jovial, pleasant and entertaining and enjoyed the social side of the meeting immensely. These two groups have set a splendid example for the other bankers of the state to follow later on.

Group Six to Meet in March

S. M. Leach of Adel, chairman of Group Six, was in Des Moines last week conferring with Des Moines bankers relative to the coming group meeting which will be held in Des Moines probably in March. Chairman Leach anticipates a most successful meeting. Last year, George E. Roberts of Chicago made the chief address at the meeting. The program this year will be kept up to the same standard.

Group Three News

Chairman Karl Johnson, of Osage, at the head of Group Three has written to C. H. McNider of Mason City, relative to the coming meeting of the bankers of his section of the state. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Iowa legislature. B. H. Quackenbush, secretary of Group Three has removed to the west from Rockford where he was with the First National. The absence of a secretary forces more work on Mr. Johnson in connection with the approaching meeting than would otherwise be the case.

Bank Taxation Hearing

A most interesting hearing on bank taxation was held before the committee on banks and banking of the house of representatives of the Iowa legislature on the Jacob's bill, which provides for the taxation of bank stock to individuals. The committee voted to recommend the bill for passage. Representative Jacobs presented figures from Polk county to the committee. He declared that the national banks of Des Moines with a total assessed valuation of $1,883,828 have $1,611,422 exempted either because offset by debts or by government bonds. Mr. Jacobs thinks his bill will result in getting around the exemption of government bond taxation.

Four More Bank Examiners

Frank E. Roberts, chief clerk of the Iowa banking department appeared before the committee and asked that a bill be drafted providing for four more bank examiners, fixing penalties for failure by banks to make reports to the state and requiring a uniform month in the year for meetings of directors. His projected bill is a substitute for the Hunter bill, which increased the number of bank examiners for state banks to twelve. The committee did not indicate to Mr. Roberts that the bill will be drafted or acted favorably upon if it is drawn. The committee did however favor the Schulte bill, which permits Iowa savings banks to invest in real estate in other states than Iowa although no vote was taken as to whether it shall be reported for passage.

Insurance Committee Recommendation

The house insurance committee recommended for passage the bill by Representative E. R. Moore, a Cedar Rapids banker, compelling bonding, surety and similar companies doing business in Iowa to deposit a guaranty fund with the state auditor before transacting business in Iowa. The bill originally provided that this amount should be $50,000, but Mr. Moore cut it down to $25,000 and in that form it was recommended for passage. Senator Savage, a well known banker at Adair, put in a taxation bill. He asks that five men be named by the governor this coming summer. They are to make an investigation of tax laws and report back to the coming session in 1911. He asks for $12,000 appropriation. Senator Savage thinks the time is coming when moneys and credits will not be taxed at all in Iowa. Outside of this bill, the taxation business has been light in the Iowa legislature except for a couple of very lively meetings before the ways and means committee on the Saunders bill to provide a terminal tax for Iowa railroads upon which no action has been taken.

The "Merry Widow" Bill

Considerable discussion arose in the senate over the Gilliland inheritance tax bill, which has come to be known as the "merry widow" bill, because it exempts widows from paying tax on inheritance although everybody else has to pay a tax graduated from 1 per cent on the second $10,000, to 5 per cent on all over the sixth $10,000. The bill passed the senate.

Bank Deposit Guaranty Bills

Bankers who are opposing the various bank deposit guaranty bills before the assembly, have been doing a little investigating on the subject of bank failures in Iowa. In six years, there have been thirteen of them, of banks organized under the Iowa laws. The aggregate of the deposits was $2,000,000, and the banks paid back about 72 per cent. It would thus be for the other 28 per cent that the guaranty would have to stand or in other words there would be about $90,000 per year that the banks in Iowa would be asked to make good, providing there is anything in precedent. Of course the friends of the bills claim that with the deposits guaranteed there would be fewer failures. However there is little likelihood of any such legislation at this session. About as far as most of the members will go is to say they believe that if anything along that line is done it should be toward authorization of a company, that will at least at first, permit of voluntary membership.

Dubuque National Banks

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Dubuque at the close of business on February 5th, shows an average reserve fund, held at 25 per cent as against 23.95 on November 27th. Loans and discounts increased from $2,065,164 to $2,078,056; gold coin from $118,162 to $148,145; lawful money reserve from $309,472 to $355,269; individual deposits from $2,011,596 to $2,202,882.

Cedar Rapids National Banks

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Cedar Rapids shows the average reserve at 21.42 per cent as against 19.76 per cent on November 27th; loans and discounts increased from $4,793,500 to $5,679,040; gold coin from $113,670 to $122,230; lawful money reserve from $448,305 to $665,344; individual deposits from $2,168,070 to $2,272,218.

Building Nearing Completion

The handsome new building of the Des Moines National is nearing completion. It is of white terra cotta, single story in height with massive columns and it is attracting great attention from the fact that it is unique among Iowa banks. The biggest bank vaults in the state have been contracted for. The entire basement is to be furnished with safety deposit vaults and safes.

Banking Notes

The board of directors of the Century Savings, Des Moines, has elected D. A. Byers cashier of that institution to succeed H. M. Whinery, resigned. Mr. Byers has been assistant cashier and his advancement has been expected since Mr. Whinery resigned some six weeks ago. B. B. Vorse is assistant cashier.

Mrs. Homer Miller, wife of President Miller of the Iowa National is reported as improving nicely in the South where she was taken by her husband while seriously ill. Mr. Miller expects to return to Des Moines this week.

Announcement has been made from Denison, the home of former Secretary of the Treasury, Leslie M. Shaw, that Mr. Shaw will remove from Iowa and will make his future home at Philadelphia, where he will head a trust company.

T. L. White for two years cashier of the New London National at New London has resigned that position.

The Delhi Savings at Delhi has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000.

The Farmers Savings at Templeton has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $10,000. The president is A. Stephenson; vice-president, Peter Nau; cashier, M. J. Daeges; directors: Henry Langel, Henry Stevens, F. X. Kasparbauer.

Frank W. Davis of Keokuk, has been elected cashier to succeed the late A. J. Mathias, in the Keokuk Savings. Mr. Davis has been vice-president.

The fourth-class postmasters of the territory around Des Moines, held a convention at which resolutions favorable to the establishment of postal savings banks were adopted. They believe that postal savings banks would be of great benefit in the rural communities such as they represent.

J. S. Peterson, assistant cashier of the Ringsted State, while in company with two companions on a hand car upon which they were going to a dance, was seriously injured when a freight train struck the car. One of the trio was instantly killed, but Peterson escaped with a broken arm and elbow besides many bruises.

Des Moines bank clearings for the week ending February 20th show a gain over the corresponding week last year of $1,541,408.06, the largest gain noted this year. The total clearings for the week were $3,531,703.38.

Iowa bankers are watching with much interest the venture of Weiser Brothers of Fargo and Decorah, Iowa, who are associated with Robert Jones in the consolidation of the Oakland National and Drexel State in Chicago.

Massachusetts Savings Banks

In no year since 1879 have the savings banks of Massachusetts shown so small an increase in deposits as during the year ended October 31, 1908, according to the annual report of Bank Commissioner Pierre Jay, made public this week. The increase in deposits in 1908 was $2,579,000, as compared with $12,859,000 in 1907, while the average increase for the preceding ten years was $24,086,000.

The most striking changes in investments by savings banks have been an increase of $12,714,000 in real estate loans and a decrease of $15,651,000 in loans on personal security.

The commissioner in his report expressed the opinion that many banks this year would have to reduce their dividends.

The commissioner suggests minor changes in the banking laws.

"The Death of Lincoln"

The centennial of Lincoln's birthday so universally observed, served to bring out a score or more of volumes bearing upon the subject. Chief of these and the best is "The Death of Lincoln" by Clara E. Laughlin. The publishers are Doubleday, Page & Co., New York, the price $1.50. There is a wealth of detail and illustrations are abundant. The curious wood cuts of the day are reproduced, even to the prison scene showing the former conspirators of Booth swinging by the neck. The work is one of careful research and makes much of both his motives and the plot. The history of the times is accurate and no one volume gives half so much of value.

Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Springdale, Wash., has these officers for the year: C. W. Winter, president; T. A. Winter, vice-president; C. L. Baker, cashier. The bank has completed a brick building 30 by 40 feet.

Bank Notes of Small Value In the Republic of Colombia

Down in the Republic of Colombia, in South America, there is a sort of comic opera paper money. All told there is in circulation about a billion dollars worth of it, which is pretty good for a country whose population is 5,000,000, especially when it is remembered that many of these folks never saw a cent's worth of the money.

A sign in the streets reads: "Cerveza, $5 un Vasito." The hesitating tourist reads it out: "Beer, $5 a glass." Then he wonders what sort of enormously wealthy country he has struck for his misfortunes and begins to believe that the old tales of the Spanish days didn't exaggerate in the least.

Unless the little word "oro," meaning gold, follows any statement about money, the tourist should divide by 100. Five dollars without this qualification means 5 cents. Cabs at $100 or $120 an hour means civilized rates of $1 to $1.20.

In the billiard parlor paying $50 an hour isn't extravagant as it seems when it is divided by 100. Also, reducing the sum total of paper money to its value in gold it comes to $10,000,000, which is more in keeping with the size of the country.

It all began some years ago when Colombia was solvent. Then the money was worth what the face value declared it to be. When the first of a long series of revolutions of recent times came on the government ran shy of money in the treasury.

A report to that effect by the treasurer got the reply: "Print some more." It is like the shares of a fake gold mining concern. There are bound to be plenty as long as the printing presses hold out. They kept on printing the money until eventually there was so much that the value fell to about 200 to 1. That is if a man had a bank note of 100 pesos it was worth just 50 cents in real money.

Even now the same fatal facility in printing money exists, but the present government has set to work to make the money worth more nearly what it calls for. Some day it may return to its face value.

The Colombians have no confidence in their own paper. They avoid taking it in exchange for gold, if possible. A draft on England, or the United States, payable in gold, circulates practically as real money.

It changes from one hand to another with indorsements multiplying, until finally it is necessary to add an extra slip of paper to carry the surplus of names. The owner doesn't want to cash it in for the paper money, because the exchange varies so from day to day that he may lose money by changing.

In Colombia the morning greeting of merchants isn't "How are you?" but "How is exchange?" Some days a gold dollar is worth 100 pesos; other days it may be up to 105. Then, again, it may fall under 100, but it hasn't done that recently.

An English mining company recently wanted to get a draft for £6,000 cashed. That meant $30,000 gold or $3,000,000 paper money. The draft was presented at the Banco Central.

The bank had to do some tall scratching to get together this sum. The mining company got a request not long after that to be good enough thereafter to give about a month's notice when it wanted any such sum of money. One of the men in the company said he had an idea that another such request would mean that the government would have to cable to England, where the money is printed now, to have the printers run off a lot of the stuff. The company had to have the native money to pay off its helpers; otherwise it would have been very loath to let so much gold go.

It is a country where counterfeiting would naturally be supposed to be one of the lost arts. When the government made its own money, instead of having it printed abroad, whatever counterfeits there were were so much better made than the government money that they passed current very readily. Every one recognized them as counterfeits, but few persons cared, they were much better engraved than the government money.

There is a story told about a zealous customs officer who one day detected a large quantity of counterfeit money being brought in by a man who came from Germany. He seized the lot and wired to Bogota to the central government to know what he should do. He was rather surprised to get back a rush answer that he should let the money come in. The government was willing to welcome a lot of well made money without paying for it.

It takes a lot of the money to make a real sum. Travelers have to carry a big pocketful. For instance a man going by steamer from Puerto Colombia to Santa Marta was standing at the rail on a windy day when his coattails blew aside. In a hip pocket was seen what is called a roll big enough to choke a cow. He had a lot of 25 peso bills laid out flat and tied with a cord about the middle.

"Gee, what a cinch for a pickpocket," said a New Yorker who saw the exhibition of wealth.

"If a man bothered to steal that truck he'd be prosecuted for insanity," said a not too loyal Colombian.

It makes an amusing sight to see one of the small Colombian children, without a stitch of clothing on, hurrying out of a house to a store with a bill of large denomination, possibly 100 pesos, clutched in a chocolate colored hand.

"It doesn't look safe to send a child out with so much money," said a kindly disposed American woman, catching a sight of the "100" on the note. Then she got some information and added: "Well, even a dollar is a lot of money to let a child have."

In an office one day a man pointed to his valise standing open on the table.

"Look there," he said, "See what trust I have in my servants. It isn't every man who would dare go away and leave $2,500 lying in a bag that's open."

The listener gasped and went to look in the bag. Sure enough there was the equivalent of $25 worth of real money, as the foreigner soon gets to call anything that isn't paper.

Even in the matter of small coins the Colombians keep up the deception. There is a piece made of lead chiefly, which is called "cocobola" money down there. This is marked "Five Pesos, p m." The "p m" means "papel moneda" and is to indicate that the supposed $5 is really worth 5 cents. If they marked the coin to read 5 cents gold it would be the right value. California with the "no coin smaller than a nickel" boast is outdone down in Colombia, where the peso is the smallest.

The entire South American continent is accustomed to eccentricities in the management of its financial concerns. For instance, it is told of Uruguay that they have a very neat little device in discounting.

As almost everyone knows, the gold dollar of the United States is not 100 per cent gold. It couldn't very well be and still be a circulating medium. The republic of Uruguay profited by that fact, which also is the case in all countries where there is a gold standard.

The gold dollar of Uruguay is a supposititious coin of such fineness that it is actually 100 per cent gold. It does not circulate, except in the mind of the treasurer of the country. Consequently every gold coin of every country is discounted in Uruguay against that wonderful imaginary piece of money.

Peru and some of the others have from time to time repudiated parts of their currency. Perhaps that is what Colombia yet may do.

"As matters stand," one resident said, "the money isn't pretty enough for wall-paper and it isn't of much use for anything else."

There is some remarkable gold money in circulation in Colombia. There are coins of Spanish kings dating back to the seventeenth century. These are doubloons, which pass current at the value of $16. French and other gold also is to be found in Colombia. There is also a small amount of gold money of the republic in circulation. That is genuine and is worth what it purports to be. Most of the persons who get a chance at one of these coins are apt to bury it.
